of the law) which one previously destroyed (i.e., renounced). Paul declares that I make myself a transgressor if he again puts himself under the law which he formerly abandoned. How? The law awakens and incites sin in a man (Rom. 7:7–11). So to obligate oneself again to the law is to put oneself under that legal system which awakens sin. Christ removes the law, thus delivering him from sin.

2:19. For substantiates the declaration that it is the law, not Christ, which promotes sin. To be dead to the law is to be free from the obligation to obey it. This freedom came through the law. The law's intention, by awakening and revealing man's sin, was to lead him to Christ, who alone could properly deal with his sin (3:19–25). The purpose of being freed from the law is that the Christian might live unto [for] God. For the whole of his earthly Christian life the believer is to live for God's sake, obeying, serving, and glorifying Him.

2:20. To be crucified with Christ means the believer has been freed from the law (v. 19), and from the ruling power of sin that was aroused by the law. Nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me is interpreted, "And I no longer live, but Christ lives in me." Since the believer has been freed from the law and sin, the old sinful life no longer asserts itself as formerly. Instead, "Christ liveth in me;" that is, Jesus cultivates within the believer (Paul) His own desires, virtues, character, and power, thus morally transforming him and working through him in others. Paul lives his current Christian life by the faith of [in] the Son of God, that is, by depending on Him for strength and all necessities.

2:21. Frustrate (nullify): Paul is pointing out that one would deny the grace of God by accepting Christ's atonement and then viewing His atonement as having little value, reverting back to the law in order to secure salvation. For gives the reason Paul does not attempt to nullify God's grace. It is not owing to righteousness [i.e., salvation] by the law. If that were the case, then Christ died needlessly. These words bring Paul's strong rebuke (vv. 14–21) of his fellow apostle to a close. Peter's return to the law, having believed in Jesus, was like an admission that Christ's sacrifice was inadequate; his hypocrisy diluted God's grace by attempting to add his works to it. But Peter's evident silence in receiving Paul's reproof shows that he acknowledged Paul's charge as correct. Peter, then, recognized Paul's gospel to be genuine.

3:1—4:31. In the first two chapters Paul has argued that his gospel is the true one. Now the question is: "What is Paul's gospel?" So in chapters 3 and 4 the apostle defines his gospel. In short, it is that justification (salvation) comes as the result of one's faith in Christ, not as a result of trying to obey the law. Paul argues this point by appealing to the Galatians' own experience (3:1–5), to Old Testament Scripture (3:6–14), to the Abrahamic covenant (3:15–18), to the purpose of the law (3:19–29), to the law's temporary nature (4:1–11), and to allegory (4:21–31).

3:1. Foolish does not denote natural stupidity, but failure to use moral and spiritual discernment. Bewitched means to cast an evil spell on someone; Paul is thus saying that the only way to account for their theological deception is by malicious magic. The Greek word rendered hath been evidently set forth means to show forth as on a placard (billboard). The message of salvation had been set forth before the Galatians' eyes (spiritual understanding) as on a billboard: they had clearly understood the gospel, yet now were confused about it.

3:2. Paul appeals to the Galatians' own spiritual experience to argue salvation by faith. Note that here the apostle refers to salvation by the reception of the Spirit. Why? Because the moment one is converted, he receives the Holy Spirit. By a question, Paul states that they received the Spirit not by the works of the law (meritorious or good works), but by the hearing of faith (as a result of their faith).

3:3. That which they have begun in [by] the Spirit is the Christian life. To be made perfect by the flesh is to bring the Christian life to successful completion by human achievement and one's religious accomplishments. Paul's rhetorical question denies the possibility; one begins and ends his Christian career through the work of God's Spirit.

3:4. This verse could be translated, "Have you experienced so many wonderful things without effect? If so, then it really would be to no avail." The "wonderful things" experienced are an understanding of the gospel (v. 1), reception of the Spirit (v. 2), and seeing miracles performed in their midst (v. 5). Should they try to earn salvation by good works, then all these "wonderful things" they have experienced would have had no positive influence on them.

3:5. Ministereth (or, supplies): God gives the Spirit to new converts and worketh miracles among the readers not by [because of] the works of the law, but by [as a result of] the hearing of faith.

6 Even as ^aAbraham believed God, and it was accounted to him for righteousness.

7 Know ye therefore that ^athey which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham.

8 And ^athe scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the ^hheathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, ^bIn thee shall all nations be blessed.

9 So then they which be of faith are blessed with ^hfaithful Abraham.

10 For as many as are of the works of the law are under the curse: for it is written, Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them.

11 But that no man is ^hjustified by the law in the sight of God, it is evident: for, ^aThe just shall live by faith.

the curse of the law, ^hbeing made a curse for us: for it is written, ^bCursed is every one that hangeth on a tree:

14 ^aThat the blessing of Abraham might come on the ^bGentiles ^hthrough Jesus Christ; that we might receive ^cthe promise of the Spirit through faith.

The Covenant Confirmed in Christ

15 Brethren, I speak after the manner of men; ^aThough it be but a man's covenant, yet if it be confirmed, no man disannulleth, or addeth thereto.

16 Now ^ato Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of ^bone, And to thy seed, which is ^cChrist.

17 And this I say, that the covenant, that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, ^awhich was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, ^bthat it should make the promise of none effect.

18 For if ^athe inheritance be of the law, ^b*it is* no more of promise: but God gave it to Abraham by promise.

3:6. Even as (or, “just as”): These two words draw a similarity between the Galatians and Abraham: they received the Spirit by faith (3:2, 5) “just as” Abraham received righteousness. This verse quotes Genesis 15:6: When Abraham believed God, his faith was accounted [credited, reckoned] to him for [as] righteousness. Righteousness is the moral condition in which one ought to be, hence, that state acceptable to God.

3:7. The verse may be read: “Therefore recognize that those who believe, these only, are Abraham’s sons.”

3:8. Preached before the gospel is better said, “announced good news beforehand.” Paul equates justify with being blessed.

3:9. This verse might be, “So then they who believe are blessed along with believing Abraham”—that is, they are justified.

3:10. As many as are of the works of the law refers to all who rely upon obedience to the Mosaic Law as the means of winning divine approval (salvation). To be under the curse is to be subject to God’s wrath and condemnation. Continueth is explained by to do, which means “to obey.” The recipient of divine wrath is every one who, believing salvation can be obtained by meritorious works, fails to obey the law perfectly. Complete obedience to the law is impossible for sinful man (Acts 15:10; James 2:10). All, then, who attempt to secure salvation by this route are doomed.

3:11. The last part of this verse means, “He who is just because of his faith shall live,” that is, forever.

3:12. This verse declares that the law is a matter of performance, not of faith; it is a principle of doing, not believing.

3:13. The curse of the law, from which Christ hath redeemed [delivered] us, is that of verse 10, incurred because of incomplete obedience to the law. Being made a curse for us means “by becoming accursed for us.”

3:14. The word that appears twice in this verse, identifying two reasons “Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law” (v. 13): (1) that Gentiles might receive the blessing of Abraham (i.e., justification as in vv. 8, 9); (2) that believers might receive ... the Spirit (i.e., the indwelling of the Holy Spirit). This implies that when one is justified, he is at the same time divinely granted the Holy Spirit.

3:15. Confirmed (ratified, validated): The stipulations of a will, once ratified, cannot later be invalidated or added to.

3:17. The verse might be read as follows: “I say this: the law, which appeared 430 years later, cannot void the covenant earlier ratified by God, so as to make the promise ineffective.” Paul’s point is this: If a human will, once confirmed, cannot be altered (v. 15), how much less will the divine covenant be changed 430 years after its ratification by God. The Abrahamic covenant promised justification by faith. In the 430 years between the giving of this covenant and the law’s appearance, God justified man by faith. When the law appeared, it did not—indeed, it could not—void this principle of justification by faith. Had it done so, the law would have made God’s promise of no effect.

3:18. The first half of this verse is only hypothetical. Were the inheritance (salvation) a result of obeying the law, then it would not be the result of believing God’s promise. The verse’s latter half rejects the hypothesis of the first half: Abraham was divinely given justification because of his faith in God’s “promise.”

19 ¹Wherefore then serveth the law? ^aIt was added because of transgressions, till the ^bseed should come to whom the promise was made; and it was ^cordained by angels in the hand ^dof a mediator.

20 Now a mediator ¹is not a mediator of one, ^abut God is one.

21 Is the law then against the promises of God? ¹God forbid: for if there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law.

22 But the scripture hath ¹concluded ^aall under sin, ^bthat the promise be given to them that believe.

23 But before faith came, we were ¹kept under the law, ²shut up unto the faith which should afterwards be revealed.

24 Wherefore ^athe law was our ¹schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, ^bthat we might be ²justified by faith.

25 But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a ¹schoolmaster.

3:19. Since the law can neither save (vv. 10–14) nor can it annul the Abrahamic covenant (vv. 15–18), what purpose did it serve? It was added [alongside the covenant] because of transgressions, that is, to reveal the hideous character of man's sin. Transgression was subsequent, not prior to, the law. The law laid down the divine standard, and when man overstepped it, he became guilty of transgression. The inferiority of the law to the Abrahamic covenant is seen in three ways. (1) The law "was added" after the covenant and thus was subordinate to it. (2) The law was temporary, being in effect only till the seed [Jesus] should come. (3) Unlike the covenant God gave directly to Abraham, the law was ordained (handed down) indirectly by God through angels to its mediator, Moses (cf. Acts 7:53).

3:21. The many differences between law and covenant (promises) might seem to imply that the two are opposed to one another. This is not the case. Assuming for the moment that righteousness (salvation) could come by meritorious works, then law and promise would be in competition. But as it is, they are complementary.

3:22–24. In antiquity the schoolmaster was a family slave who led a boy to and from school, overseeing his conduct. In like manner, the law pointed out our sin and led us to Christ, who alone can put away sin.

3:25. After one's conversion to Christ, he is no longer under the curse of the law, as it has fulfilled its divinely intended purpose.

3:26. For corroborates the assertion of the Christian's no longer being under law. The reason is ye are all the children [or, sons] of God. The Greek word rendered "children" is huioi, which means full-grown, adult sons. As the minor is no longer under his schoolmaster upon reaching adulthood, so one is no longer under the condemnation of the law upon believing in Christ and becoming God's son.

3:27. For confirms the Galatians' place as the sons of God by faith in Christ Jesus. As many of you means "all of you." Baptized into Christ means "brought into an intimate relation with Christ." As such they have put on Christ. To "put on someone" is an ancient idiom for assuming the standing or position of another person. To "put on Christ," therefore, means to assume (adopt) His standing before God. Since Jesus is God's Son, the Galatians are God's sons, thus confirming verse 26. This verse may be paraphrased, "For all of you who have been brought into an intimate relationship with Christ have assumed His own standing before God, namely, His Sonship."

3:28. This expresses the logical outcome of the Galatians' having "put on Christ" (v. 27) and, hence, being "the sons of God" (v. 26). God views them all the same (ye are all one)—as His sons, there being no ethnic (Jew, Greek), social (bond, free), or sexual (male, female) distinctions.

4:1–7. Paul uses the Roman practice of tutela im-puberis, "guardianship for a minor," to illustrate man's temporary subjection to the law. A Roman father appointed guardians to manage his child's affairs until 25 years of age, at which time the heir came of age. Similarly, man's earlier period of spiritual immaturity under the law is contrasted with the Christian's new freedom of adult sonship in Christ.

4:2. Tutors oversee the minor's person, while governors oversee his possessions.

4:3. We ... were in bondage under means "we ... were subject to." The elements of the world refers to elementary religious teachings and practices. For the Jew it was the law. For the Gentile it was the dren, ^awere in bondage under the elements of the world:

4 But ^awhen the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, ^bmade ^cof a woman, ^dmade ¹under the law,

5 ^aTo redeem them that were under the law, ^bthat we might receive the adoption of sons.

6 And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth ^athe Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, ¹Abba, Father.

7 Wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son; ^aand if a son, then an heir of God through Christ.

truths of the law written in his heart (Rom. 2:14, 15). Before Christ man was, as it were, spiritually immature. Therefore, he was subject to the rudimentary teaching of the law.

4:4. The fulness of the time corresponds to “the time appointed of [by] the father” in 4:2. Made of a woman (or, “born of a woman”): This stresses Jesus’ humiliation at leaving His preexistent glory and becoming man; without having done so He could not have died for our sins. Made under the law (or, “born subject to the law”): He was born a Jew under the law in order to free those under the curse of the law (4:5).

4:5. The Greek word huiotēs would have denoted sonship by birth. But the word rendered adoption of sons is huiothesia, which means sonship conferred. Through Christ believers have become God’s sons by adoption.

4:6. Because ye are sons: Every child of God was divinely given the Holy Spirit the moment he was adopted by God. Abba is an Aramaic domestic term by which the father was called in the affectionate intimacy of the family. It corresponds to our “daddy” or “papa.” The Spirit gives us an awareness that God is our Father.

4:7. Thou art no more a servant is Paul’s way of concluding that the believer is no longer under law. He is instead a son, that is, a full-grown adult son who does not need the law’s elementary instruction and guidance.

4:8. Howbeit then means “although at an earlier time” and refers to the Galatians’ pre-Christian, pagan past. They did service to, or served, false gods.

4:9. But now refers to the recipients’ Christian present. The question raised by how contains a prohibition, by which Paul says, in effect, “Don’t you dare turn again to the weak and beggarly elements!” (i.e., the law). As unbelievers the Gentile Galatians were formerly under law in that its truths were written in their consciences (Rom. 2:14, 15). The law (elements) is described as weak because it cannot save, and it is depicted as beggarly (poor) because, as a system, it is inferior to the New Covenant.

4:10. The Galatians were beginning to observe that part of the law least repugnant to them—the calendar: days (sabbath, fast, and feast days), months (new moons or feast days beginning with each month); times (Passover, Pentecost, and the Feast of Tabernacles); and years (sabbatical years, and the Year of Jubilee).

4:11. In vain means “without saving result.” Should the Galatians completely embrace the law and the Judaizers’ message of salvation by works, it would show their profession of faith in Paul’s gospel to have been merely outward and not real.

4:12. Be as I am is an appeal to the readers to be free from the law as Paul is. I am as ye are signifies that Paul, though a Jew, regards himself as free from the law’s bondage in the same way that the non-Jewish Galatians are. Ye have not injured me means Paul’s severe language of verses 8–11 is not due to their offending him. To the apostle this remark serves as a motivating factor for the Galatians: “Since you have not previously injured me, do not do so now by refusing my request of verse 9.”

4:13. Through infirmity of the flesh means “because of bodily illness.” Evidently physical sickness led to Paul’s earlier ministry among the Galatians. Perhaps he had not planned to evangelize Galatia, but illness altered his itinerary, thus leading him there.

4:14. In contrast to any supposed Galatian mistreatment of Paul (v. 12), this verse reveals how well they treated him. My temptation which was in my flesh might be paraphrased, “that which tried you in my body.” Paul’s physical ailment (v. 13) may have been repulsive to the Galatians who viewed it. Nevertheless they despised not, nor rejected him because of this illness, but accepted him as an angel of God. Paul’s statement implies the question: “Having treated me so well when physically offensive, will you now mistreat me by embracing a false gospel?”

15 Where is then the blessedness¹ ye spake of? for I bear you² record, that, if it had been possible, ye would have plucked out your own eyes, and have given them to me.

23 But he who was of the bondwoman ^awas born¹ after the flesh; ^bbut he of the freewoman was by promise.

24 Which things are¹ an allegory: for these are the two covenants; the one from the mount ^aSinai, which² gendereth to bondage, which is Agar.

25 For this Agar is mount Sinai in Arabia, and ¹answereth to Jerusalem which now is, and is in bondage with her children.

26 But ^aJerusalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all.

27 For it is written, ^aRejoice, thou barren that bearest not; break forth and ¹cry, thou that ²travaillest not: for the desolate hath many more

4:15. Blessedness means here “gratefulness.” It indicates that the Galatians considered themselves fortunate for having been under Paul’s earlier ministry. They were so grateful that they would have given him their own eyes had it been possible. The apostle’s question implies that the Galatians, vacillating between grace and law, may no longer be grateful for his previous ministry.

4:16. This verse contrasts the Galatians’ previous and current attitudes toward Paul. They used to esteem him highly (vv. 14, 15); but now, as the Judaizers turn the readers’ affection from Paul, they are beginning to regard him as an opponent because he speaks the truth of the gospel, pointing out their erroneous ways.

4:17. Zealously affect you (or, “seek your favor”): The Judaizers are wooing the Galatians, but not well, that is, with improper intentions. The heretics want to exclude or cut them off from Paul, so that the Galatians will then court the Judaizers’ favor.

4:18. It is good to be sought after (wooed, courted) when those doing the courting do so with pure motives. Paul seeks to prevent the readers from thinking that his remark in verse 17 means he wants to monopolize them: “I do not wish to have you all to myself,” to paraphrase the apostle. “I am glad others are fond of you, provided it is with honorable motives.” This is not the case with the Judaizers.

4:19. My little children reveals that Paul’s concern for them (v. 18) is like that of a parent for his children. I travail in birth is the Greek word ōdinō used of a woman suffering labor pains. It discloses the anxious concern, hard work, and pain experienced on his part for his converts. This labor lasts until Christ be formed in you, that is, until Christ’s life, character, and virtues are fully cultivated in their lives. Therefore, Paul is not speaking of their conversion but of their growth as Christians. ōdinō denotes not merely the anguish and exertion of giving birth, for formation of the embryo precedes labor pains. Rather, a mother’s concern and labor extend from birth until her child reaches adulthood. So it is with Paul in his pastoral concern for the Galatians. But again indicates they failed to reach spiritual maturity following conversion, owing to this false gospel. So the writer is “again” laboring to bring them to full growth.

4:20. I stand in doubt of you is another way of saying, “I am perplexed [disturbed] about you.”

4:22. The one [Ishmael] by a bondmaid [slave woman, in this case, Agar], the other [Isaac] by a freewoman (Sarah, cf. Gen. 16:15; 21:2).

4:23. Born after the flesh: Ishmael was born in the ordinary manner—natural physical generation. But Isaac’s birth was by promise, in other words, as the result of divine promise. Contrary to nature, God enabled his parents to conceive in old age.

4:24. An allegory goes beyond certain surface parts of a historical account and draws out deeper meanings seemingly not inherent in that account. Paul is saying: “These things lend themselves to the following figurative explanation.” Paul makes Agar represent the Mosaic covenant (i.e., the law) which gendereth to bondage (or, “which begets children for slavery”). As Agar gave birth to Ishmael, sharing her same social status of slavery, so the law puts those subject to it in spiritual bondage.

4:25. For further explains the link between Agar and Sinai. Agar is mount Sinai means, “Agar stands for Mount Sinai.” Agar answereth [corresponds] to the then current Jerusalem (i.e., Judaism). Paul viewed Agar and Judaism in the same way, for as Agar and her offspring were in social bondage, so Judaism and her adherents were in spiritual slavery to the law.

4:26. Christianity is represented by Jerusalem which is above, that is, the heavenly city. This Christian community is described as being free, that is, not under the law.

28 Now ^awe, brethren, as Isaac was, are ^bthe children of promise.

29 But as then ^ahe that was born ¹after the flesh persecuted him that was born after the Spirit, ^beven so it is now.

30 Nevertheless what saith ^athe scripture? ^bCast out the bondwoman and her son: for ^cthe son of the bondwoman shall not be heir with the son of the freewoman.

31 So then, brethren, we are not children of the bondwoman, but of the free.

4:27. The barren woman is Christianity; she which hath an husband is Judaism. Initially the latter had many adherents and the former had few. But Christianity hath [will have] many more children (i.e., followers) than Judaism. See Isaiah 54:1.

4:28. Now begins to apply the allegory or figurative manner of explanation. Paul views Christians as children of promise. That is, as Isaac was born in fulfillment of divine promise, so the Galatians' status as God's "children" rests neither on physical descent nor on meritorious works, but on faith in God's "promise."

4:29. This verse refers to Genesis 21:9, where Ishmael mocked Isaac. Even so it is now, says Paul; those seeking salvation by works trouble those seeking divine favor by faith in God's grace (cf. 5:10).

4:30. Paul continues applying the allegory by citing Genesis 21:10–12, where Abraham was advised to send Agar and Ishmael away from Sarah and Isaac. The Galatians are to excommunicate the Judaizers from their ranks. Why? Legal bondage (justification by works) and spiritual freedom (justification by faith) cannot coexist.

5:1. The verse could be rendered: "For freedom Christ freed us. Therefore stand fast and do not again be subject to a yoke of bondage." The "freedom" in view is freedom from the law, here called "a yoke of bondage." Paul wants the Galatians to "stand fast," that is, retain their spiritual freedom.

5:2. If ye be circumcised: Circumcision was the external ritual symbolizing acceptance of the law (v. 3). In such a case, one depended on legal works rather than on God's grace as the means of salvation. Christ, then, shall profit you nothing.

5:4. This verse could be translated: "You will be severed from Christ, if you try to be justified by law; you will forfeit the favor in God's eyes which Christ won for you." This does not teach the loss of salvation which one earlier possessed. Rather it means that if the readers truly renounce grace through faith alone as the way of salvation, if they depend on legalism to secure divine favor, then they show that they never really knew God's grace in the first place.

5:5. Through the Spirit means that by the Holy Spirit's help, which is obtained by faith, believers wait for the hope of righteousness, that is, live the Christian life awaiting the consummation of their salvation.

5:6. For justifies the importance given faith in verse 5. In Christianity one does not profit spiritually either by being circumcised or uncircumcised. Faith which worketh by love means "faith that is produced by love." Faith is man's response to God who loves him, and this divine love that produces human faith results in his justification.

5:7. Ye did run well shows that the Galatians were making good progress spiritually. But the Judaizers did hinder them with a false gospel, so that now the readers do not obey the truth.

5:8. This persuasion refers to the pressure tactics the heretics used to persuade the Galatians to embrace legalism.

5:9. A little leaven [false doctrine] leaveneth [permeates, corrupts] the whole lump (church).

5:10. Paul believes that the Galatians will retain the true gospel and not be completely persuaded by the heretics.

5:11. Paul is evidently refuting the accusation that he yet (still) preaches a gospel of circumcision, as formerly in Judaism. But, he counters, the very fact that I do yet suffer persecution proves that is not the case; for Judaizers would commend, not persecute, him for preaching their gospel.

The Fruit of the Spirit

5:20 ¹ sorcery ² contentions ³ jealousies ⁴ selfish ambitions ⁵ dissensions
 5:21 ^a 1 Cor. 6:9, 10
 5:22 ^a [John 15:2]

5:12. The verse may mean, “I wish those troubling you would have themselves castrated.”

5:13. Having shown freedom from the law to be proper protection against legalism (vv. 1–12), Paul now demonstrates it to be a proper antidote against unrestrained license to sin (vv. 13–26). Believers are not to abuse their liberty from the law for an occasion [opportunity] to the flesh (sinful nature). That is, don’t think freedom from the law means you can indulge in sin; it means instead that you are free to serve God by serving one another.

5:14. Fulfilled means “obeyed.” In one word means, “one statement.”

5:16. Walk in the Spirit (i.e., “live by the Spirit”): Christians are to live with the Spirit’s help. How does one “live by the Spirit”? (1) The Christian must believe that the Spirit is with him, having been sent by God into his heart (4:6). (2) In every spiritual confrontation the believer must yield to the Spirit, that is, submit his own desires to those of the Spirit. (3) One must depend on the Spirit for help, enabling him to live a God-pleasing life (v. 5). (4) The believer should anticipate the effects of the Spirit’s help in his daily life. The believer who “lives by the Spirit” will not fulfil [accomplish, carry out] the lust [strong desires] of the flesh (sinful nature).

5:17. One’s sinful human nature (flesh) and the Holy Spirit lusteth against one another, that is, they have desires and yearnings that are contrary to one another. The Christian, then, is a battlefield, having desires to do good and evil. The outcome is that ye cannot do the things that ye would: the flesh seeks to thwart the Spirit who, in turn, attempts to frustrate the flesh’s evil desires.

5:18. Verse 17 may leave the impression of a believer being caught in a hopeless tug-of-war between the flesh and the Spirit. This is not the case. The Christian is led of [by] the Spirit, when yielding to Him, to turn away from the flesh’s evil yearnings, thus putting sin out of his daily life. The verb “led” indicates voluntary submission; the believer decides by whom he will be led—either by his flesh or by the Spirit. The Spirit-led person is not under the law. The Christian does not need the restraints of the law because his moral life is governed by the Spirit.

5:19–23. By contrasting the works of the flesh (vv. 19–21) with the fruit of the Spirit (vv. 22, 23), the believer can know whether he is walking by the Spirit or being controlled by the flesh. Uncleanness is sexual impurity. Lasciviousness is sexual excess.

5:20. Idolatry is not just the worship of a graven image, but putting one’s chief affections on any object or person instead of on God. Witchcraft is sorcery, that is, tampering with the powers of evil. This would include dabbling in the occult. Variance is strife or discord. Emulations means “jealousy.” Strife is selfish ambition. Seditions are dissensions. Heresies are permanent, organized divisions or cliques.

5:21. Revellings means excessive eating, or gluttony, as well as carousing. Do (practice): The person whose life is habitually characterized by the sins and vices of verses 19–21 shall not inherit the kingdom of God, that is, he will not be in heaven because he is not a Christian.

5:22. The word fruit is significant for three reasons. (1) It means the result, product, outcome, or effect produced by the Spirit in the believer’s life. (2) Unlike “the gifts of the Spirit” (plural), only some of which are given to a Christian, each believer is to have all nine virtues composing “the fruit of the Spirit” (singular). (3) As fruit on a tree takes time to grow and mature, so the Spirit does not cultivate these virtues in the believer’s life overnight. Love is the willing, sacrificial giving of oneself for the benefit of another without thought of return. Joy is gladness of heart. Peace is tranquility of mind, freeing one from worry and fear. Long-suffering is patience with others, the opposite of a short temper, a disposition quietly bearing injury. Gentleness is kindness. Goodness is generosity. Faith here is dependability.

5:23. Meekness is gentleness, that is, courtesy and consideration in one's relations with others. Temperance is self-control, that is, the ability to harness and control one's passions and lusts.

5:24. At conversion every believer crucified the flesh, that is, in repentance he turned from and renounced his life of sin and all its wicked passions. This verse, then, implies that the virtues of verses 22, 23, rather than the vices of verses 19-21, should characterize them that are Christ's.

5:25. This verse means "Since we live by the Spirit, let us also follow the Spirit." That is, since the Spirit gave us new life at conversion, we then should stay in step with His leading and promptings throughout life.

6:1. In a fault (or, "by some transgression"): The sin in view is a deliberate overstepping of divine boundaries. Ye which are spiritual refers to those who walk by the Spirit (5:16), in whose life the fruit of the Spirit is found (5:22, 23). The man who is overtaken by willful sin is also a Christian, but he has not been walking by the Spirit. The spiritual brethren are to restore the erring brother. This word is used of mending fishing nets (Matt. 4:21) and of people mending their ways (2 Cor. 13:11). Restore means therefore to bring a person back to his former moral condition. The word was also used in secular Greek for setting broken bones, which has to be done gently. So the church is to restore the lapsed in the spirit of meekness (i.e., gentleness). The grievous and sensitive wounds caused by sin must be handled delicately. Considering thyself: Those restoring the fallen must individually keep constant watch over their own lives. The spiritual man can be morally dragged down as he deals with the sin of his carnal counterpart.

6:2. Contextually, the burdens are the moral faults of verse 1, but can have wider application to other kinds of burdens. The law of Christ is the sum of all of Jesus' teachings and desires; it is Christianity itself.

6:3. For gives a reason to bear the burdens of others (v. 2). When a man [thinks] himself to be morally above reproach, he has no sympathy with the flaws of others. Mutual bearing of others' moral burdens helps a person retain a sober, ethical estimate of himself.

6:4. The self-delusion of verse 3 is caused by an inflated comparison of one's moral life with the known faults of his Christian brother. To prevent this, every man is to prove [examine] his own work (i.e., life, virtues, deeds). Then his rejoicing shall be in himself alone, and not in another: Joy comes not from comparing one's moral strengths with the weaknesses of others, but in realizing that one measures up to God's standard by God's help.

6:5. In justifying "and not in another" of verse 4, for tells why one must not compare himself with others: each believer must shoulder his own burden (i.e., that specific task and responsibility divinely assigned an individual). Instead of comparing one's virtues with the moral blemishes of another, one is to compare himself with his own achievements against the backdrop of the responsibilities given him by God. No contradiction exists between verses 2 and 5. The Greek word for burdens in verse 2 is baros, there meaning moral weakness—a burden too heavy for a person to bear alone. The word for burden in verse 5 is phortion, meaning a personal responsibility that can and should be borne by the individual.

6:6. Communicate (or, share): Christians are to share their material possessions with their teachers. Ministers must of necessity be compensated for the loss of income sustained in fulfilling their pastoral responsibilities.

FRUIT OF THE SPIRIT

5:22, 23. In contrast to the works (plural) of the flesh, which any individual is capable of performing, the fruit (singular) of the Holy Spirit can be produced only by God. Christian character thus results from "Christ living in me" (2:20). For this fruit to develop, all nine aspects of the fruit of the Spirit must mature. Illustration: The character of Christ is the fullest manifestation of this fruit in the New Testament. Though Jesus did not recognize the traditions of men, His enemies were unable to prove any charge against Him. Application: So today, Christians should allow the Holy Spirit to develop this character within them, so they might be blameless before others and not hinder the testimony of Christ. (First Reference, Ex. 35:31; 36:2; Primary Reference, Gal. 5:22, 23; cf. Phil. 1:6.)

6:7. Mocked (outwitted, outfoxed): To disobey God’s commands and then escape divine punishment would be to outwit God, thus making a mockery of Him and His Word. Soweth means “does,” “practices.” Reap could also be said, “be requited,” “recompensed.” Contextually, the Galatians cannot disregard the command to support their Christian instructors (v. 6) and escape divine discipline.

6:8. For expands the principle of verse 7 to wider application. Soweth to his flesh means to conduct oneself by the evil dictates and desires of the sinful nature, thus practicing the deeds of the flesh (5:19–21). Such a person shall ... reap corruption, that is, be requited with eternal destruction. Soweth to the Spirit means to live by His enabling help in accord with the Spirit’s prompting and leading, thus cultivating the fruit of 5:22, 23. Such a person shall ... reap life everlasting, that is, be rewarded with eternal life.

6:9. Since it is only a matter of time before the Christian shall “reap” divine reward (v. 8), then he is not to be weary in well doing.

6:10. Owing to the certainty of being divinely rewarded (vv. 8, 9), believers are urged to seize each opportunity to do good. Contextually, doing good refers to the ministry of restoration (v. 1), bearing one another’s burdens (v. 2), supporting teachers (v. 6), sowing to (living in accord with the leading of) the Spirit (v. 8), and general perseverance (v. 9). Believers are to minister first unto them who are of the household of faith (Christians), and second, to the rest of the world.

6:11. The verse could be rendered: “Note with what large letters I am writing you with my own hand.” Paul takes the pen from his stenographer and records the last paragraph in his own handwriting, both to attest the epistle’s authenticity and to stress the importance of this final paragraph.

6:12. The Judaizers want to make a good outward appearance (make a fair shew in the flesh) by circumcising the readers. The reason is so that they will not suffer persecution caused by the gospel. The gospel was somewhat tolerable for orthodox Jews if accompanied by circumcision and obedience to their law. So Judaizers, wanting to hold to the gospel, can disarm Jewish hostility by preaching grace and law. The legalists have their own interest at heart, not the Galatians’.

6:14. Unlike the Judaizers, who brag about their religious accomplishments, Paul takes pleasure only in Jesus’ atonement and all the spiritual blessings it brings. The world is the world system. Paul has renounced his old life and all its ways, along with its values and religious accomplishments in which he used to boast.

6:15. In God’s sight neither the external circumcision of the flesh nor its omission (uncircumcision) availeth (profits). Only being divinely transformed into a new creature (creation), that is, a morally new and different person, benefits one spiritually.

6:16. As many as walk according to this rule could also be stated, “All who follow this principle” (namely, the principle of the new creation of v. 15). The verse’s final and seems to distinguish between Gentile Christians (as many as walk) and Jewish Christians (the Israel of God).

CANONICITY

6:16. The word canon originally meant “reed” (a measuring rule) and came to signify a standard for determining which books were Scripture. The books placed in Scripture: (1) were considered inspired; (2) gave evidence of containing revelation; (3) gave evidence of apostolicity; and (4) were uniquely used by the Holy Spirit. When the church finally collected the 66 books into a “canon,” it did not make the books become Scripture: the church was only recognizing what God had done. The books were Scripture the moment they were written. Illustration: Not all Christian literature of the first century is included in the canon, only that which is inspired. The church at Ephesus was one of the first to collect the books of the New Testament, and it carefully examined them before endorsement (cf. Rev. 2:2). Application: As Christians read the Scriptures, they should walk according to their rule. (First Reference, Ex. 19:5; Primary Reference, Gal. 6:16; cf. Ps. 119:18.)

16 And as many as walk according to this rule, peace be on them, and mercy, and upon the Israel of God.

17 From henceforth let no man trouble me: for I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus.

18 Brethren, the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit. Amen.

6:17. Unlike the Judaizers who make much ado about the now irrelevant, insignificant mark of circumcision, Paul bears bodily marks which do mean something. They are the wounds and injuries incurred in serving God, the results of having willingly accepted the “persecution for the cross,” which the legalists seek to avoid (v. 12).

EPHESIANS

Authorship. Though Pauline authorship has been denied by some recent critics, the denial is unfounded. Not only does the epistle claim to have come from Paul's pen (1:1; 3:1) and offer a description of its author as a prisoner (3:1), but the apostle's "fingerprints" are all over the letter. It contains in no small measure his vocabulary, language, style, grammar, and theology. If the apostle did not write Ephesians, then its author was more Pauline than Paul himself!

Destination. The epistle may have been an "encyclical" or circular letter, that is, it was not sent just to one church, but circulated among all the churches of Asia Minor. This conjecture is generally based on four arguments: (1) In some of the oldest Greek manuscripts the words "at Ephesus" of 1:1 are omitted. Perhaps a space was originally left vacant so each church, upon reading the epistle in its public worship services, could fill in its own geographical locale. (2) There are no personal references as would be expected if sent to only one church. (3) In 3:2 the language implies that not all the readers knew its writer personally, but at least had "heard" of him. (4) The epistle addresses itself to no specific problem such as a particular church might have; it speaks only of general problems that believers everywhere have in common.

Recipients. In view of the above, they were presumably the Christians in the various churches of Asia Minor. As Ephesus was the major city in Asia Minor, the letter was identified more with it than with the other cities; this may account for the words "at Ephesus" being found in most Greek manuscripts.

Occasion. Epaphras, a leader in the Colossian church, visited Paul while a prisoner at Rome to seek his apostolic help in dealing with the Colossian heresy. In response Paul wrote Colossians as a polemic against this doctrinal error. Part of the polemic pictures Christ as head of the universe and of the church. After completing Colossians, Paul, with this idea of Christ's headship still fresh in mind, wrote Ephesians to spell out the logical outcome of this doctrine: if Christ is the church's Head, then Christians are members of His body; that is, believers enjoy an intimate relationship with Him, and thus have a unique relation with one another.

Purpose. Paul seeks to present the church as members of Jesus' body, possessing the closest possible relationship with Him and each other.

Theme. A twin theme runs through the letter. First, believers compose the body of Christ. Second, they—both Jewish and Gentile Christians—share the same intimacy in God's family. Both stand before Him on the same common ground of grace. Jesus has made the Jewish and Gentile believers into "one new man" (2:15).

Salutation to the Saints

1 Paul, an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, to the saints which are at Ephesus, and to the faithful in Christ Jesus:

6 To the praise of the glory of his

1:3. Blessed here means “worthy of praise.” When God blesses man, He confers benefits upon him; when man blesses God, as Paul does here, he attributes praise to Him. Who hath blessed us (or, “because He has blessed us”): The apostle, then, praises God because He has bestowed all spiritual blessings on His people. When did He do this? Probably in eternity past (cf. vv. 4, 5). Where are these blessings located? In heavenly places, that is, in heaven. As the Christian’s citizenship (Phil. 3:20), high priest (Heb. 4:14), hope (Col. 1:5), and inheritance (1 Pet. 1:4) are all “in heaven,” as his treasure (Matt. 6:20, 21) and affection (Col. 3:1, 2) are to be “in heaven,” so also the Christian’s blessings are “in heaven.” These spiritual benefits were granted to the believer and are retained in heaven for him, being progressively dispersed to him on earth in accord with his need and Christian growth. In Christ, or, “by Christ,” that is, the Father has conferred these blessings on the church, but He did not act alone; He hath blessed us in Christ. This verse, therefore, makes five points: (1) What has God done? He has blessed us. (2) With what? With every spiritual blessing. (3) When? In eternity past. (4) Where are these blessings? In heaven. (5) How did God do this? By Christ.

1:4. The connecting thought linking verses 3 and 4 is this: Just as (According as) God has blessed believers with every spiritual blessing “in Christ” (v. 3), so in like manner it was in [or by] him that he hath chosen us. God never intended to bless man apart from Christ. All God does for man He does through His Son. Beginning here and continuing through verse 14, Paul begins to elaborate on the very general “God

... hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings” (v. 3). He specifically identifies nine of these spiritual blessings. God has (1) chosen believers (v. 4), (2) adopted them into His family (v. 5), (3) bestowed His grace on them (v. 6), (4) redeemed them (v. 7), (5) given them wisdom and insight into His future plan (vv. 8, 9); believers (6) will share in universal reconciliation (v. 10), (7) have been made God’s treasure (v. 11), (8) have been granted the Holy Spirit (v. 13), and (9) are assured of salvation (v. 14). “He hath chosen us” in selecting believers for salvation; God has graciously shaped their lives and destinies in accord with His will and to their advantage. Before him means in His sight. Christians should be, in God’s opinion, holy and without blame.

1:4, 5. The last two words of verse 4 (in love) may well belong to verse 5; the link between verb forms in these two verses is expressed in this rendering: “He chose us ... in that He lovingly predestined us.” So the divine choice of verse 4 is further defined by the divine predestination of verse 5. Predestinated means “marked out in advance,” “determined or appointed beforehand.” Prior to creation God appointed those who would believe unto [or, for] the adoption of children; that is, He appointed them to be His sons. This divine appointment was according to [because of] the good pleasure of his will; it was due not to anything good in ourselves, but due solely to His kindness. These verses stress the divine sovereignty in salvation. Verses 12 and 13, which mention our trust and belief in Christ, emphasize the human responsibility in the process.

1:6. The reason God predestined us to be His sons (v. 5) is expressed in the words to the praise of the glory of his grace, that is, in order to magnify the splendor of His goodness to us. Wherein he hath made us accepted in the beloved may also read, “which [grace] He has bestowed on us by the Beloved.” Through Christ we are the recipients of God’s unmerited favor.

1:7. Redemption referred to the release of a slave or captive upon receipt of ransom. But the following words, the forgiveness of sins, show “redemption” is used here in a moral sense. Christians are therefore released from their enslavement to sin and the resulting divine wrath. Redemption is effected for us through his blood, that is, by Christ’s atonement secured by His death on the cross.

1:8. This verse could be rendered, “He lavished upon us this grace which consists in all sorts of wisdom and prudence (or, insight). The word wisdom refers to a knowledge of the true nature of things; prudence has to do with the practical application of this wisdom leading to the right course of action. But the specific “wisdom and prudence” Paul has in view here concerns a future aspect of God’s will as delineated in verses 9, 10.

1:9. This verse more precisely identifies that “wisdom and prudence” (v. 8) God lavished on us. This “wisdom and prudence” have to do with God’s making known unto us the mystery of his will. “Mystery” here refers to a divine truth that is incapable of being discovered by human ingenuity and that, until recently, has been kept secret. Why did God disclose this mystery to us? It was according to [because of] his good pleasure which he hath purposed [planned] in himself.

PREDESTINATION

1:5. The verb predestinate literally means “to mark off or choose before.” God chooses those He knows will participate in His plan of salvation and extends it to all who respond in faith. The doctrine of predestination in Scripture relates to the foreknowledge of God (Rom. 8:29). Illustration: Predestination is especially noticeable in the conversion of the apostle Paul. Since he was a blasphemer and persecutor of the church, some Christians had a difficult time believing Paul could be saved even after he so testified (cf. Acts 9:13, 26). Still, knowing what was ahead and how Paul would respond, God chose him as Apostle to the Gentiles. Application: When we understand that God has chosen and predestinated us, we should also realize we have been ordained to good works (2:10), to bear fruit (John 15:16), and to become like Jesus (Rom. 8:29). (First reference, Rom. 8:29; Primary Reference, Eph. 1:5; cf. Rom. 8:29.)

ADOPTION

1:5. Five times the apostle Paul uses the word adoption to describe an important aspect of the salvation experience (Rom. 8:15, 23; 9:4; Gal. 4:5; Eph. 1:15). Under Roman law, adoption was a common means of appointing an heir. It legally transferred a person from the natural father’s authority to the authority of the adoptive father. Paul uses this term to describe the believer’s position with God. This is the means whereby the Christian becomes a son of God, and therefore an heir with Christ. Illustration: When Abraham was without a son, he apparently considered adopting Eliezer his servant as the heir of his household. Application: Because the Christian is an adopted son of God, he can enjoy an intimacy with his heavenly Father (Gal. 4:6). (First Reference, Gen. 15:2; Primary Reference, Eph. 1:5; cf. John 15:5.)

FORGIVENESS OF SINS

1:7. The word forgiveness literally means “to send off or away.” In Scripture this means separating the sinner from his sin. God accomplishes forgiveness by transferring our sin to Christ on the cross and judging it there. When an individual receives Christ as Savior, he is forgiven by means of this transfer. Illustration: When Cain was discouraged by his failure to be accepted by God, he was invited to make a sin offering (a “type” of Calvary) and resolve the problem (Gen. 4:6, 7). Application: Because God has forgiven us, we also ought to be forgiving in our attitude toward others (cf. Matt. 6:14, 15). (First Reference, Heb. 11:4; Primary Reference, Eph. 1:7; cf. Titus 3:5.)

SOVEREIGNTY OF GOD

1:8. Sovereignty means God is the supreme Ruler over all. While we are free moral agents, we are, nevertheless, subject to His sovereign will and purposes. Everything is subject to His judgment. He is ultimately in control, although He often works indirectly through others. Illustration: Even Satan cannot oppose the work of God unless God so permits. Before Satan could attack Job, he first had to obtain the permission of God (Job 1, 2). Application: Many Christians find great comfort in knowing that God is in control of their every circumstance. (First Reference, Gen. 3:11; Primary Reference, Eph. 1:8; cf. Esth. 4:14.)

Prayerful Thanksgiving

15 Wherefore I also, ^aafter I heard of your faith in the Lord Jesus, and love unto all the saints,

16 ^aCease not to give thanks for you, making mention of you in my prayers;

1:10. This verse refers back to God's "good pleasure" (v. 9). Verse 10 is made more plain by the paraphrase, "for the purpose of executing it [i.e., God's good pleasure] in the fullness of times, and His good pleasure is to head up all things in Christ, things in heaven, and things on earth." In the near future, when the time is ripe, God will put His good purpose into effect and carry it out. And His "good pleasure" or intention is the restoration of original universal unity, when all things are brought back into harmony with Himself and under the headship of Christ.

1:11. In whom also we have obtained an inheritance may be read, "by whom we were also made an inheritance." That is, believers are God's treasure. Why would Paul regard this as a blessing? As God's treasure Christians are the apple of His eye, the special objects of His love. He is then determined to care and provide for His people who are His heritage.

1:12. The purpose of being made God's "inheritance" and having been "predestinated" (v. 11) is that we should be to the praise of his glory, that is, that we should glorify God. Who first trusted in Christ refers to Jewish believers. See the note on verse 13—"ye."

1:13. In whom ye also (or, "by whom also you"): The first person plural (we, us) in verses 3–12 refers to Jewish Christians. The second person plural (you) refers to Gentile Christians. This seems evident from

2:11, 12 where the second person is explicitly applied to non-Jews: "Ye being in time past Gentiles ... ye were ... aliens from the commonwealth of Israel." Compare 3:1 where Paul calls his readers "you Gentiles." The apostle's point in this "we-you" distinction is that all those spiritual blessings God has bestowed upon "us" Jewish Christians, He has also granted "you" Gentile brethren. There is no difference. In whom also after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that holy Spirit of promise may be read, "By whom also, when you believed, you were sealed with the promised Holy Spirit." The Christian receives the Spirit, not "after," but when he believes in Christ as Savior. The sealer is Jesus; the seal is the Holy Spirit. In biblical times a seal denoted both identification of ownership and protection provided by the owner.

1:14. Which is the earnest of our inheritance means "who is the guarantee of our salvation." The Holy Spirit is here called "the earnest of our inheritance." The word earnest means "down payment"; as such the gift of the Spirit is viewed as an installment or as part of our salvation. God therefore assures the Christian that the realization of the rest of his salvation is forthcoming. How long is the believer assured of his salvation? Until the redemption of the purchased possession may be read, "until God glorifies and perfects the believer [the purchased possession] whom He has bought by Christ's blood."

FULLNESS OF TIMES—DAVIDIC COVENANT

1:10. The "Dispensation of the Fullness of Times" refers to the future millennial kingdom when David's Son will rule. In that age: (1) Christ will take control of the kingdom and put an end to all anarchy and misrule (Is. 11:3, 4); (2) men will be rewarded and given rest (2 Thess. 1:6, 7); (3) the curse on the creation will be lifted (Rom. 8:19, 20; Is. 11:6–8); (4) all Israel will be saved (Rom. 11:26); (5) her blindness will be cured (2 Cor. 3:14–17); (6) she will be restored to the land (Ezek. 39:25–29); and (7) the times of the Gentiles will cease. The governing covenant of this age is unique, in that considerable time elapses between its revelation and accomplishment. The Davidic covenant offers God's fourfold promise: (1) to establish David's throne; (2) to guarantee authority to rule over His people; (3) to establish His kingdom; and (4) to recognize David's reign in perpetuity (2 Sam. 7:13). The failure of humanity in the final dispensation is shown by the final revolt, causing the rebels to be judged in the lake of fire (Rev. 20:7–15; cf. Eph. 3:2).

SEALING OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

1:13. The sealing of the Holy Spirit guarantees the benefits of our salvation, as a person might seal an envelope to guarantee its enclosures. The Holy Spirit is the seal. Illustration: The Holy Spirit as the seal to the believer is also a "down payment" of His commitment to someday give him all other things God has promised. Application: Christians should be careful to "grieve not the holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption" (4:30). (First Reference, Eph. 1:13; Primary Reference, Eph. 4:30; cf. Heb. 2:3.)

1:17. The spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of him means “a disposition consisting of wisdom and revelation in knowing Him.”

1:18, 19. When the figurative terms are removed from the eyes of your understanding being enlightened, the clause means that “your mind’s understanding may be fully enlightened.” This clause further explains verse 17. That ye may know signifies that the believer comes to know three things upon being enlightened: (1) what is the hope of his calling; that is, he realizes how sure and certain is his heavenly destiny; (2) what the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints; that is, the illuminated Christian recognizes more and more both the priceless value of his salvation, and what a priceless treasure he is to God; and (3) what is the exceeding greatness of his power to us-ward who believe: perceiving how God’s power has changed him since conversion, he experiences to a greater extent this divine strength in daily living.

1:21. Principality, and power, and might, and dominion refer to various classes of angelic beings. See the note on Colossians 1:16. God’s power has exalted Jesus far above all these spiritual creatures.

1:22. And gave him to be the head over all things to the church means God appointed Him head (ruler) over all things for the benefit of the church. Jesus is the divinely appointed ruler over the entire universe for the church’s benefit.

1:23. Paraphrased, this verse reads, “For the church is His body. It is the fullness belonging to Him who fills the universe with all things.” That is, Jesus, who so wisely and skillfully fills the universe with all material elements necessary for its existence, also wisely and skillfully infuses His people (the church) with His own life and character. This verse, then, explains why in 1:22 God made Him head over all things for the benefit of the church: the church is in such an intimate relationship with Him, and is of such character, that she is considered His own body. So it is for her good that Christ is the divinely appointed ruler of the universe. Since He fillets the church with His own life and character, she is a receptacle containing the graces and virtues of God Himself.

2:1. Quickened means “made alive.” In 1:19 Paul prays for his readers to recognize what God’s power has done in them. As part of the answer to this prayer, verses 1-10 inform them of some of the effects divine might has accomplished in them.

2:2. Ye walked means “you lived.” The course of this world: The word course signifies all the tendencies, thoughts, pursuits, deeds, and so on, that characterize the present period of history. “This world” (kosmos) means “world-system,” that is, those philosophies, values, and life-styles that are opposed to God and hostile to Him. Before conversion the Ephesians used to conduct themselves in accordance with such ungodly values. The prince of the power of the air may be read “the ruler of the kingdom in the air.” They also used to live by the dictates and wishes of Satan.

2:3. We all had our conversation means “we all conducted ourselves.” In contrast to “ye,” in 2:2 which refers to Gentiles, note the “we” of this verse, which refers to Jews. In essence Paul admits, “We Jews were no better than you Gentiles—both ethnic groups were sinful.” Children of wrath refers to people subject to divine punishment.

2:4-6. But begins to disclose God’s response to man’s sin of verses 1-3. This divine response is expressed in three main verbs: (1) God ... hath quickened us. Because they were morally dead in sins, the Lord gave them spiritual life; (2) and hath raised us up together, that is, God has not allowed these Christians to remain in the grave of their old life with its sinful ways and habits, but He brought them into a new life and demonstration of it; and (3) God made

5 ^aEven when we were dead in sins, hath ^bquickened¹ us together with Christ, (by grace ye ²are saved;)

2:7. That ... he might shew (or, demonstrate): This denotes the ultimate purpose for all that God did for the Ephesians in verses 4–6. It is that throughout eternity He might make us understand more and more His goodness to us.

2:8. For gives the reason for this future demonstration of divine grace. It is because man owes his salvation to this grace or undeserved divine favor. The force of the Greek perfect tense are ye saved indicates that the Ephesians were spiritually saved at some point in the past, and at the present time of writing they remain in this state of salvation. The grammatical gender of the word “that,” occurring in the expression that not of yourselves, is neuter; hence, “that” cannot refer to the preceding “grace” or “faith,” both of which are feminine nouns, nor can it refer to “are ye saved” which is a masculine participle. Instead the neuter “that” refers back and embraces the entire foregoing “grace, are ye saved,” and “faith.” This means that no part of salvation is “of yourselves” or due to what we do—the whole of salvation is the gift of God. Man is saved “by grace” that is, by the kindness of God in having Jesus die for our sins. But this grace is appropriated through faith, that is, man believes what God has done for him and relies upon Christ’s atonement to blot out his sins and bring him into a proper relationship with God.

2:9. The reason, in part, that salvation is not achieved by good works is to prevent men from bragging of having earned a place in heaven by themselves.

2:10. For verifies the assertion of man’s good works having no part in obtaining salvation. Workmanship refers not to our original or physical birth, but to our spiritual birth: what we are spiritually in the good sense is due to God, not ourselves. Created in Christ Jesus unto good works means “having been [morally] re-created by Christ Jesus for good works”; that is, Jesus remade our spiritual lives so that we could then do good works. The apostle’s thinking is this: since the Christian has been given spiritual life for the purpose of doing good works, there could have been no good works by him prior to conversion that would merit salvation. Good works follow—do not precede—salvation.

2:11. Uncircumcision was a derogatory term used by the Jews regarding Gentiles because the latter were uncircumcised. Jews called themselves the Circumcision since they were circumcised.

GRACE OF GOD

2:8. The grace of God is the expression of His goodness toward the undeserving. Grace means unmerited favor, and can be expressed by the acrostic “God’s Riches At Christ’s Expense.” This grace is the basis of our salvation (1:7; 2:8). Illustration: In salvation, men who deserve hell obtain heaven. This cannot be explained apart from God’s grace. Every conversion in Scripture is an example of God’s grace. When Paul (Saul) met the Lord on the Damascus Road, Paul was a persecutor of the church. Yet God made him one of the church’s chief preachers. Application: We need to remember that we are saved, given the Holy Spirit, and allowed to serve God—by His grace. (First Reference, Gen. 6:8; Primary Reference, Eph. 2:8; cf. Ps. 139:1.)

SAVING FAITH

2:8. Saving faith is part of humanity’s response to God in the salvation experience. It is as simple as looking to Jesus for salvation (John 3:14–16). Saving faith is both simple and complex. It is as simple as a drowning man reaching for a rope, yet at the same time it sets in motion all the judicial machinery of heaven, in keeping with the ultimate purpose of God. While believing is simple, there are some for whom it is too simple, and they find that difficult. In the Scriptures, the intensity of one’s faith is not as important as its object. Often belief in the gospel produces an emotional response (Acts 16:34), although, because individual personalities differ, it is not wise to use emotion as a test of faith. Ultimately, saving faith is expressed as an act of the will. Repentance and faith are in essence two sides of the same coin called “conversion.” Illustration: When the Philippian jailer asked, “What must I do to be saved?” (thus reflecting a spirit of repentance), Paul and Silas responded, “Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved” (Acts 16:30, 31). Application: To be saved a person must trust Christ alone for his salvation. (First Reference, Heb. 11:1–4; Primary Reference, Eph. 2:8, 9; cf. Rom. 3:28.)

Christ Our Cornerstone

19 Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of God;

20 And are ^abuilt ^bupon the foundation of the ^capostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being ^athe chief corner stone;

21 In whom all the building ¹fitly framed together groweth unto ^aan holy temple in the Lord:

2:12. At that time refers to the readers' pre-Christian life. Commonwealth [or, nation] of Israel recalls the concept of ancient Greek city-states, whereby a city or country provided numerous valuable advantages, benefits, and privileges for its citizens, but withheld them from foreigners. Since the Gentile addressees used to be aliens from the Jewish nation, who were God's people, the Gentiles were without the spiritual blessings given her by God. Without God means not having His help and assistance. This was their spiritual plight before salvation.

2:13. Because Jews had access to God through His temple in Jerusalem, they were said to be nigh. But Gentile nations, geographically removed from the temple, were said to be far off. These terms of space came to denote moral distance, so that to be "nigh" was to have a proper relationship with God, and to be "far off" was to have an improper relationship with Him.

2:14, 15. Who hath made both one: Jesus has formed the two antagonistic groups of Jew and Gentile into a single new party, the Christian church. He did this by removing the middle wall of partition, that is, the Mosaic Law. The law was meant to protect Jews from pagan corruptions; but by misconstruing the purpose of the law, the Jews felt superior to Gentiles, who were incensed at this arrogance. So Jesus abolished this enmity (hatred), caused by an abuse of the law, by making the law invalid for His church. Of twain one new man: As above, Christian Jews and

2:19, 20. Now therefore draws a conclusion from verses 14-18: Christian Gentiles are no longer alienated from God, but now enjoy the same intimate relationship with Him and the same spiritual blessings as do Christian Jews. Three figures express this unity and equality existing between believing Jews and Gentiles. (1) A city: This figure comes from the Greek city-state political concept whereby all inhabitants of a particular city-state were fellowcitizens enjoying the same privileges. (2) A family: Since Gentiles have been reconciled to God (v. 16) and to His people (v. 15), they are now members of the household of God, that is, children of the divine family. (3) A building: Believing Jews and Gentiles are part of the same divine structure, the church. The church's foundation is composed of the apostles and prophets, its chief corner stone is Christ, and its superstructure is composed of Christians. Oriental architecture placed greater importance on the cornerstone than on the foundation, for it connected the walls and concentrated the weight of the building on itself, thus bonding and holding together the whole structure.

2:21. Paraphrased, this verse would read, "By whom the whole building, being carefully and harmoniously joined together, rises into a holy temple for the Lord." Fitly framed together is translated above as "being carefully and harmoniously joined together." This implies the harmonious blending of the Jewish and Gentile believers in the church.

APOSTLES

2:20. The word apostle identifies someone commissioned with authority by Jesus Christ. In the New Testament, this applies in a technical sense to certain men who played a prominent role in establishing the church. They had been eyewitnesses to the Resurrection (Acts 1:22). Apostles were recipients of revelation and possessed the sign gifts, also called "the signs of an apostle" (2 Cor. 12:12). The apostles gave us the Epistles of the New Testament. Illustration: In the case of Paul, it appears that he was endowed with spiritual gifts which he exercised; and he fulfilled the requirements for being an apostle. Application: Because the New Testament is complete, and there are none who presently meet the biblical qualifications of the apostle, this office is unfilled in the contemporary church. (First Reference, Matt. 10:2; Primary Reference, Eph. 2:20; cf. Act 1:13.)

2:22. Ye also, in Greek, is emphatic. It stresses that Christian Gentiles, as well as their Jewish counterparts, are part of the church. Christians are viewed as an habitation or dwelling place in whom God lives through His Holy Spirit.

3:1. The writer begins his second prayer in behalf of the readers. For this cause indicates the reason for his prayer; this expression refers to their being part of the church, which is “an habitation of God” (2:22). Since God lives in the recipients, Paul prays for them. 1 Paul: From this point the apostle’s prayer is side-tracked until its resumption in verse 14. This digression reveals Paul’s own divinely appointed part in disclosing the enormous truth explained in 2:11–22—that Gentile believers now stand on equal footing with their Jewish brethren in God’s family. The prisoner of Jesus may be read “a prisoner because of Jesus.” Paul’s imprisonment is due to the Lord’s work; it is not due to any wrongdoing on his part.

3:2. The dispensation of the grace of God means “the provision consisting of God’s grace.” This refers to the divine ability given Paul which enabled him to successfully execute his apostolic ministry to the Gentiles.

3:3. As I wrote afore in few words refers to 1:9, 10 and 2:11–22 where the author only touched on the mystery which God had made known to him. In the most general of terms 1:9, 10 identifies this “mystery” as the establishing of a new humanity under the headship of Christ. A bit more specifically, 2:11–22 defines it as the inclusion of Gentile Christians along with Jewish Christians in God’s family. But 3:6 will spell out with even more precision exactly what this mystery entails.

3:5. That the divine blessings of salvation would be extended to the Gentiles was made known from Genesis 12:3 onward. That Gentiles could be saved, therefore, was no secret. But a mystery not made known in Old Testament times was the incorporation of Jewish and Gentile believers alike as fellow members of the body of Christ. This secret is now revealed unto his holy apostles and [Christian] prophets.

3:6. The “mystery” of verse 3 that has just been divinely disclosed (v. 5) is now explicitly defined. It is that the Gentiles are to be fellowheirs, that is, they now enjoy equal share in a heavenly inheritance to which they, unlike the Jews, had no right by birth. And they are of the same body as fellow members; that

DISPENSATIONS AND COVENANTS

3:2 People must recognize the relationship between a dispensation and a covenant if they would understand God’s plan and objective throughout the ages. A dispensation is an administration within a period of time that is based on a conditional test to determine if people will be faithful to God and His conditions. A covenant is an eternal agreement made by God with humanity, revealing what God will do for people individually or collectively. God made covenants with the human race throughout history that specifically relate to one of the seven dispensations. Each covenant reveals principles in embryonic form by which God will relate to humanity. Man can choose to reject the covenant or principles of God, and will, to some extent, in every dispensation. When he violates the covenant, man suffers the consequences in the form of a judgment, bringing that dispensation to an abrupt end. While all Christians recognize at least two dispensations—law and grace—the notes in this Bible outline seven major dispensations and their covenants. Some include the Palestinian covenant in the list, but other theologians recognize that as a land covenant, which was temporary rather than involving eternal consequences (Deut. 28:63–68; cf. Gen. 1:28.)

MYSTERY

3:3–5. The word mystery in the New Testament identifies truth that was previously hidden from common knowledge, but is now revealed, discernible only by the aid of the Holy Spirit (Rom. 16:25, 26; 1 Cor. 2:7–10). There are seven aspects of “the mystery” concerning that period known as “the times of the Gentiles.” These are: (1) the mystery of the incarnation (1 Cor. 2:7; Col. 2:2, 9); (2) the mystery of the gospel (6:19); (3) the mystery of Christ and His church (5:32); (4) the mystery of the indwelling of Christ (Col. 1:27); (5) the mystery of both Jews and Gentiles in one body (3:1–12); (6) the mystery of the kingdom of heaven (Matt. 13); and (7) the mystery of the Rapture (1 Cor. 15:51). Illustration: Because the mystery of the gospel was not revealed clearly until after the church was established, the Devil and his demonic servants were the unwitting servants of God. Had they understood what they were doing, they would not have crucified the Lord (1 Cor. 2:8). Application: The Christian, however, who understands the plan of God for this world, should be eager to do his part. (First Reference, Matt. 13; Primary Reference, Eph. 3:1–12; cf. 2 Tim. 3:16.)

Praying for the Ephesians

14 For this cause I bow my knees unto the ^aFather of our Lord Jesus Christ,

15 Of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named,

16 That he would grant you, ^aaccording to the riches of his glory, ^bto be strengthened with might by his Spirit in ^cthe inner man;

17 ^aThat Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, ^bbeing rooted and grounded in love,

20 Now ^aunto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly ^babove all that we ask or think, ^caccording to the power that worketh in us, is, Gentiles have been incorporated into the divine family on the same equal footing before God. They are just as intimately related to the Lord and just as much loved by Him as are their Jewish brethren. And they are partakers of his promise; that is, they are fellow partakers of covenant promises from which they were formerly excluded (2:12). In a word, then, the "mystery" is that of Gentile Christians standing on the same even ground of grace before God and of their being equally included in the body of Christ (the church) along with Christian Jews.

3:9. The verse is better read, "And to reveal what is the plan [arrangement] of the mystery, for it has been hidden for ages by God who created all things." The two reasons for which God gave Paul this grace ("ability") are (1) to preach the gospel to Gentiles (v. 8), and (2) to disclose God's plan for implementing the Jew-Gentile mystery in human history.

3:10. Paul's disclosure of this mystery teaches angels (principalities and powers in heavenly places) of God's wisdom.

3:12. This verse affirms that Christians have boldness [freedom of speech before God] and access [the right of entering His presence] with confidence [assurance of being heard by God] by the faith of him (through relying upon Christ to gain God's ear).

3:13. Which is your glory: God will use Paul's tribulations and sufferings in the ministry to spiritually benefit his recipients. Such edification will then bring about glory on their part in that they praise and honor God.

3:14. For this cause: This expression resumes the apostle's prayer begun in verse 1 but delayed by the discussion of verses 2-13.

3:15. Is named means "is derived." The whole Christian family, including those saints now departed and in heaven, and those saints still living on earth—all of them "derive" their spiritual life from God.

3:16-19. In these verses Paul makes three prayer requests for the addressees: (1) That they would be strengthened with might by his Spirit (v. 16), that is, that they be divinely enabled to successfully live the Christian life. (2) That the readers be able to comprehend ... the love of Christ, that is, to better understand the enormous love Christ has for them. And (3) that they might be filled with all the fullness of God, that is, that the life, character, and virtues of God Himself may be fully developed in them.

3:17. This verse expresses the result of 3:16: Christ will dwell in the lives of those who are recipients of the Holy Spirit. Jesus already lives in them and in all Christians. The Greek word translated "dwell" means to settle down and be at home, to be at ease. When they are divinely strengthened (v. 16), they will then live the kind of lives God desires. When they thus please God, Christ will then be "at home" or "at ease" in their lives. As a permanent guest, He will enjoy living with them.

3:20. In making the three above petitions (vv. 16-19), Paul has not asked for too much. For he prays unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that he can ask or think.

The Gifts of Christ

7 But ^aunto every one of us is given grace according to the measure of the gift of Christ.

8 Wherefore he saith, ^aWhen he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men.

9 (^aNow that he ascended, what is it but that he also descended into the lower parts of the earth?

10 He that descended is the same also ^athat ascended up far above all heavens, ^bthat he might ¹fill all things.)

11 And ¹he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers;

4:1. I therefore ... beseech you: In view of all that God's grace has done for the readers (as seen in chs. 1-3), Paul urges them to walk worthy of their vocation; that is, they are to live in a manner befitting the divine call or invitation (vocation) which summoned them to salvation.

4:2, 3. These verses begin to spell out what constitutes the worthy walk of verse 1. Such noble conduct includes humility, patience toward others, and bending over backward to maintain unity, or harmony, among God's people.

4:4-6. This passage elaborates on the "unity of the Spirit" (v. 3). This oneness among Christians refers to having (1) one body—the one body of Christ, the Christian church; (2) one Spirit—the same Holy Spirit who imparts the same spiritual life to all believers; (3) one hope—all Christians share the same future certainty and are headed toward the same heavenly destination; (4) one Lord—all submit to the same divine ruler, Jesus; (5) one faith—all believers have placed the same trust in Christ for salvation; (6) one baptism—Holy Spirit baptism at the time of salvation (1 Cor. 12:13); and (7) one God and Father—all believers in Christ have the same God and heavenly Father.

4:7. But draws a sharp contrast with the preceding "unity" (v. 3), expressed in the sevenfold "one" of verses 4-6 and in the fourfold "all" of verse 6. The contrast in verses 7-16 shows that there is a diversity within Christian unity: while the church is one, there is a variety of spiritual gifts within, given for the church's benefit. Grace is a spiritual gift. Every one of us has been granted some spiritual capability to serve God and contribute to the church's growth. According to the measure of the gift of Christ: Jesus determines both what gift each believer is given, and the amount (measure) of that gift. Two persons may be given the same gift, but one may have a greater measure of that gift than does the other.

4:8. Psalm 68:18 is cited as an illustration of Christ's bestowing spiritual gifts on His church. The Old Testament text pictures God as a victorious warrior returning to Mount Zion (he ascended up on high) leading Israel's defeated foes in triumphal procession (he led captivity captive); He then distributes to Israel the spoils of war (gave gifts unto men). Similarly, when Jesus returned to heaven ("he ascended up on high"), He conquered Satan and all his demonic horde ("he led captivity captive"), and distributed spiritual gifts to His church ("gave gifts unto men").

4:9, 10. Jesus' ascension into heaven signifies that He previously descended from heaven (v. 9). And the person who cared enough to descend for man's redemption is the very same person (namely, Jesus) who was equally concerned for the church's well-being, so that, upon returning to heaven, He equipped His church with all the spiritual gifts prerequisite for her growth (v. 10).

4:11. This verse identifies some of the spiritual gifts given to the church. These are the God-given abilities enabling some Christians to have functioned as apostles, some as prophets, some as evangelists, and others in the role of pastors and teachers. The Greek construction for the last mentioned should be rendered pastors-teachers. This indicates that a pastor-teacher has a dual function: he pastors in overseeing his parishioners' spiritual lives, and he teaches by instructing them in the Word.

DESCENT INTO HELL

4:9. Before the death of Christ, both the lost and the saved went to Hades (Heb. She'ol) although it was divided into the place of torments and the paradise of God (also called Abraham's bosom, cf. Luke 16:19-31). Illustration: When Jesus hung on the cross, He consoled the penitent thief that he would be in paradise with Christ on that day. One of the accomplishments of the Resurrection was to lead "captivity captive," that is, to remove Old Testament saints from Abraham's bosom (Hades) and lead them to heaven. Application: When a Christian dies today, he goes immediately into the presence of God (Phil. 1:23). (First Reference, Ps. 16:10; Primary Reference, Eph. 4:9; cf. Matt. 28:6.)

Put On the New Man

17 This I say therefore, and testify in the Lord, that ye henceforth ^awalk not as other Gentiles walk, in the ¹vanity of their mind,

18 Having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God ¹through the ignorance that is in them, because of the ^ablindness² of their heart:

19 ^aWho being past feeling ^bhave given themselves over unto ¹lasciviousness, to work all uncleanness with greediness.

20 But ye have not so learned Christ;

21 If so be that ye have heard him, and have been taught by him, as the truth is in Jesus:

4:12. This verse discloses the purpose for the gift of individuals of verse 11. Their responsibility is the perfecting of the saints, that is, to train and equip the rank-and-file Christians to do the work of the ministry. The aim of this ministry of Christian service is for the edifying of the body of Christ, that is, to build up the church numerically and spiritually.

4:13. The edifying of the church (v. 12) is to continue till we all come in the unity of the faith, that is, until all Christians attain spiritual maturity. Since new believers are constantly being added to the church, this objective will not be realized until the Lord returns.

4:14, 15. Two results occur when Christians reach spiritual maturity. (1) Negatively, they will no longer be children, that is, immature believers easily deceived by every wind of [false] doctrine; and (2) positively, they will grow up into him, that is, fully grown in all aspects of Christian living—doctrine, conduct, service, and so on. But speaking the truth in love, may grow up may be read “by lovingly teaching the truth, we will grow up.” Christian maturity is attained, in part, by thorough instruction in sound doctrine given in a loving manner.

4:16. Fitly joined together and compacted: As He unites Christians with Himself, Christ also brings them into a harmonious relationship with one another. This harmonious relationship is accomplished by that which every joint supplieth or, “by every supporting ligament.” The spiritual gifts mentioned in verses 7–15 are figuratively likened to the various “ligaments” of a body. Removing this figure, Christ joins believers together and unites them by the divinely ordained ministries of Christians who possess diverse spiritual gifts, which are exercised and used among believers for the common good. The church’s spiritual growth, then, comes from Christ through the believers’ ministry to one another as they employ their spiritual gifts.

4:17. Therefore joins the following passage with the preceding in a twofold manner. First, it resumes the thought begun in verses 1–3 and continues to spell out what constitutes a worthy walk. Second, since each Christian is divinely enabled with some spiritual gift, he must walk not as other Gentiles walk lest his much-needed contribution to the church’s growth be sorely missed. Unbelieving Gentiles live in the vanity of their mind, without proper purpose, causing all their efforts to obtain happiness to end in failure.

4:18. The blindness of their heart refers to the hardness of their will. Gentiles’ obstinacy against the divine will has caused them to be separated from God’s life.

4:19. Being past feeling means “having become calloused.” These unbelievers have gone so deep in sin that they are insensitive to moral right and wrong.

4:20. To learn Christ means to learn Christian teaching. Christian doctrine has instructed the readers not to so live as do unbelievers described in verses 17–19.

EVANGELIST

4:11. The word evangelist is used only three times in Scripture. Therefore, relatively little can be concluded about this person’s role. Philip, who planted churches, is called an evangelist (Acts 21:8), and Timothy was instructed to do the work of an evangelist (2 Tim. 4:5). Some have the gift of evangelism and are given to the church (v. 11). The root meaning of evangelist is “to bring good tidings” or “to bring the gospel message.” Illustration: In the New Testament, the evangelist appears to have gone to unbelieving people, attempting to win them to Christ. Some people view the evangelist as a particularly effective soul-winner. Application: Soul-winning is the responsibility of all Christians regardless of their spiritual gifts, offices, or ministries (First Reference, Acts 21:8; Primary Reference, Eph. 4:11; cf. Eph. 2:20.)

4:22-24. Christianity taught the addressees to (1) put off ... the old man, to renounce their pre-conversion life and sins; (2) be renewed in ... your mind, to be constantly changed, being brought more and more in line with God's own viewpoint; and (3) put on the new man, that is, to assume a new nature (character) and conduct (life) at conversion.

4:25-5:2. This section gives practical guidelines as to how "the old man" (v. 22) can be laid aside and how "the new man" (v. 24) can be assumed in daily living. The passage specifies five sins to be discarded, the virtues that are to replace them, and the motive for such an exchange: (1) Lying is to be replaced by truth-telling, since Christians are fellow members (v. 25). (2) Sinful anger is to be replaced by (briefly held) righteous indignation, that the Devil may not be given opportunity (vv. 26, 27). (3) Theft is to be replaced by honest work, in order that one may have the means to meet the needs of others (v. 28). (4) Foul language is to be replaced by gracious speech, that it may edify others and not grieve the Spirit (vv. 29, 30). (5) Resentment and wrath are to give way to kindness and forgiveness, since God has forgiven us (vv. 31, 32).

5:3. As becometh saints means that it is not proper for Christians or "saints" to be guilty of committing the sexual sins listed here. Not be once named means such deeds should not even be the topic of normal conversation.

5:4. Convenient means "proper."

5:8. Darkness indicates that the readers used to be spiritually unenlightened, and accompanying this ignorance was immorality with its resultant guilt and misery. Light denotes that the recipients are now to be religiously informed. Their knowledge of the truth is attended by moral purity and happiness.

5:10. Because of constant temptations and solicitations to evil, believers must always be proving or discerning what is and what is not acceptable unto the Lord.

11 And have ^ano fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather ¹reprove them.

12 ^aFor it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret.

13 But ^aall things that are ¹reproved are made manifest by the light: for whatsoever doth make manifest is light.

14 Wherefore he saith, ^aAwake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light.

Instructions for Marriage

22 Wives, ^asubmit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord.

5:11. Reprove is better translated “expose.” The believer’s duty is expressed here in two ways. Negatively, he is not to have any fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, that is, not to indulge in the sins of the unsaved. Positively, he is to “expose” (reprove) these sins, that is, bring them to light and show them for what they really are, so that the unbeliever may see their hideous nature and their terrible consequences.

5:12. For tells why the Christian must expose the sins of the lost. If it is shameful even to discuss their iniquities in decent company (cf. v. 3), how much the worse is the committing of these sins. Hence, the need to bring them to light.

5:13. This verse may be paraphrased: “All sins that are exposed are made visible by the gospel, for whatever sin is made visible becomes light.”

5:14. Since exposing sin is beneficial, God invites the unbeliever (thou that sleepest) to turn from his sin (arise from the dead), with the promise that he will be granted the spiritual enlightenment and help needed (Christ shall give thee light).

5:15. See then that ye walk circumspectly means “therefore watch carefully how you live.”

5:16. Redeeming the time (or, “making the most of every opportunity”): Contextually, the specific opportunity in view is that of exposing the sins of the lost and being a witness to them. Because the days are evil assigns a reason to seize each opportunity. It is because the sins being committed during these days are so evil.

5:17. Wherefore looks back to the evil days of verse 16. Since the current age is so perilous morally, Christians must clearly understand what the will of the Lord is.

5:18. This verse gives an example of what is and what is not the Lord’s will (v. 17). Believers are not allowed to be intoxicated with alcoholic beverages; the reason for this prohibition is wherein is excess; that is, drunkenness leads to moral intemperance. This is clearly contrary to God’s will. His will is that Christians be filled with [by] the Spirit; that is, they are to allow Him to fill them with God’s own life, character, and virtues. The analogy between these two moral states is this: a person filled with wine is under its influence; similarly, a Christian is filled with the Spirit when He controls his thoughts, attitudes, and actions.

5:19–21. There are four results of being Spirit-filled (v. 18): (1) believers speak to one another with psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs; that is, they exhort and instruct each other; (2) there is singing and the making of melody, of individual song and praise for the Lord; (3) there is giving thanks always—the Spirit enables the Christian to be grateful for all things divinely allowed to enter his life since they will be used for good; and (4) there is mutual submission, that is, showing deference to the wishes of one another, as long as that to which the believer submits is in the fear of God, which is to say, in accord with what pleases Him.

FULLNESS OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

5:18. The words be filled here mean “be continually filled,” emphasizing that the fullness of the Spirit is a repeated experience for believers. When a person is drunk with an alcoholic beverage, his walk, talk, and sight are controlled by alcohol. God desires that the minds of Christians be controlled by the Holy Spirit so that they will walk in the Spirit, speak on behalf of God, and understand the things of God. Because people are indwelt by the Holy Spirit at salvation, they do not need to get more of the Holy Spirit, but the filling of the Spirit occurs when the Holy Spirit gets more of the believer.

Illustration: As we establish our fellowship with God through confession of sins (1 John 1:9) and yield to Him (Rom. 6:13), we can be filled with the Spirit if that is our desire (Matt. 5:6) and prayer (Luke 11:13). Application: Every Christian should be filled with the Spirit in order that he may have God’s power to serve Him (Acts 1:8). (First Reference, Ex. 35:31; Primary Reference, Eph. 5:18; cf. 1 John 2:27.)

23 For ^athe husband is the head of the wife, even as ^bChrist is the head of the church: and he is the saviour of the body.

24 Therefore as the church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands ^ain every thing.

27 ^aThat he might present it to himself a glorious church, ^bnot having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish.

28 So ought men to love ¹their wives as their own bodies. He that loveth his wife loveth himself.

29 For no man ever yet hated his own flesh; but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord the church:

30 For ^awe are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones.

5:22–33. The theme of submission, mentioned in verse 21, is now taken up and developed in detail from the church in general to the Christian household in particular. Accordingly, submission-authority is treated in three domestic relations: that of (1) wives and husbands (vv. 22–33), (2) children and parents (6:1–4), and (3) servants and masters (6:5–9).

5:22. As unto the Lord: This is a comparative clause. But in Greek there are two different types of comparative clauses. (1) Elucidation, which means that wives are to give their husbands the same unquestioned, absolute submission they give Christ. Would this apostle expect wives to render the same submission to imperfect husbands they give to their perfect Lord, when other apostles recognized the periodic need for believers to obey God rather than man (Acts 5:29), if the wills of human and divine authorities clash? It is better, then, to take this comparative clause as that of (2) emphasis, which means that wives are to submit to their husbands as submission rendered by them truly is submission rendered to Christ Himself. When the wife yields her will to that of her husband, she yields to the Lord—provided the husband's directions are “in the fear of God” (v. 21) or in line with God's will.

5:23. For gives the reason why verse 22 calls for wifely submission. Just as Jesus is the divinely appointed head or authority over His church, in the same way the husband is the divinely appointed “head” or authority of his wife. And he is the saviour (or, protector of the body): As Jesus is responsible to provide for the welfare of His church, so the husband is responsible to protect his wife. In both cases the responsibility to protect is inseparably linked with the responsibility to provide spiritual leadership.

5:24. The extent of the wife's submission to her husband is in every thing, that is, in every area of life and in every issue that may arise—those which the wife may agree with, and those which she may not. Again, “in every thing” is limited only to those directives of the husband that are “in the fear of God” (v. 21), that is, those conforming to God's will.

5:25. The marital responsibility of husbands is to love your wives. The Greek word rendered “love” is agapaō, which denotes the willing sacrificial giving on the husband's part for the benefit of his wife, without thought of return. As Christ gave himself for the church, so there is to be no sacrifice, not even the laying down of his life, that a husband should not be willing to make for his wife.

5:26. This verse may be paraphrased: “That He might perfectly sanctify the church, having cleansed her by the gospel accompanied with the washing of water.” When will He “perfectly sanctify” the church? When He returns for her in glory. When was the church “cleansed”? At conversion. How was her conversion effected? “By the gospel” (“word”). And what ritual is to be associated with one's conversion? “The washing of water,” that is, water baptism, which is the outward symbol of an inward change.

5:27. The ultimate purpose of Jesus' love for the church is to present her to Himself as a chaste bride. As a man wants a sexually untainted virgin as bride, so Jesus wants His church to be without moral flaw.

5:28. This verse develops the idea, introduced in verse 27, that sacrificial love benefits the giver as well as the receiver. The church certainly profits from Christ's love (v. 26) in that she is granted salvation, but Jesus also benefits from His love in obtaining her as a pure bride (v. 27). Similarly, the husband who loveth his wife loveth himself, that is, he profits from this love as does his wife.

5:29–31. The assertion of verse 28b that the husband who loves his wife loves himself is substantiated by Paul's reasoning in these verses: As the church is a part of Jesus' body (v. 30), so is the wife a part of her husband's body (v. 31). Thus, when the husband loves her, he loves himself. As a man who cares for his body benefits himself (v. 29), so the husband who loves his wife brings much profit to himself.

BRIDE OF CHRIST

5:32. The relationship of Christ to His church is illustrated by that of a husband to his wife. Christ is called the Bridegroom, and His church is called the bride. Christ loved the church and gave Himself for it, that He might sanctify, cleanse, and glorify it. Illustration: In the Old Testament, several brides are typical of the church, including Eve (Gen. 2:23, 24), Rebekah (Gen. 24:1–7), Asenath (Gen. 41:45), and Zipporah (Ex. 2:21). The Song of Solomon is often interpreted typologically of the union and communion between Christ and His church. Application: As wives should be submissive to and reverence their husbands, so Christians should submit to and worship Christ. (First Reference, Gen. 2:23; Primary Reference, Eph. 5:32; cf. 1 Cor. 12:27.)

31 “For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall be joined unto his wife, and they ^btwo shall be one flesh.

32 This is a great mystery: but I speak concerning Christ and the church.

33 Nevertheless ^alet every one of you in particular so love his wife even as himself; and the wife see that she ^breverence¹ her husband.

The Whole Armour of God

10 Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might.

11 “Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the ¹wiles of the devil.

5:31. Leave his father and mother: A husband and wife have a better chance for a successful marriage if there is some independence—physically, emotionally, and financially—from parents and in-laws.

6:1. In the Lord: This phrase grammatically does not modify parents, for this would mean that only Christian parents are to be obeyed. Rather the phrase goes with obey, that is, obey those parental instructions—whether from Christian or non-Christian parents—that are in line with the Lord’s will.

6:2, 3. Honour means have inward respect and reverence for. It is inadequate for children to obey parents only outwardly (v. 1); they must also respect or honor them inwardly. Which is the first commandment with promise (or, “for this is the first command with promise”): The fifth of the Ten Commandments in Exodus 20:3–17 is the very first of all God’s Old Testament injunctions to be given that possesses an attached promise. The promise is twofold: honoring and obeying parents ensures a long and a prosperous life upon earth.

6:4. Fathers can provoke their children to wrath by injustice, loss of temper, undue severity, cruelty, favoritism, suppression, sarcasm, ridicule, and misuse or abuse of authority. Nurture basically means “training,” here denoting spiritual education. Admonition is instruction that points out one’s responsibilities and duties. Of the Lord is in Greek a subjective genitive. This indicates that behind the parents’ rearing and instruction of their children stands the Lord as the chief teacher in child education. Parents do not rear children alone.

6:5. Your masters according to the flesh means “your human masters.” Servants are to carry out their slave duties with fear and trembling, that is, with careful concern to do a good job and with reverential respect for their masters. Singleness of your heart refers to a mental disposition, an attitude that renders obedience out of sincerity, not hypocrisy. As unto Christ explains why servants should obey masters in the manner prescribed here: obedience rendered to their masters is obedience rendered to Christ.

6:6. “Singleness of heart” or sincere disposition excludes eyeservice, that is, duty performed only when the master is watching; but it includes doing the will of God from the heart, that is, enthusiastic service coming from within and not having to be coerced by external pressure.

6:7. Good will means “good intention.” The Christian servant (employee) seeks the best interests of his master (employer).

6:8. The basis for the servant’s “good intention” (v. 7) toward his master is his being recompensed by the Lord—both in this life and in the one to come—the same good he has performed in his servant duties.

6:9. Earthly masters are to behave in a reciprocal manner toward their slaves (i.e., with respect, sincerity, and careful concern). For earthly masters have a heavenly Master who will judge them without partiality.

6:10. Finally may be rendered “from now on” or “henceforth.” The spiritual battle Christians are engaged in exists “from now on” until the Lord’s return: there is no quarter given, no cease-fire, no temporary truce, no cessation of hostilities. “From now on” till the end there is all-out war. The remainder of the verse may be paraphrased, “Let yourselves constantly be strengthened by the Lord, more precisely, by His mighty power.”

6:11. Put on (Greek ingressive aorist imperative) denotes a sense of urgency, demanding immediate action. To stand has military overtones. This verb was used in classical Greek meaning to resist the enemy and hold a critical position in battle. The wiles of the devil (or, “the Devil’s strategy”): Satan carefully devises schemes and tactics against believers.

6:12. Wrestle, used of hand-to-hand combat, emphasizes the personal and individual nature of spiritual warfare waged against each local church and Christian. Flesh and blood refers to humanity. Such is not the church’s adversary. Instead she opposes principalities (rulers), powers (authorities), rulers (world-rulers), spiritual wickedness (wicked spiritual beings), that is, fallen angels, demons, and Lucifer himself.

6:13. Wherefore means “because of this,” that is, because we face such a formidable foe, we must avail ourselves of God’s provision lest the enemy destroy our Christian witness and ministry. The evil day refers to the periodic demonic onslaughts and Satanic assaults. Having done all includes both dressing oneself in God’s armor and resisting Satan. Having done all these, be ready, for the Devil will attack again and again.

6:14–17. The whole armor of God consists of six pieces. (1) Truth (v. 14a) is a knowledge of the truth of God’s Word (cf. 4:21). The ancient soldier’s loins (“waist”) were girt about with a leather belt which held most of the other pieces of his armor in place. Similarly, the other pieces of the Christian’s armor depend on, and are held in place by, his spiritual “belt” or his knowledge of the “truth” of Scripture. (2) The breastplate of righteousness (v. 14b) may be read “the breastplate which is righteousness.” It represents a holy character and moral conduct.

Obedience to the “truth” known produces a godly life (“righteousness”). (3) Preparation of the gospel of peace (v. 15) means “eagerness that comes from the gospel of peace.” That is, as the Roman soldier wore special shoes called caligae on his feet, enabling him to advance against his enemy, so the Christian must have on his feet (possess) a sense of “eagerness” or “willingness” to advance against the Devil and take the fight to him. Such “eagerness” to contend with Satan “comes from the gospel of peace.” The gospel gives peace to the believer, freeing him from anxiety though he advances against such a powerful opponent. (4) The shield of [which is] faith (v. 16) means taking God at His word by believing His promises. Such trust will protect one from doubts induced by Satan. (5) The helmet of salvation (v. 17a): Since the readers are already Christians (2:8), they are not here urged to be saved. First Thessalonians 5:8 describes this helmet as “the hope of salvation” that is, the certainty (assurance) of salvation. (6) The sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God (v. 17b): The Greek term rendered “word” is not logos, referring to the whole Word of God, but rhēma, referring to certain portions or selected verses of Scripture.

6:18. Praying is grammatically linked to “stand” in verse 14. Without prayer God’s armor is inadequate to achieve victory. Prayer is indispensable. Always means “on every occasion,” that is, when Satan attacks. In the Spirit signifies that with the Spirit’s help such prayer for divine aid is to be made. Watching thereunto means “being vigilant in this very matter” of prayer. They are to pray not just for themselves but also for all saints; spiritual combat is both an individual and corporate matter.

ACTIVITIES OF DEMONS

6:12. Several activities in the Bible may involve demons. Sometimes they cause physical disease or mental suffering. However, not all mental disorders are demonic in origin. Demons also tempt people into immoral practices. They originate and propagate false doctrines taught by heretical religious groups (1 Tim. 4:1). The Bible also teaches that some people were possessed by demons (Mark 1:23). Although demons are committed to do evil, God will use them to accomplish His plan during the end of the age (Rev. 16:14). Illustration: Demons are also objects of worship in various occult practices forbidden by God. These include divination (an illegitimate means of determining the will of God), necromancy (efforts to communicate with and interrogate the dead), magic (using formulas and incantations), sorcery (perhaps the nonmedical use of drugs), witchcraft, and astrology (Deut. 18:10–12). Application: When the Ephesian Christians who were “dabbling” in the occult repented, there was a great revival in that place. No Christian can ever justify his participation in demonic activities. (First Reference, Ex. 7:11; Primary Reference, Eph. 6:12; cf. Heb. 1:4.)

6:19, 20. Paul seeks their prayers in his behalf, that (v. 19) and speak it boldly as it ought to be preached he may boldly [or, plainly] make known the ... gospel (v. 20).

6:21 Tychicus appears on five occasions in the New Testament, and in each he serves as a messenger for or representative of Paul. He is first mentioned as a delegate from his church in Asia Minor. He is bearing its offering, accompanied by Paul and others (Acts 20:4), to the impoverished Jews of Jerusalem (Rom. 15:26; 2 Cor. 8:19). Tychicus may have been won to the Lord, or at least made contact with Paul, during the apostle's three-year mission in Ephesus. At the end of that third journey of Paul, Tychicus traveled with him to Jerusalem. He remained with Paul after his imprisonment. When Paul wrote his epistles to the Ephesians and Colossians, Tychicus carried them back to his native Asia Minor (v. 21; Col. 4:7). More importantly, Paul sent Tychicus first to relieve Titus in overseeing the churches on Crete (Titus 3:12), and later to replace Timothy at Ephesus (2 Tim. 4:12) in order that the latter might minister to Paul during his second Roman imprisonment (2 Tim. 4:9, 21). (First Reference, Acts 20:4.)

PHILIPPIANS

Authorship. The epistle claims the apostle Paul for its author (1:1). The brief autobiography found in 3:5, 6 well describes the one who labored more abundantly than his contemporaries (cf. Gal. 1:14), both before and after his conversion. Not only tradition, but also vocabulary, style, doctrine, and thought patterns all point to the letter's having come from Paul's pen.

The Place of Writing. Caesarea, Ephesus, and Rome have all been proposed as locales from which Philippians was written. Of these possibilities Rome seems the best choice for the following reasons: (1) The Praetorian or imperial guard was headquartered at Rome. As a prisoner (1:7, 13, 14) Paul was placed under the surveillance of these sentries, and from him they learned of the gospel (1:12, 13). (2) His freedom while in custody to receive attendants (2:25) and gifts (4:18), to write letters, to arrange for the trips of his associates (2:19–30), and to entertain friends (4:21b) fits well with his Roman imprisonment as recorded in Acts 28:16, 30, 31. (3) The expression “they that are of Caesar’s household” (4:22) best suits Rome. Nowhere else would he have a better opportunity for meeting those employed in the emperor’s service. (4) The “many” brethren who are preaching (1:14) would readily be understood in a large city like Rome where a strong church already existed.

Destination. The letter is formally addressed “to all the saints in Christ Jesus which are at Philippi” (1:1). Its address is later confirmed by the author’s calling its recipients “Philippians” (4:15).

The City of Philippi. The city was established by, and named after, Philip of Macedon, father of Alexander the Great. After Octavian defeated Mark Antony’s army at Actium in 31 B.C., Philippi was designated as a military colony with special privileges of citizenship. This may account for the terminology used in 1:27 (politeuesthe, “to conduct oneself as a citizen”) and 3:20 (politeuma, “citizenship”). Proud of their citizenship, its inhabitants called themselves “Romans” (Acts 16:21). The official language was Latin, but the daily tongue was Greek. According to Acts 16:12 Philippi was the “chief city of that part of Macedonia.” Its importance lay not least in its being a crossroads lying on one of the main routes between Asia and Europe.

The Addressees. The planting of this church about A.D. 50, on his second missionary journey, was Paul’s first act on European soil. The history of his mission there is recorded in Acts 16:12–40. His sojourn was brief but long enough for him to fall victim to abuse and punishment. The power of his ministry was demonstrated in the deliverance of a demon-possessed girl, in the conversion of Lydia and her household, and in the salvation of the jailer and his family. To this small nucleus others were later added: Epaphroditus (2:25–30), Euodias and Syntyche (4:2), Clement, an unnamed friend, and other “fellowlaborers” (4:3). Judging from these names the church seems to have been mostly Gentile. The assembly was organized and under the oversight of its leaders, the bishops and deacons of 1:1. The congregation at Philippi quickly became the dearest of all of the apostle’s children in the faith. While Paul's relationship with some fellowships (e.g., the Corinthians and the Galatians) was at times strained, his relationship with the Philippians was apparently never marred by misunderstandings or distrust. "From the first day until now" (1:5) they had shared his interests, made his suffering their own, and participated with him in his ministry. Twice they had sent him money at Thessalonica (4:16), once at Corinth (2 Cor. 11:9), and now again at Rome (4:18). Their love for him (1:9) was reciprocated in full measure (1:7, 8). In the epistle he addresses them three times as "beloved" and calls them "brethren ... longed for," and "my joy and crown" (4:1). They are, on the whole, in good spiritual health. Their only flaw is an apparent lack of complete harmony among some of their members. Hence, Paul often summons them to unite (1:27; 2:1-4; 4:2, 3). And a potential danger lies in their enemies, thus occasioning the caution of 3:1-4:1. Despite being under persecution (1:28) and experiencing suffering (1:29, 30), they are doing well.

Date. It was not until five years after he had founded the Philippian church that Paul had the opportunity to visit it while on his third missionary trip, about A.D. 55 (Acts 20:1, 2). After three months in Corinth he paid a second visit to Philippi, spending Easter here en route to Jerusalem (Acts 20:6). After his arrest in Jerusalem (A.D. 57) and confinement in Caesarea (A.D. 57-59), he appealed to Caesar and was therefore sent to Rome (A.D. 60). From here, 10 years after planting the church at Philippi, he pens this epistle to that assembly.

Occasion. Upon learning of Paul's being sent to prison in Rome, the Philippians sent a gift of money and other helpful items to him by Epaphroditus (4:18), a member of their own congregation. In addition to delivering the gifts, he was to remain for an unspecified time to serve Paul. While ministering to the apostle, he fell ill and almost died (2:26, 27). The Philippians were distressed when they heard of his sickness, and Epaphroditus in turn grieved over their distress for him. All this added anxiety to Paul's already considerable burden. He now writes this epistle, thanking them for their gifts, and sends Epaphroditus home prematurely in order that all three parties may be relieved of unnecessary anxiety for each other. So Epaphroditus arrives back in Philippi with Paul's letter of thanks in hand.

Purpose. The primary aim of the letter is to offer sincere thanks to his beloved converts for their gifts to him. But there are a number of secondary objectives: (1) He seeks to allay their fears for him by informing them of his prison conditions (1:12-20). (2) He explains Epaphroditus's premature return home (2:25). (3) Having been informed by Epaphroditus of the discord between Euodias and Syntyche, he urges the church to live in Christian harmony. (4) He cautions them about their enemies (3:1-4:1), and (5) generally encourages them in the Lord.

Theme. The basic theme of the epistle is joy. This idea of rejoicing is found 16 times, appearing in noun forms (1:4, 25; 2:2, 29; 4:1) and verb forms (1:18, twice; 2:17, twice; 2:18, twice; 2:28; 3:1; 4:4, twice; 4:10). There is ample basis for this theme throughout the letter. There is joy in suffering, for through it God accomplishes good (1:12-14). There is joy in the sacrificial giving of oneself (2:17, 18) and of one's goods (4:18) to meet the needs of others and to do God's will, thus following Jesus' example (2:4-11). There is joy in knowing Christ and experiencing His resurrection power (3:8-10). There is joy when harmony prevails among the brethren (2:4; 4:2-5). And there is joy over the adequacy of Christ (4:13, 19), which produces contentment for every circumstance of life.

1:1. Paul and Timotheus, the servants of Jesus Christ: The definite article might imply that these men thought of themselves as Christian workers par excellence, but since the Greek text does not have the definite article (the), it should be rendered "servants [lit., 'bondservants' or 'slaves'] belonging to Christ Jesus." Saints is a technical term referring not to the spiritual elite, but to all Christians. The word means "separated ones." Believers are "separated" in a dual sense: (1) they are separated from all that is profane and set apart or reserved for God and His use; and (2) because they are separated from evil, they are morally pure and holy. Bishops are overseers, those leaders having the spiritual oversight of a local church. Their duty is to nurture, protect, and care for the flock of God. From Acts 20:17, 28 and Titus 1:5-7, we see that

"elders" and "overseers" are identical, the former title being one of status, the latter one of function. Deacons are church officials whose responsibilities were mainly administrative in nature.

1:5. For your fellowship in the gospel could also be stated, "because of your participation in the gospel." Paul thanks God (v. 3) because of the Philippians' mutual faith in the gospel, their working with him to spread this good news, their sympathy and prayers for him, and their financial support to him. He thanks God because they share with him in the gospel and his ministry. From the first day until now: From the day of its birth to the present, the Philippian assembly had shared with Paul in the gospel and its ministry. At conversion, Lydia opened her home to Paul and his evangelistic team (Acts 16:14, 15); and her home later

12 But I ¹would ye should understand, brethren, that the things which happened unto me have ²fallen out rather unto the furtherance of the gospel;

1:6. Will perform it is said “will finish it.” Paul is convinced that the work of grace that God began in the Philippians at conversion will be divinely continued until the day of Jesus Christ. That is, the Lord will keep working in these believers until Jesus returns to earth, at which point He will finish His work, bringing it to completion. This speaks of the Christian’s eternal security. For God had a purpose in view when He began His saving work in the Philippians, and that purpose will neither be abandoned nor unrealized.

1:7. Meet means “right.” I have you in my heart is an idiom meaning “I love you.” Ye all are partakers of my grace indicates that the Philippians shared in all aspects of Paul’s ministry, both the good and the difficult.

1:8. Bowels in Greek refers to the nobler human entrails or organs—the heart, liver, and lungs. By a figure of speech one word (“bowels”) is changed for another (“love”) only remotely connected with it; that is, as a man’s entrails are located deep within his body, so his strongest passions (e.g., love) come from deep within. For Paul to say that he longs for the Philippians with the “entrails of Christ” is to say that he longs for them with the love of Christ.

1:10. Things that are excellent means “things that really matter.” This refers to important issues. As the Philippians’ love increases in knowledge and discernment (v. 9), they will be able to accurately distinguish the vital and worthwhile things in life from those that are not. Contextually, the readers’ love for Paul vexes them as they are anxious over his imprisonment. He wants them to perceive his imprisonment as being among those “things that really matter” because of the good that God will bring out of it. The purpose for such discrimination is that ye may be sincere [or, morally pure] and without offence till the day of Christ.

1:11. This verse could be translated, “Filled with the fruit that is righteousness, which comes through Jesus Christ for the purpose of glorifying and praising God.” The believer who is pure and without offense before God (v. 10) has divinely developed in him a practical “righteousness” or daily moral life that measures up to God’s standards in character and conduct. The ultimate purpose for this “righteousness” is to glorify God.

1:12. Things ... have fallen out means “have occurred.” Paul tells the readers that his imprisonment has occurred for the purpose of furthering or spreading the gospel. The word rather suggests that the Philippians were anticipating the reception of bad news as a result of Paul’s captivity. He informs them rather to the contrary. In His wisdom and sovereignty God has deliberately designed His servant’s present circumstances, as undesirable as they may be, for the gospel’s benefit. Two positive results of Paul’s imprisonment are given in verses 13, 14: (1) Caesar’s palace learned the gospel from him (v. 13); and (2) many Roman Christians were stirred to preach the gospel during his bondage (v. 14).

1:13. This verse is better translated, “So that my imprisonment has been recognized as being because of my commitment to Christ, in all the palace and in all other places.” All eventually realized that Paul was no criminal, but an evangelist with a pure and blameless life. They also perceived that his incarceration was caused by no crime on his part, but because

SANCTIFICATION

1:6. The word sanctification means “to be set apart.” The Holy Spirit is attempting to make the believer holy (set apart) and spiritual (reflecting the character of God). This is being accomplished in three phases. First, the believer is forgiven and set apart to God at his conversion (positional sanctification). Second, the believer is constantly being set apart from sin when he utilizes the means of grace (e.g., the Word and prayer) in his life (progressive sanctification). Third, complete sanctification begins at death, or at the Rapture, and is completed when the believer’s spirit is reunited with his resurrection body. Application: We Christians should recognize that God uses all things to accomplish His purpose of making us like Jesus; therefore we should cooperate with the Holy Spirit (Rom. 8:28, 29). (First Reference, Gen. 2:3; Primary Reference, Rom. 8; cf. Matt. 12:31, 32.)

14 And ¹many of the brethren in the Lord, ²waxing confident by my ³bonds, are much more bold to speak the word without fear.

15 Some indeed preach Christ even of envy and strife; and some also of good will:

16 The one preach Christ of ¹contention, not sincerely, supposing to add affliction to my ²bonds:

1:14. Waxing confident means "depending on." The whole verse could be rendered, "And the majority of the brethren, depending on the Lord, because of my imprisonment have much more courage to speak the word fearlessly." The Roman believers were aroused by Paul's bonds and, relying upon the Lord for enablement, were more courageous than before to spread the gospel in and around Rome. The whole church, thus stirred, did more in spreading the Good News than Paul could have done by himself had he not been in jail.

1:15–17. Contention here means "selfish ambition." Some of those sharing the gospel were doing so with the proper motive, but other believers were preaching for the wrong reasons. The right motivation is love—love for God, for Paul, and love for unbelievers. Improper motives are envy, strife (v. 15), and selfish ambition. Some egotistical Christians were jealous of the apostle and rejoiced over his imprisonment, for it gave them opportunity to be in the limelight. Supposing to add affliction to his bonds: They hoped that when Paul learned of their being the center of attention, his chains would become particularly galling to him.

1:18. Whether in pretence, or in truth refers to the two kinds of motives for preaching. "Pretense" concerns those pretending to witness for the right reason, but really doing so because of envy, strife, and selfish ambition. "Truth" means sincerity, and it refers to those who were sincere in their motivation for preaching. Paul was so selfless and so concerned for Christ that, whether the preaching came from proper or improper motives, he rejoiced in the truth being proclaimed. To be sure, he was grieved over the wrong motives of some, but to him motivation was secondary, while propagation of the truth was primary.

1:19. This shall turn to my salvation is the same as, "this will lead to my deliverance." The word "this" refers to "Christ is preached" in verse 18, but in that verse the preaching is being done by others. Here it refers to Paul's future preaching. He believes, then, that the preaching God has for him still to do will lead to his "deliverance" from prison. Supply of the Spirit (or, "the help given by the Spirit"): Paul's release from confinement will not come automatically, but will be obtained through your prayer, and the supply of the Spirit of Jesus Christ.

1:20. Paul's probable release from prison (v. 19) is according to or in line with his own heart's desire (earnest expectation and my hope). His hope is, negatively, that he may not be ashamed of Jesus, and, positively, that Christ shall be magnified. When Christ is "magnified," He is brought into larger, clearer focus (understanding) on the part of others. They better understand Him, His ways, and His will. The Lord is then better loved, obeyed, served, and glorified. As a prisoner, Paul remembers that Caesar's verdict may well go against him, resulting in his execution. So he adds, whether it be by life, or by death. His objective, to magnify Jesus, is of paramount importance; whether it be accomplished by living or dying is immaterial.

1:21. For explains why Paul is just as happy to magnify the Lord by death as by life (v. 20). It is because to him, to live is Christ. He means that living consists in serving and glorifying the Son of God; apart from this his life has neither meaning nor purpose. But why is Paul just as content to magnify Christ by death? Because to him to die is gain; that is, even though living and serving God are good, death is a graduation to something better: it is a promotion to the heavenly presence of Christ and perfect fellowship with Him.

1:22. Read the verse thus: "But should I continue living in the flesh, this will result in fruit [gain, profit] from my labor; yet which [of the two] I will prefer, I know not." In verse 21 Paul speaks of two desirable possibilities—living and dying. Living is attractive, since it affords possibilities to increase fruit or spiritual gain in his apostolic labors. But because dying is "gain," he is unsure of which of the two he prefers.

1:23. I am in a strait betwixt two, or "I am hard-pressed between the two." As in a tug-of-war, Paul is torn between the two desirable possibilities of living and dying. To depart is a euphemism for dying. To be with Christ signifies to be forever with Christ. Of the two options, dying is far better.

24 Nevertheless to abide in the flesh is more needful for you.

1:24. In this verse the writer turns from his own wishes to his responsibility, from what he wants to do to what he must do. While he personally yearns to be with the Lord, Paul senses it would be to the advantage of the Philippians for him to remain on earth awhile longer in order to minister to them.

1:25. This confidence refers to his conviction in verse 24 that he will continue to live for their benefit. For your furtherance and joy of faith means “for the purpose of your progress and joy with regard to the faith.” Paul believes that God will preserve his life so that he can help the readers progress spiritually.

1:26. This could be translated, “That your confidence in Christ may continue to abound because of me, by my coming again to you.” Paul’s future ministry to the Philippians should increase their confidence in the Lord.

1:27. Only let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel means “only conduct yourselves worthily of the gospel.” That ye stand fast in one spirit, with one mind: That is, the church was to look and act as though she possessed but “one mind” and one way of thinking. To achieve this the assembly must put away their many petty grievances, jealousies, and disunity. The manner in which the Philippians are to stand fast in one spirit is by their striving together for the faith, that is, by their standing up for the Christian faith. Like Paul they, too, are to expend their lives for the good of the gospel. But proper conduct on their part and unity in the church are essential if they are to benefit the gospel.

1:28. One of the ways in which the readers’ proper conduct benefits the gospel (v. 27) is mentioned here:

not being terrified by their adversaries. The lack of intimidation is a twofold sign: (1) to unbelievers it is evidence of their lost condition; (2) to believers it is an assurance of their salvation.

1:29. For reinforces the assertion that the proof of the believers’ salvation, provided through their courage in persecution, comes from God. This justification lies in the fact of the Philippians’ being divinely granted the dual privilege of believing in Christ and suffering for Him. Thus the assurance of their salvation is from God, just as is their suffering for Jesus, for the latter was the occasion providing the former.

1:30. Some of the recipients’ persecution was of the same nature as they witnessed in Paul when he was beaten and imprisoned in Philippi 10 years earlier, and similar to what they now hear him to be currently experiencing in Rome.

2:1. Therefore resumes the thought begun in 1:27, 28, namely, that the Philippians are to be “worthy” and steadfast in unity, striving together for the gospel’s progress. The word if, occurring four times in this verse, denotes fact, not doubt; it might then be translated “since.” Paul is thus affirming that in Christ there exist consolation (encouragement); comfort of love (solace furnished by love); fellowship of the Spirit (partaking of the Holy Spirit’s life and sharing in His gifts, ministry, help, values, etc.); bowels (affection); and mercies (sympathy). This verse forms the basis for Paul’s appeal in verse 2: “Fulfill ye my joy.” His thinking is this: Since these five benefits or virtues exist in Christ, and since you are Christians, then exercise these virtues toward one another as you contend for the gospel and face opposition.

FELLOWSHIP

1:27. Fellowship, one of the keys to spiritual growth, occurs when Christians share their walk with God in an atmosphere of love and respect. Fellowship occurs when everyone communicates in love with other believers, and the whole assembly becomes strengthened as a result.

Sometimes fellowship requires confessing our faults (James 5:16) as we strive to develop a unity of spirit and mind. Those who work to hinder the fellowship of the brethren practice a sin that is hated by God (Prov. 6:19). Illustration: The church at Philippi was particularly noted for its spirit of fellowship, but Paul’s warning to two women in the church reminds how we must constantly work to maintain fellowship (4:1-3). Application: Fellowship is so vital that we cannot live for God by ourselves. As we develop deeper relationships with others, we should remember that we come to resemble those with whom we fellowship. (First Reference, Matt. 18:19; Primary Reference, Phil. 1:27; cf. Rom. 6:4-10.)

2:2-4. Fulfill ye my joy (or, "Make my joy complete"): Paul rejoiced over the Philippians (1:3), but his happiness was incomplete, owing to some disunity and lack of total harmony among them. The Greek equates what, to Paul, constitutes "complete joy" with the readers being likeminded. This means "living in harmony" with one another. That is, the Philippians can "fulfill" the writer's "joy" by living in harmony among themselves. But what does such harmonious living entail? Beginning in verse 2 and continuing through verse 4, six participles spell out and clearly define what it means to "live in harmony": (1) having the same love toward one believer as shown toward another, without partiality; (2) being of one accord; that is, they are to be united in spirit; (3) of one mind; that is, the whole church is to have the same values, and goals; (4) let nothing be done through strife or vainglory, for selfish ambition or conceit; (5) let each esteem other better than themselves; that is, each is to regard his fellow Christian as more important than himself; and (6) look ... every man also on the things of others; that is, each is to be just as concerned for the needs and problems of his brother as he is for his own affairs.

2:5. Let this mind be in you means literally, "keep thinking this," that is, constantly maintain this attitude within yourselves. The "mind" or attitude the Philippians are to maintain is spelled out in verses 2c-4, which constitutes harmonious living. Paul informs his readers that the same attitude of verses 2c-4, which they are to retain within themselves, was also in Christ Jesus.

2:6-8. These famous verses substantiate the assertion of verse 5b that Jesus did indeed have within Himself the same attitude of verses 2c-4 which the readers of Paul's letters are also to maintain within themselves. Verses 6-8 may be translated as follows: "For He, though eternally possessing the divine nature, did not regard His existing-in-a-manner-equal-with-God [i.e., His heavenly existence or divine lifestyle] as something to be [selfishly] maintained, but He emptied Himself in that He assumed a servant's nature and appeared in the likeness of men; and having been recognized in outward form as a man, He humbled Himself in becoming obedient unto death, even death by crucifixion." Being in the form of God signifies that Christ has eternally possessed the very nature of God. To own the nature of God is to be God and to be equal with the other personalities of the Godhead (namely, the Father and the Spirit). Thought it not robbery to be equal with God means that Christ decided not to continue enjoying His heavenly existence; He enjoyed the same divine life-style in heaven that God enjoyed. Though the Son could have lawfully maintained this heavenly existence, He did not. Rather He assumed a servant's position and appeared in the likeness of men. Consequently, being judged by His fashion (outward appearance) He was recognized by many people as a mere man. But He was much more than that—He was still the Son of God, who continued to possess the divine nature. Why did Jesus willingly give up His divine existence with all its benefits and advantages? Because He had within Himself the attitude of verses 2c-4: He regarded sinners as more important than Himself (v. 3), and was just as concerned with their needs as with His own affairs (v. 4). So the Philippians were to cultivate within themselves this same attitude and express it to one another.

2:9-11. These verses reveal God's response to Jesus' sacrifice of verses 6-8. The Father hath highly exalted him to a place of honor, and made His name above, that is, "more excellent than" every name. The name that is above all others is "Jesus." There are three purposes for Jesus' exaltation: (1) That every being in the universe might someday submit to Him.

KENOSIS

2:7. The word kenosis is the Greek word for "emptying" and is related to the verb translated here as "made himself of no reputation," which literally means "He emptied Himself." Christ emptied Himself by: (1) veiling His glory and (2) taking on Himself a true but sinless human nature, and (3) voluntarily submitting to the will of the Father. Illustration: At all times, Christ remained God, retaining the nature and attributes of God, but taking a human nature in order to have a ministry among men. On the few occasions when His glory was more fully revealed during His ministry, those who saw it were unable to bear it (cf. Matt. 17:6; John 18:6). Application: The apostle Paul urges that the attitude of humility (which led to the kenosis) ought to characterize every Christian (v. 5). (First Reference, Phil. 2:7; Primary Reference, Phil. 2:7; cf. John 1:14.)

(2) That, in addition to the future universal submission (v. 10), there might also someday be a universal confession that Jesus Christ is Lord. On earth Jesus is recognized by many to be no more than man (v. 8), yet in the future all will acknowledge Him to be Lord, that is, God. The ultimate purpose for Jesus' glorification is (3) to the glory of God the Father (v. 11), for His honor.

2:12. Work out your own salvation does not mean that you should work for salvation in order to obtain it. The Greek phrase "work out" denotes the expression, manifestation, or actualization of something one already possesses. The Philippians are to "work out" the salvation God has already wrought in them (v. 13), carrying it to its logical conclusion. God has granted them salvation not just for their own profit, but for the good of others as well. If they work out and manifest the new life divinely worked in them, they will live lives worthy of the gospel (1:27), in harmony with each other (v. 2), seeking the progress of the gospel. They will also regard one another as more important than themselves (v. 3), be concerned with the needs of their fellows (v. 4), and make the appropriate sacrifices in obedience to God, as did Jesus. In doing all this they will work out or express the new life they have through Christ.

2:13. For gives two reasons why the Philippians are to work out their salvation (v. 12). First, as a note of encouragement, the working out of their salvation is not so much their work as it is God's. It is God which worketh in you, so their ministry and service cannot help but succeed. Second, they must work out their salvation "with fear and trembling" (v. 12). For God is producing in them both to will [to desire] and to do [actually accomplish] of his good pleasure. Why should the desiring and doing of God's will be a matter of "fear and trembling"? Because one may not know all the sacrifices required of him in doing God's wishes. God's will for the Philippians involved "conflict" (1:30); for Jesus, death (v. 8); for Paul, imprisonment and possible martyrdom (v. 17); for Timothy, costly sacrificial service (v. 20); and for Epaphroditus, physical illness "nigh unto death" (v. 27).

2:14. Since God is producing in the Philippians the willing and doing of His good and perfect will (v.

13), there can be no legitimate reason for murmurings and disputings. Not only are they forbidden to complain about the difficulties and persecutions that will befall them in carrying out God's good pleasure, but quarreling among themselves is also prohibited.

2:15. If the readers obey the commands of verses 12–14, they will be [become] blameless [i.e., no finger of accusation can justly be pointed at them] and harmless (i.e., morally pure). Due to party strife and bickering, this is not now true of them. As the sons of God ... in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation (generation), they are to be without rebuke—without incurring spiritual damage. The proper place for God's people is among the lost. For only in such a position can true Christian witness be borne and influence for the gospel be effectively exerted. Yet believers must remain "without rebuke" in that they suffer no moral damage by contact with the unsaved. Then among unbelievers they will shine as lights in the world. As stars are readily noticeable in a dark sky, so healthy Christian lives stand out in testimony among the lost and give credence to one's witness.

2:16. Holding forth means "offering." As a healthy church, the Philippian assembly is to "offer" the word of life. That I have not run in vain: Their godly behavior and fruitful witness will demonstrate on Judgment Day that Paul's ministry in Philippi was effective.

2:17. This verse may be paraphrased, "Yes, though I will probably be martyred for the benefit of the sacrificial ministry produced by your faith, I rejoice and will rejoice with all of you." Paul senses that eventually, perhaps at a later date, he will be called upon to give up his life in service. Such sacrifice will benefit the Philippians' own sacrificial ministry, which they are conducting for the Lord. As his imprisonment has aroused the Roman brethren to more zealous preaching (1:14), so his martyrdom would similarly profit the present readers' ministry.

2:18. As Paul rejoices over his ministry, so they must do the same over theirs, demanding and sacrificial though it may be. And the Philippians must also rejoice, as Paul does over his ministry, though it involves imprisonment and probable martyrdom. How can Paul rejoice over premature death in the Lord's work? Because "to die is gain" (1:21).

2:20. Likeminded: Paul has no one else like Timothy who possesses the mental framework and spiritual disposition so much in keeping with Paul's own.

2:21. All seek their own: Paul must dispatch his right-hand man Timothy to Philippi because none of the Roman Christians are willing to undertake the mission. They all pursue their own interests, not Christ's. Despite their zealous witness in and around Rome, they refuse to venture further afield for the Lord's work.

2:22. The proof of him is better said, "his proven character."

2:23. Paul will send Timothy to Philippi with news of his verdict as soon as he learns of it.

2:26. He ... was full of heaviness means "he was distressed."

2:27. Sorrow upon sorrow means that if Epaphroditus had died, that would have added further sorrow to the apostle's already present sorrow of imprisonment.

2:28. That I may be the less sorrowful means that the burden of Paul's own detainment and possible death remains, but the Philippians' joy over the return of Epaphroditus will lessen the apostle's grief.

2:29. Receive him ... in the Lord means that the Philippians are to welcome Epaphroditus home from Rome with a heartfelt Christian reception. Hold such in reputation is an imperative to the readers to hold in high esteem such Christian servants as Epaphroditus who are selfless in concern for others and who willingly risk their lives in serving the Lord.

2:30. Not regarding his life is better said, "risking his life." In ministering to Paul in Rome, Epaphroditus became so ill that he almost died. The reason he thus "risked his life" was in order to supply your lack of service toward me, that is, to make up for the Philippians' inability to aid Paul due to their being many miles from him.

3:1. Finally is a transitional word that might be rendered "as for the rest" or "in addition." It turns from the old subject just discussed in 2:19-30 (i.e., the coming visits of Timothy and Epaphroditus) to a new subject in 3:1-4:1 (i.e., the readers' religious enemies). To write the same things refers to matters that Paul touches on again and again, namely, the call to rejoice found throughout the epistle, and the repeated warnings about their adversaries (1:28-30; 3:1-4:1).

3:2. Paul warns the Philippians against dogs which are then described as evil workers and lastly as the concision. These three epithets refer to Judaizers. These were Jews who professed to be Christians. They preached that unless one is circumcised according to the custom of Moses, one cannot be saved (Acts 15:1). Their chief weapon was persuasion rather than persecution, and they were one of the chief dangers to the early church. They are figuratively called "dogs." To the eastern mind this animal was the most despised, shameless, and miserable creature, a scavenger roaming the streets and feeding on refuse. As Jews held Gentiles in disdain, often calling them "dogs," Paul similarly regards the Judaizing party. The apostle refuses to call Judaizers "the concision," the very expression applied in verse 3 to genuine Christians. Instead he calls them "the concision," meaning, those who mutilate or cut the flesh. Judaizers mutilated the flesh by imposing circumcision on their converts, believing the ritual to be necessary for salvation. But the true "circumcision" consists of those circumcised of heart, not of body, recognizing the ritual to have been abrogated by Christ. Circumcision of the body no longer had spiritual value and significance.

3 For we are ^athe circumcision, ^bwhich worship God in the ¹spirit, and rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh.

4 Though ^aI might also have confidence in the flesh. If any other man thinketh that he hath whereof he might trust in the flesh, I ^bmore:

7 But ^awhat things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ.

8 Yea doubtless, and I count all things ^{but} loss ^afor the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them ^{but} ¹dung, that I may win Christ,

9 And be found in him, not having ^amine own righteousness, which is of the law, but ^bthat which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith:

3:3. The circumcision or true people of God are described here in three ways: (1) They are those who worship God in the spirit. Their worship of God is prompted, directed, and enabled by the Holy Spirit. (2) Real Christians also rejoice in Christ. They boast and take pride in Him, not in themselves. (3) They have no confidence in the flesh. "Flesh" here means one's earthly privileges, human attainments, and religious accomplishments. God's people refuse to depend on such things for their salvation; instead, they rely upon Christ to obtain favor with God.

3:4. Any other man refers to Paul's religious opponent, the Judaizer. Having just stated that Christians do not confide in human merit and religious achievements (v. 3), the apostle now shows that as far as one might do this, he himself could but does not. Paul draws back the curtain on his past Jewish life, lists his religious credentials, places himself on the Judaizers' ground, and adopting their language, speaks of himself as having that very thing—"the flesh," or human and religious merit—which he in fact has rejected. He does this for two reasons: (1) to prevent his adversaries from alleging that his refusal to trust in religious credentials and accomplishments is due to his lack of them; and (2) to refute the Judaizers' doctrine of there being any saving value in such human achievements.

3:5, 6. Paul lists seven of his religious credentials or "bragging rights" on which he dares not rely for salvation: (1) He was circumcised the eighth day. The writer begins with the ritual that was central in the Judaizers' teaching. Unlike the Ishmaelite who was circumcised after his thirteenth year, and the proselyte who was circumcised in adulthood, Paul had the rite performed on him by punctilious parents in accord with the letter of the law. (2) Of the stock of Israel means he was from the nation of Israel. Israel was the covenant name of God's ancient people. The Israelites' descent from Abraham was shared with the Ishmaelites; his descent from Isaac was shared with the Edomites; but the Israelite alone could claim to descend from Jacob or Israel who wrestled with God and prevailed. (3) Of the tribe of Benjamin means he was a member of one of the two most prestigious of the 12 Jewish tribes. (4) An Hebrew of the Hebrews means he was a true-blooded Jew coming from a pure line of Jews, tainted with no Gentile admixture. And his ancestors had, to some degree, retained the Hebrew language and customs, thus showing fidelity to the old culture. (5) As touching the law (or, "regarding the law") tells us that as a Pharisee Paul belonged to the denomination that was the most orthodox defender, observer, and expounder of the Old Testament, and was a former student of their great teacher Gamaliel (Acts 22:3). (6) Persecuting the church refers to his being so zealous for the Jewish religion that he once persecuted Jesus' followers to stamp out Christianity. And (7) touching the righteousness which is in the law, blameless (or: Paul is saying here, "concerning righteousness which is in accord with the law, I was blameless"), that is, outwardly, no one could fault him for failing to keep any point of the law.

3:7. Loss means detriment. On the Damascus road Paul came to realize that what things were gain to him—the seven religious credentials listed in verses 5 and 6—were actually detriments or liabilities. Trusting in all these religious privileges and human attainments for salvation had not brought him closer to God, but farther away from Him.

3:8. Not only does Paul view those seven credentials as loss, but expanding this idea he also regards all things (i.e., any such human works and religious attainments on which one might depend to secure a place in heaven) as dung or excrement. As one rids himself of his body waste, so did the apostle rid himself of his "gains" upon realizing that they cut him off from God. I have suffered the loss (or, "I have forfeited") means Paul willingly renounced all his earthly advantages and Jewish privileges as a means of attaining salvation. That I may win Christ means that Paul might make Jesus his Savior and be saved. He had to abandon his "gains" that he might "gain" salvation. One cannot be saved as long as he confides in his own efforts and accomplishments; these must be renounced before he can believe in Christ as Savior.

3:9. And be found in him (or, "and in order that I might be recognized as being in Christ"): Paul renounced his religious credentials so that he could "win Christ" (v. 8) or be saved, and so he would be "recognized" (acknowledged) by God as being "in Christ" or being rightly related to Christ. Through the faith of Christ, that is, divine righteousness is imputed to the repentant sinner through his believing in Christ and depending on Him alone—and not on his good works—for salvation. The righteousness which is of God by faith (or, "the righteousness from God on the basis of faith"). God grants the sinner divine righteousness because of, or "on the basis of" his faith in Jesus.

10 That I may know him, and the ^apower of his resurrection, and ^bthe fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death;

11 If by any means I might ^aattain¹ unto the resurrection of the dead.

12 Not as though I had already ^aattained,¹ either were already ^bperfect: but I ²follow after, if that I may ³apprehend that for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus.

3:15 ^a Matt. 5:48; 1 Cor. 2:6 ^b Gal. 5:10 ^c Hos. 6:3; James 1:5 ¹ mature

3:10. This verse may also be paraphrased: “In order that I may personally know Him, that I might both experience His resurrection power and share in His sufferings, and thus I will be more and more conformed to His death.” Paul wants “the righteousness ... of God” (v. 9) so that he can obtain a personal relationship with Jesus in actual day-to-day experience. This knowledge of Christ is obtained by experiencing in daily problems, needs, ministry, and so forth, the same power that raised Jesus from the dead. Knowing Christ also entails participating in His sufferings. Paul desires to share in the Lord’s sufferings because they bring him into a deeper and more meaningful relation with Him; companionship in sorrow establishes the most intimate and lasting of ties, as afflicted hearts cling to each other. The result of participating in Christ’s sufferings is that Paul is being made like Him in death. This word “death” has double meaning here, including inward and outward, ethical and physical death. As Jesus died in regard to sin on the cross, so Paul is doing more and more in his daily life. As Jesus was bodily slain, so the apostle, should Caesar’s verdict go against him, is prepared to be slain.

3:11. If by any means I might attain means “in order that I may attain” the resurrection from the dead. Like the preceding verse, this one also contains a literal and a non-literal interpretation. Paul is eager to become more like Jesus in His death (v. 10) so that he can (1) progressively experience more of the believer’s resurrection life to be enjoyed now (“newness of life,” Rom. 6:4), and (2) so that he can someday undergo physical resurrection from the grave, thus experiencing God’s power in one of its greatest aspects.

3:12. Paul denies that he has already attained his objective of verses 10 and 11. That objective is to know Christ and all that is included in this knowledge, that is, experiencing His power, sharing His sufferings, being made like Jesus in death, and experiencing resurrection from the dead. At this point in his life the apostle does know Christ, but not to the full extent possible. He has experienced His power, but not to the degree he desires. He has been made like Jesus in His death, but he can die still more to sin and self. He does “walk in newness of life,” but there is room for improvement. Either were already perfect: Unlike the perfectionists who claim to be sinless in this life, Paul admits that he is not. If the chief of the apostles does not feel he has “arrived” spiritually, then neither should we. I follow after ... Christ Jesus: Christ “laid hold of” Paul on the Damascus road for the very objective mentioned in verses 10 and 11: to “know him.” Paul concedes that he has not yet realized this goal to the full extent possible, but he is in hot pursuit of it.

3:13. Those things which are behind refers both to his religious credentials (vv. 5, 6), now counted as “loss” (v. 7), and to his past Christian achievements and successes. In ever pursuing his goal to know Christ (v. 10), he refuses to let past guilt pull him down, or to rest on past laurels. Either could spell spiritual disaster. Those things which are before refers to his goal of knowing Christ, with all that implies: experiencing His power and participating in His suffering, becoming more like Him in death (v. 10), and experiencing the resurrected life (v. 11).

3:14. The mark is the objective of verses 10 and 11 (i.e., knowing Christ). The prize is the joyful personal satisfaction of having attained it, as well as the divine commendation and reward to be granted in heaven for having reached this goal on earth. The high calling of God is the divine summons extended to the believer for salvation.

3:15. Be thus minded literally means “let us think this” or “let us hold this opinion.” Mature Christians must realize that they are not ethically perfect, but they tirelessly press onward for higher spiritual attainments (vv. 13, 14). There is present, then, a bit of irony: perfect (mature) believers are those who admit they are not perfect in any absolute sense. The apostle urges all mature Philippian Christians to hold his attitude, conceding that none has yet “spiritually arrived”

CALL OF GOD

3:14. The call of God is His summons upon the life of His creatures. God’s call has a threefold emphasis. First, He calls all men everywhere to repentance, that is, the call to salvation (Acts 17:30). Second, all Christians are called to complete dedication (1 Cor. 1:9). Third, God calls us to a specific sphere of service or ministry, or a “holy calling” (2 Tim. 1:9). Illustration: The Gospels record three “calls” of Christ to His disciples, each illustrating some aspect of the call of God (cf. John 1:35–51; Luke 5:1–11; Matt. 10:1–5). At times God calls one to be a Christian (Rom. 1:6; 1 Cor. 1:9), at times God calls us to sanctification (1 Cor. 3:4), and at other times God calls His servants to special service (Acts 13:2). Application: When a Christian senses the call of God in some area of his life, he should quickly respond. (First Reference, Gen. 12:1; Primary Reference, Phil. 3:14; cf. Matt. 28:19.)

16 Nevertheless, ¹whereto we have already ²attained, ^alet us walk ^bby the same rule, let us ³mind the same thing.

but ever pressing on toward further development. If... ye be otherwise minded: The writer realizes that not all of the Philippian readers agree with his conviction of verses 12–15. But he is confident that God shall reveal their erroneous thinking to them.

3:16. Whereto we have already attained refers to whatever level of Christian knowledge and spiritual maturity the Philippians have attained since conversion. They are to walk by the same rule, that is, live in accord with this same level of knowledge and maturity, if God is going to give them further light. Fidelity to truth possessed is a condition for receiving more.

3:17. Mark them which walk so as ye have us for an ensample: Paul asks the Philippians to imitate him. Due to his absence they cannot observe him, so he tells them to imitate those among them who live as he does.

3:18, 19. For provides the first reason the readers should emulate the apostle's life: there are many professing Christians whose worldly, hedonistic life-style can corrupt them unless they imitate Paul. These enemies of the cross are described in four ways: (1) Their end or destiny is destruction, that is, eternal punishment. (2) Their God is their belly. In submitting to and being controlled by their earthly nature, they worship their sensual desires by surrendering themselves to gluttony, sexual immorality, licentiousness, and all manner of unbridled lusts. (3) Their glory or reputation consists in their shame—they are well known indeed, their renown being that of ignominy. (4) Their mind is constantly on earthly rather than heavenly things.

3:20. For gives a second reason for the command in verse 17 to imitate Paul. It is because our conversation [citizenship] is in heaven. The apostle's point is that if they emulate him, they will live like citizens of heaven. But if they fail to follow Paul's example, and if they are unduly occupied with "enemies of the cross" (v. 18), the Philippians will not live like citizens of heaven.

3:21. When Jesus returns for His people, He shall change our vile [humble] body. The word change denotes external change—our "humble" bodies will undergo an outward transformation, without destruction of individuality. Our new bodies will be fashioned [conformed, made] like unto his glorious body. The word fashioned denotes internal change—we will experience an inward transformation of nature, as God makes us in character perfectly like His Son. That power by which God is able even to subdue all things [i.e., the universe] unto himself is the same power that will be used to transform believers.

4:1. Therefore concludes that the recipients should stand fast, or "persevere," in their relationship with Christ, not allowing the Judaizers (3:2–11), perfectionists (3:12–16), or hedonists (3:17–21) to disrupt their Christian walk.

4:2. That they be of the same mind (or, "to live in harmony"): Euodias and Syntyche were at odds with one another over some matter(s).

4:3. True yokefellow (comrade) refers to some unidentified friend of Paul. He would undoubtedly recognize this personal request to help these two women become reconciled to one another. Whose names are in the book of life: The point of mentioning all believers having their names recorded in "the book of life" is this: since Christians (Euodias and Syntyche in particular) will all someday live together forever harmoniously in heaven, they should begin to do so now upon earth.

4:4. The mention of believers' names being recorded in heaven (v. 3) causes the author to write rejoice in the Lord always. Harmony among church members, as Paul assumes will be the result of his plea in verses 2 and 3, is another reason to "rejoice." In adding and again I say, Rejoice, it is as though the apostle looks into the future, considers all possibilities of sorrow, and in spite of them all repeats "the command." This command to rejoice at all times and in all circumstances is nothing less than a call to faith. For if the Christian believes that his life and all its circumstances are in the hands of a sovereign, wise, and loving God who is always working to accomplish good for him, then he can indeed “rejoice always.”

4:5. Moderation means “graciousness” or “sweet reasonableness.” The believer who is at peace with his fellow Christian (v. 2) and who rejoices always (v. 4) is indeed a gracious, reasonable person. The Lord is at hand means two things. First, His return to earth is near. His imminent coming as judge encourages the Christian to be “gracious” unto all men, for He will judge the believer for all of his actions toward all people, and will avenge all wrongs committed by others against him. Second, the “Lord is at hand” spiritually. The Lord’s being presently near should free the Christian from fear and anxiety. Hence the command of verse 6.

4:6. Be careful for nothing means “don’t worry about anything.” The Lord’s nearness (v. 5b) leads Paul to forbid his readers from worrying. This is no summons to irresponsibility or an invitation to dismiss legitimate concern. The solution to undue anxiety is prayer in every thing, “in any matter of life.” The way to be free of anxiety is to be prayerful about everything. While God is eager to hear our requests, they are to be accompanied with thanksgiving.

4:7. The peace of God is that tranquility of mind freeing the believer from fear and worry. “Peace” which passeth all understanding means (1) peace divinely bestowed in times of anxiety, so wonderful that it exceeds one’s ability to understand it; and (2) God’s peace far surpassing one’s own understanding of the problem, and his ability to cope with and solve it. Shall keep means “shall guard.” This is a military term for a sentinel standing guard duty. As Philippi was guarded by a Roman garrison, and its citizens were accustomed to seeing soldiers protecting the city, this word would be especially appreciated by the readers.

4:8, 9. Finally could be rendered “in this connection,” since verses 6–9 are related: verses 6 and 7 tell how to obtain God’s peace; verses 8 and 9 tell how to keep it. In order to keep God’s peace, the readers must occupy their minds with the right things (v. 8) and busy themselves with the right activities (v. 9).

4:10. Wherein ye were also careful, or, “regarding your care for me, you really were concerned”: Paul acknowledges that they were concerned about his needs all along, but they lacked opportunity to minister to him.

4:11. Not that I speak in respect [because] of want: Paul’s ability to be content despite the circumstances assures the readers that his joy of verse 10 is not solely over his “need” being met at their expense. He implies that he could have done without their financial aid. For justifies this implication. I have learned ... to be content: The Greek here suggests that contentment is a lesson learned neither in a classroom nor overnight, but through many practical experiences in life.

4:12. By listing some specific examples, this verse elaborates upon the very general and broad “in whatsoever state I am” of verse 11. Be abased means literally to discipline oneself, that is, to tighten the belt in lean times. To abound means to live in prosperity. Every where and in all things I am instructed (or, “in all circumstances I have learned the secret of how”) to be full, that is, “well-fed.” To abound means to have plenty. To suffer need means to go without. Paul has acquired the skill required for successfully living with little and with much, the latter probably being harder: “For one man who can stand prosperity, there are a hundred that will stand adversity” (Thomas Carlyle).

4:13. The apostle’s ability of knowing how to live skillfully on little or in prosperity does not mean that he is a spiritual superman. The reason he can live in such extremes is not owing to his own ability. Rather he can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth him, thus enabling him to adapt to his various, ever-changing circumstances. God orders Paul’s various situations, and God gives him the strength to be content in them all, trying and perplexing though they may be.

4:14. Here communicate means to "share." Paul's ability to be content in all circumstances (vv. 11, 12) may be misinterpreted by the Philippians. They may conclude that, since he can live just as well in poverty as in prosperity (v. 12), perhaps the money they sent him was wasted. So he hastens to assure them that they did well in sharing or meeting his financial needs.

4:15, 16. Paul informs the Philippians that he is still appreciative of the gifts they sent long ago while he ministered in Macedonia. Since he remains grateful for that aid given years ago, it stands to reason that he is appreciative of their latest help received recently in Rome.

4:17. Again Paul wants to prevent the readers from thinking that his gratitude expressed in verses 14–16 smacks of greed on his part for their money. So he assures them that he is not so much after their gift as the fruit that may abound [accrue] to their account.

Their gifts to the apostle are a sure investment in the work and treasures of heaven, each one yielding rich dividends.

4:18. I have all means that Paul has received their gifts. And abound signifies that he has plenty, since all needs are now met through their generosity. God looks on their gift to Paul as an odour of a sweet smell (a fragrant scent) and a sacrifice acceptable, well-pleasing.

4:19. Because the Lord is aware of the sacrifice (v. 18) the Philippians made in meeting Paul's needs, God will surely supply all their need. God will meet their "need" (1) according to his riches, that is, in proportion to His unlimited resources; (2) in glory, that is, He will meet their need "gloriously" or "in a splendid manner"; and (3) by Christ Jesus.

4:22. They that are of Caesar's household: These are servants in the emperor's service.

COLOSSIANS

Authorship. This letter was written by Paul, an apostle of Jesus Christ (1:1). Though he did not personally know the recipients, Paul was acquainted with them through Epaphras. Epaphras probably planted the church in Colossae, judging from the fact that the believers there first learned the gospel from him (1:7). Afterwards he served as their minister and informed the apostle of their conversion (1:7, 8).

Place of Writing. Colossians was likely penned, as were Ephesians, Philippians, and Philemon, during Paul's first imprisonment at Rome (1:24; 4:18). The numerous parallels of vocabulary and matters discussed in Ephesians and Colossians link these epistles together. Also, there are many personal references common to Philemon and Colossians.

Destination. The letter is addressed to the church at Colossae (1:2), a town in Asia Minor about one hundred miles east of Ephesus and 12 miles south of Laodicea and Hierapolis. Colossae had once been a thriving trade center, but its commercial influence was waning in Paul's day. From Ephesians 6:21 and Colossians 4:7 it seems that Tychicus delivered both of these epistles to their respective destinations.

The Recipients. The Colossian Christians had been led to Christ by Epaphras (1:7). The majority were Gentiles (2:13) who were progressing in their new faith. Paul rejoiced over their good spiritual condition (2:5), but the Colossian church was being exposed to a local heresy that threatened to deprive them of their spiritual blessings (2:8, 18).

Occasion of Writing. Epaphras either visited Paul in Rome or was imprisoned there with him (Philem. 23). In either case, he informed Paul of the dangerous theological error circulating in the churches of Colossae and Laodicea. In response to Epaphras's plea for help, Paul writes this epistle to the Colossians, which is also to be read in the church at Laodicea (4:16), in an attempt to check the heresy's influence. The heresy was syncretistic, that is, it was composed of elements drawn from paganism, Judaism, and Christianity. The pagan element espoused a false philosophy (2:8) that appears to have been an early form of Gnosticism. This movement viewed matter as evil, denied the divine creation of the universe, held to many angelic beings or spiritual intermediaries existing between God and men, advocated the worship of these angelic beings (2:18), and stressed secret "knowledge" (received when initiated into their cult) as the means of attaining salvation. The Jewish element was legalistic in nature, retained the Mosaic Law (2:14), imposed circumcision (2:11), followed dietary restrictions and calendar observations (2:16), and advocated asceticism (2:21-23). The heresy's Christian component did not deny Christ, but dethroned Him. He was not regarded as divine or as Creator of the universe, and His death was thus deprived of any saving merit.

Purpose. The letter's aim was to refute the Colossian heresy, to demonstrate the preeminence of Christ, and to confirm the addressees in the Christian faith.

Theme. The supremacy and adequacy of Christ is stressed throughout. He is presented as fully God (2:9), as Creator (1:16), as preeminent over the universe and church (1:17, 18), and as Savior (1:20, 21). Because Christ is over all, the Colossians are “complete in Him” (2:10), that is, He is more than adequate in that He alone—rather than any angelic being—can meet all their spiritual needs. The Colossians, then, should worship God the Father through Him alone and depend on Him only for salvation, refusing to rely on vain philosophy, secret knowledge, or legalism in an attempt to secure divine favor.

Date. The letter to the church at Colossae was written about A.D. 60 or 61.

Relation to Ephesians. In one form or another, approximately 75 of the 105 verses in Colossians can be found in Ephesians: Colossians mentions that the church is the body of Christ (1:18); this doctrine is then further developed in the sister epistle of Ephesians. Colossians stresses Jesus as Head, while Ephesians emphasizes the church as His body.

1:2. Grace is used in a number of different ways in the New Testament. It can refer to (1) God's unmerited kindness on Calvary, which brings about man's salvation (Eph. 2:8); (2) the state of grace in which the believer stands, that is, his being in God's favor (Rom. 5:2); (3) an unusual blessing produced by divine grace (Eph. 3:8); (4) graciousness or attractiveness (4:6); and (5) "grace" can, as here, mean God's "stored-up help" dispensed to His people in times of need. Peace is also employed in a variety of ways in Scripture: It can signify (1) the opposite of war (Rev. 6:4); (2) harmony and concord with others (Eph. 4:3); (3) health and welfare (1 Cor. 16:11); (4) salvation in that one is at peace with God (Rom. 5:1); and (5) as in this verse, "peace" sometimes denotes tranquility of mind that frees the Christian from fear and anxiety.

1:4. Evidence of a person's faith in Christ Jesus is his love ... to all the saints.

1:5. Hope is salvation, as it refers to the object for which one hopes. Word of the truth of the gospel could be rendered as "the message of the gospel which is true." This is meant to contradict the Colossian heresy: unlike its false teaching, or "vain deceit" (2:8), the gospel is true indeed.

1:6. The universal spread and effectiveness of the gospel verify the assertion in verse 5 that it is the truth. The Colossian heresy is merely local; while the gospel has come to the Colossians, it has gone beyond them in all the world. And it bringeth forth fruit; that is, when embraced by faith, the gospel produces godly character and noble conduct in its converts.

1:7. Epaphras evangelized the Colossians with the gospel and planted the church in their city. In describing Epaphras here in such glowing terms as our dear fellowservant and for you a faithful minister of Christ, Paul puts his apostolic stamp of approval on this saint's life, ministry, and gospel. The implication to the readers: Surely you will not forsake Epaphras's gospel and pastoral care in exchange for the doctrine of the local heretics, will you?

1:8. Your love in the Spirit (or, your love by the Spirit): that is, the Holy Spirit instilled and nurtured in the Colossian Christians an affection for others.

1:9. Wisdom is an accurate perception into the true nature of things. Understanding is the skillful application of this wisdom in practical situations.

1:10. This verse expresses the reason that in verse 9 Paul wants the Colossians to obtain a knowledge of God's will. It is that they may walk (live) properly and fully please God. In Greek the four explanatory participles of verses 10b-12 spell out and precisely define what a worthy walk entails: the believer is (1) fruitful in every good work, productive in Christian service; (2) constantly increasing in the knowledge of God, ever coming to know the Lord better; (3) always "strengthened with all might," becoming spiritually stronger and stronger; and (4) in the habit of giving thanks, sincerely expressing gratitude to God in both the pleasant and unpleasant experiences in his life.

1:11. Patience is persevering through problems, trials, tribulations, and so forth. Longsuffering is forbearing the faults and offenses of others.

1:2 Colossae was located in the Roman province of Asia, 11 miles from Laodicea in the Lycus Valley. It lay on the main road from Ephesus heading east. Both Herodotus and Xenophon regarded it as a great city in the fifth century B.C., but during the first century Strabo described it as a third-rate town. That Paul wrote an epistle to such a small community suggests the problem at Colossae must have been great. Colossae is mentioned only once (v. 2) in the New Testament. Paul seemingly had never seen the church (v. 4; 2:1), but it probably was established by one of his co-workers during his extensive ministry at Ephesus (Acts 19:1).

1:12. This verse also might be translated “thanking the Father, for He made us fit to share in the salvation belonging to the saints who are in the light.” Light is the ethical condition in which God’s children live, namely, that of spiritual understanding, with its accompanying morality and happiness.

1:13. Darkness is the religious state in which unbelievers exist, namely, that of spiritual ignorance with its attending immorality and misery.

1:14. Blood reminds the Colossians of the enormous price and sacrifice paid to secure their redemption. Redemption, then, is achieved by the atonement wrought by Jesus’ death. See Ephesians 1:7 for “redemption.”

1:15. Firstborn here signifies two things: (1) Temporal priority. As the firstborn child in a family is born before his brothers and sisters, similarly Christ existed before Creation. He existed before the universe was created. And owing to the privileges usually given an oldest child, “firstborn” also signifies (2) positional priority. The firstborn in a family was customarily accorded more honor, greater authority, or larger share of the inheritance, and so held a privileged position in relation to his brothers and sisters. In like manner Christ as the “firstborn” occupies a position supreme over the universe. Therefore, when Paul declares Christ to be the firstborn of every creature, the apostle does not mean that He is the first person whom God created; Paul instead means that Christ is earlier than, as well as preeminent in, all creation.

1:16. This verse provides the reason Christ is called the “firstborn” in verse 15. Paul’s rationale is this: Since by him were all things created, then (1) Christ must have existed before the universe, and (2) He must be greater than all He made. Thrones ... dominions ... principalities ... powers all refer to angelic beings (cf. Eph. 1:21; 3:10). “Thrones” refer to angels who sit on thrones as rulers; “dominions” refer to domains or kingdoms over which these heavenly beings reign, “principalities” refer to rulers, and “powers” refer to angelic monarchs who wield regal power. Since Christ created these various ranks of angels, He is supreme over them. Striking a blow at the Colossian heresy advocating angel worship (2:18), this text forbids Christians to pay homage to angels or other heavenly beings created by God.

1:17. By him all things consist: That is, by Him all things are held together; Christ now preserves all that He made in Creation.

1:18. He is the head of the body means, “He himself is the Head of the body.” The word himself translates the Greek intensive pronoun signifying that Jesus, rather than any angelic being, is the church’s Head (leader). Who is the beginning (or, “He is the beginning”) justifies calling Jesus the Head of the church (v. 18a). Beginning means “cause,” “origin” as in Revelation 3:14. Why, then, is He the church’s Head? Because He is the “origin” from which the church comes, or the “cause” of her existence; also, because He is the firstborn from the dead, that is, the first of a new creation—the church—to be resurrected, never to die again. That in all things he might have the preeminence (or, “so that in all things He alone has become preeminent”): Now that Jesus is Head of the church, He “alone” holds the preeminent position in both the first creation (the universe) and in the new creation (the church). Thus Jesus should hold first place in the believer’s life. This occurs when one bows to His authority, obeys His Word, yields to His Spirit, submits to His church leaders, does His will, and bestows his chief affections on Him.

1:19, 20. For gives two reasons for Jesus’ “preeminence” (v. 18): (1) All the fulness of deity is in Him. Since He is fully God, He ought to be preeminent. (2) By Christ’s death God reconciles the universe to Himself (v. 20).

1:21. Reconciliation is the act whereby God, through Christ’s atonement, brings men who are at odds with Him back into a peaceful, proper relationship with Himself.

1:22. In the body of his flesh through death (or, “by His fleshly body through death”): The Colossian heretics may have argued that Jesus’ humanity and death indicate His inferiority to the angelic beings in the universe. Paul turns this argument against them, showing that His death points to His superiority; for His death is the divine means of achieving reconcilia- tion to God. To present you holy ... in his sight (or, “to bring you holy ... into His presence”): This expresses the ultimate purpose of reconciliation: it is to eventu- ally usher the believer, made perfectly holy, into the heavenly presence of God.

1:23. If ye continue in the faith (or, “since you will persevere in the faith”): the Colossians’ future entrance into God’s heavenly presence depends on whether they remain in the Christian faith. The words “since you will persevere” indicate that they will remain loyal to Christ. Perseverance in the Christian’s faith is a test of the reality of one’s trust in Christ. This verse implies that true believers will persevere.

1:24. The afflictions of Christ: Since Paul is a member of the body of Christ, the Lord Himself suffers when His apostle suffers. These afflictions are more Christ’s than Paul’s. Rather than detract- ing from his ministry, Paul’s afflictions actually en- hanced it, as they exist for his body’s sake, which is the church.

1:25. The expression according to the dispensa- tion of God might be rendered “because of the di- vine assignment.” Paul was a minister or servant to the church because of the divine assignment given him. That assignment was to fulfil the word of God, that is, to preach the gospel over a wide geographi- cal area, winning converts to Christianity. The Greek word translated here as “fulfil” is rendered in Romans 15:19 as “fully preached.”

1:26. Mystery is a divine truth which, because it is too profound for man to discover and comprehend without help, was previously unknown but is now disclosed to man by God through His apostles and prophets.

1:27. The specific mystery here is Christ in you. It was no secret in the Old Testament that Gentiles would be saved; but that Christ would dwell in Gen- tile converts was unknown at that time. In further ex- plaining this mystery Paul equates “Christ in you” with the hope of glory. “Hope” means “certainty of the future,” that is, for a Christian it is the joyful and confident expectation of salvation. “Glory” here refers to the glorious state to be enjoyed by the believer in heaven. Thus the hope of glory refers to the certainty of heaven. That Christ’s life, character, virtues, val- ues, thoughts, attitudes, and deeds are present in a Christian is evidence that he is headed toward glory (heaven).

2:2. This verse could also be translated: “That their minds may be strengthened by being lovingly instructed, and so obtain all the wealth of assurance that comes from (proper spiritual) understanding, more precisely, to obtain a mature knowledge of God’s mystery about Christ.” The Colossians’ “minds” need to be “instructed” in the truth to safeguard them against the circulating heresy.

2:3. Hid does not mean unknown. For not all these treasures of wisdom and knowledge are unknown to man, as 1:26 clearly shows. “Hid” signifies “laid up,” “stored away,” or “reserved.” Christ, then, is the source from which all wisdom and knowledge come.

4 And this I say, ^alest any man should ¹beguile you with ²enticing words.

5 For ^athough I be absent in the flesh, yet am I with you in the spirit, joying and beholding ^byour ¹order, and the ^csteadfastness of your faith in Christ.

2:4. Beguile means “deceive.”

2:6. The verse may be paraphrased thus: “Therefore, just as you accepted the teaching that presents Jesus as both Messiah and Lord, so continue to maintain this relationship with Him.” The recipients had been taught that Jesus is (1) Messiah (the One divinely anointed to secure man’s salvation), and (2) Lord (the divine person to whom man submits in obedience). The heretics denied Jesus’ atoning death and lordship. So the Colossians are urged to keep Him just as they were initially taught—as Messiah and Lord. They are to continue to look to Him for salvation and continue in submission to His authority.

2:8. Spoil could also be rendered, “carry you away from the truth by false teaching.” Rudiments of the world are elementary religious teachings coming from the world system. The Greek grammar suggests that the particular philosophy in view here is vain deceit. Not all philosophy, then, is bad; when presented in a God-centered way, it can be helpful to believers.

2:9. For verifies the assertion in verse 8 that the heretics’ “philosophy” is in accord with the tradition of men and not with Christ or in line with Christian doctrine. This is done by stating that the whole of the divine nature (all the fulness of the Godhead) dwells in Jesus in bodily form. This refutes the Colossian heresy denying the Son’s full deity and that He possessed a body that could die and make atonement for sin.

2:10. Ye are complete in him (or, “you are filled by Him”): Believers have been filled by Jesus with all the spiritual blessings they need; hence, they are “complete” and lacking nothing. This, too, refutes the heresy that denied the sufficiency of Christ and encouraged Christians to look to other spiritual beings for help. Five of these blessings, with which believers have been filled, are listed in verses 11–15. They are: (1) spiritual circumcision, verse 11; (2) being raised from the old life, verse 12; (3) new life, verse 13; (4) the removal of the curse of the law, verse 14; and (5) the conquering of Satan and his demonic forces, verse 15.

2:11. Circumcision denotes a cutting off or removal. The circumcision in view here is not physical but spiritual, whereby the ruling power of the believer’s flesh or sinful nature is broken or removed by Christ.

2:12. Buried with him in baptism: This is not water baptism, but Spirit baptism, by which Christ brings the believer into an intimate relation with Himself and with His people (the church) through the Holy Spirit (cf. 1 Cor. 12:13). Ye are risen signifies that God has raised the Colossians from the sins, habits, values, and guilt of their unconverted life, not allowing them to remain in their old ways and iniquities.

2:13. You ... hath he quickened: God gave them new (spiritual) life.

2:14. The handwriting of ordinances: In secular literature this “handwriting” was an IOU signed by the debtor. Here it might be paraphrased, “a certificate of debt consisting of decrees.” This refers to the Mosaic Law, which the Jews had contracted to obey, and to which Gentiles by conscience were obligated. Owing to man’s inability to fulfill this obligation of obedience, he was therefore indebted to God. But through Christ this debt was graciously blotted out.

2:15. Having spoiled principalities and powers: By the Cross God disarmed or deprived Satan and all his demonic horde of the power and sway with which they formerly gripped the Colossians. By this statement Paul might well have asked the Colossians, How can you give ear to any doctrine advocating angel worship (v. 18), when they are all subject to God?

2:16. Therefore draws on 2:14: Since God has annulled the law, the Colossians are to let no man ... judge you regarding dietary matters (meat ... drink) or regarding religious calendar observations.

2:17. This verse could be translated: "For these were a shadow of future things, but the substance belongs to Christ." The Mosaic dietary restrictions and calendar celebrations (v. 16) were a shadow of things to come in that they foreshadowed or foretold of coming spiritual blessings. But the substance of these blessings or these divine benefits themselves come, not from the law, but from Christ. The Colossians, then, should not allow heretics to tie them up with legalistic rules and regulations. They should instead occupy themselves with all the blessings granted them through Christ.

2:18. Beguile you of your reward (or, "rob you of your prize"): The heretics, if their doctrine were accepted, would rob the Colossians of their spiritual blessings. These false teachers displayed false humility and advocated a gospel of worshipping of angels, that is, paying homage to angelic beings. Intruding into those things which he hath not seen: The heretics claimed to have witnessed numerous revelations and visions.

2:19. The Greek word holding means to hold fast to someone so as to remain united with him. The Head is Christ. Thus, not holding the Head reveals that the local heretics possessed no relationship with Christ; they were not therefore true Christians. As the "Head" is Christ, so the body is figuratively represented to be the church, and the joints and bands are by implication the individual believers within the church. Having nourishment ministered, and knit together means being supported and united. From Christ (the "Head"), then, the church ("body") derives spiritual growth as it is supported and united by the various ministering believers ("joints," "bands") in the assembly.

2:20. If ye be dead (or, "since you died"): Paul's expression, "to die," figuratively means to be free from something. That from which the Colossians had been freed is the rudiments of the world, that is, from the elementary religious teachings espousing salvation by merit and good works. Since the gospel has freed the believer from attempting to gain heaven by self-effort, he should never subject himself again to such legalistic ordinances.

2:21. These three prohibitions are examples of the heretical teachings to which the Colossians were about to submit. They were to abstain from certain foods and drinks. Legalism is largely negative in nature; Christianity is nicely balanced, containing both negative and positive aspects.

2:22. Inasmuch as all these foods are to perish with the using, it is foolish to base one's eternal salvation on abstinence from temporary things like food.

2:23. This verse is better translated, "Which things do indeed have an appearance of wisdom consisting in self-imposed worship and false humility and in severe treatment of the body; but this is of no value against the indulgence of the flesh." The apostle concedes that legalism is outwardly impressive, but he denies asceticism's ability to harness the sensual appetite of man's sinful nature (flesh).

3:1. If ye then be risen (or, "therefore, since you were raised"): The word therefore infers a corollary truth from 2:20 ("you died with Christ")—not only have the Colossian believers been freed from sin, they have also turned to a new life, leaving behind old ways, habits, values, vices, interests, and sins. Seek those things which are above: These "things" include deeper knowledge of Christ, closer fellowship with Him, experience of His resurrection power, victory over sin (vv. 5-11); the development of godly virtues (vv. 12-17); the fulfillment of domestic and social responsibilities (3:18-4:1); an effective prayer life (4:2); fruitfulness in witnessing (4:3-6)—in a word, the attainment of Christian maturity, and all the spiritual benefits God has for His people during their days on earth. To have been raised with Christ and not to seek these blessings would be a contradiction.

3:2. Set your affection on things above: The Greek word literally says, "Set your mind on things above."

3 ^aFor ye are dead, ^band your life is hid with Christ in God.

The readers are not to be preoccupied with things on the earth, such as current heretical philosophies (2:8), legalistic practices (2:16, 21–23), and vices (v. 5ff); nor are they to dwell on things that are not wrong in themselves (houses, jobs, careers, ambitions, etc.), but can be wrong should they become priorities above Christ.

3:3. Your life is hid with Christ in God (or, “Your life is deposited with Christ, who is in intimate relation with God”). As all wisdom and knowledge reside in Christ (2:3), so the believer’s new life is stored up in Him. This means that the Christian life belongs to the spiritual or heavenly realm. Jesus is in intimate relation with God; so are His followers. Since the Colossians now belong to the heavenly realm and are intimate with God, they should seek those matters and interests pertaining to heaven and not to earth.

3:5. Mortify means to “put to death.” By a figure of speech members is put in place of the various sins that exist in, and seek to express themselves through, different “members” of the human body. Paul urges his readers to “put to death all sins residing in your bodily members.” Therefore looks back to verse 3: inasmuch as they “are dead” to sin, they are to make this death to the old life a reality in daily living.

3:9. Seeing means “since.” The old man is all that a person was prior to salvation: his worldly thinking and sinful acts. Since all this was renounced at conversion, one should lie not. Falsehood ill becomes the person claiming to be a disciple of Him who said, “I am the ... truth.”

3:10. The new man is the person one becomes after conversion: he possesses a new nature, values, aspirations, and a new life-style. This “new man” is constantly being renewed or developed until he attains a mature knowledge of the God who (re)created him. The more a believer knows and understands of God, the more he will be like God in character and conduct.

3:11. Not only is the “new man” to put sin to death, he is also to put away man-made barriers that divide people and that nourish the vices of the old life. Among renewed humanity there are no national, ceremonial, cultural, or social distinctions. To the redeemed Christ is all; that is, He is everything, and He is what matters most to them. And Christ is ... in all; that is, He dwells in all believers.

3:12. Put on literally means to “dress oneself” (with clothes); here, used metaphorically, it means to take on or assume certain virtues and qualities. Bowels of mercies means heartfelt compassion.

3:13. The fact of believers being urged to assume the virtues of verse 12 signifies that none has yet “arrived” spiritually. As the believer is developing these virtues, he must be forbearing and forgiving toward his fellow church member. For his Christian brother is also in the process of acquiring the virtues of verse 12 and therefore retains some flaws, deficiencies, and weaknesses. Hence the need of forbearance and forgiveness.

3:14. Charity is love, here called the bond of perfectness. Love is the crowning grace completing the list of virtues required for perfectness or spiritual maturity. As a “bond” it binds all other virtues together in harmony and unity.

3:15. The peace of God is the harmony and concord created by God among His people. It is to rule. This Greek verb means to act as an umpire who makes decisions in an athletic contest. Thus, let the peace of God rule in your hearts means that when believers are at odds with each other, whatever course of action best maintains peace and fosters harmony is the course to be taken.

16 Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another ^ain psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord.

17 And ^awhatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him.

Walk in Wisdom

4 Masters, ^a give unto your servants that which is just and ¹equal; knowing that ye also have a Master in heaven.

2 ^aContinue in prayer, and watch in the same ^bwith thanksgiving;

3 ^aWithal ¹ praying also for us, that God would ^bopen unto us a door ²of utterance, to speak ^cthe mystery of Christ, ^dfor which I am also in bonds:

4 That I may make it manifest, as I ought to speak.

5 ^aWalk in ^bwisdom toward them that are ¹without, ^credeeming the time.

3:16. When believers are forbearing, forgiving (v. 13), and loving (v. 14) toward one another, when peace reigns among God's people (v. 15), then the church is fertile soil for the blessings produced by the word of Christ.

3:17. The beneficial influence produced by the indwelling word of Christ is not only to affect public and private worship (v. 16), but it is also to control all areas of a Christian's life.

3:18. Wifely submission cannot be forced; it must come from her own free will. As it is fit in the Lord means that the wife's submission to her husband is proper in her relationship with Christ: submission rendered her husband is submission rendered to Christ.

3:19. The duty of husbands is to love your wives. The Greek word for love is agapaō, the same affection with which "God so loved the world" (John 3:16). This type of love (cf. 1 Cor. 13; 1 John 4:10) is a willing and sacrificial giving of oneself for the benefit of another, without thought of return. Be not bitter against them might be translated, "Do not be harsh toward them." The husband who loves his wife will not be rude, unkind, or cruel toward her. This implies that wifely submission is gained in part by the husband's love.

3:20. This is wellpleasing unto the Lord: In most manuscripts (including the oldest) the Greek reads, "well-pleasing in the Lord." That is, obedience to parental authority is pleasing to the Lord in the child's relationship with Him. The obedience given to parents is obedience given to Christ.

3:22. Eyeservice is work done only when the master is watching. Christian slaves were to work hard even when their owners were absent. Singleness of heart means "a sincere disposition."

3:23. Do it heartily means the slave is to perform his slave duties wholeheartedly, doing the best job he can with all his strength. A slave could be enthusiastic in carrying out his menial tasks because they were done, not so much for his earthly master (unto men), but for his heavenly Master (to the Lord).

3:24. The reward of the inheritance (or "the reward which is salvation"): The fact that Christian slaves will receive salvation from the Lord rather than from men verifies the assertion in verse 23 that they serve Christ, not their masters.

4:1. The reason earthly masters should give their servants that which is just and equal is that the masters themselves also have a Master in heaven. As they want Him to be just and fair with them, so they must be toward their servants.

4:2. Continue in prayer means "persevere in prayer." Watch in the same means that the Colossians are to be mentally alert and spiritually sensitive to the needs for which they pray. With thanksgiving signifies that gratitude is the attitude in which prayer is offered. So the readers are to persevere in prayer with alert minds and grateful hearts.

4:3, 4. The Colossians are asked to make two prayer requests for Paul and his associates: (1) that God would grant them opportunities both inside and outside prison to preach the gospel (v. 3); and that (2) the evangelists would make the truth manifest as they ought to speak, that is, to preach it with courage and clarity. Withal praying also for us means praying for Paul "together with" the prayer commanded in verse 2.

4:5. Paul turns from his responsibilities for evangelism (vv. 3, 4) to the Colossians' evangelistic duties

(vv. 5, 6). They are to walk in wisdom or “live wisely” in their relations toward them that are without, that is, unbelievers. Redeeming the time is to make the most of every opportunity. They are to seize each opportunity to display wise behavior toward the unsaved and to use it as a chance for witnessing.

4:6. An example of wise conduct (v. 5) is daily speech that is gracious (with grace) in nature. Such speech is to be seasoned with salt, that is, characterized by the wisdom of verse 5. Gracious, wise conversation will enable the Colossians to know how to answer every man when speaking to him about the gospel.

4:7. Tychicus ... a beloved brother ... a faithful minister and fellowservant in the Lord: In describing Tychicus (believed to be the Colossians’ pastor) in such glowing terms, Paul puts his apostolic stamp of approval on him, so the church will accept his ministry as he deals with the current heresy.

4:9. With Onesimus, a faithful and beloved brother, who is one of you: This prepares the Colossians for the return of Onesimus, the runaway slave who stole from his master Philemon, a prominent member in the Colossian church. Paul hopes this remark, along with the letter to Philemon, will gain for Onesimus, a new Christian, forgiveness and acceptance on the part of the church.

4:10. Marcus will probably visit the Colossian assembly in the near future. The Colossians may be hesitant to welcome him, since he once abandoned Paul on the mission field (Acts 15:36–39). To ensure that this does not happen, Paul describes Mark as the cousin of Barnabas, a highly esteemed Christian, and gives the Colossians instructions to receive him.

4:11. Who are of the circumcision identifies Aristarchus, Marcus (v. 10), and Justus as Jewish Christians. Of all Jews converted to Christ, only these three are known to have been Paul’s fellow workers in the ministry.

4:12. That ye may stand perfect and complete in all the will of God means that “you may appear perfect and fully assured in all His will.” Like 1:23, 29, this refers to the Colossians’ being ushered into God’s heavenly presence in a morally perfect state. When this someday occurs, their experience of progressive maturity and assurance will have preceded it.

4:13. Tychicus labored not only in the Colossian assembly, but also in the churches at Laodicea and Hierapolis. These cities were six miles apart and 12 miles from Colossae.

4:9 Onesimus was apparently a native of Colossae and the slave of Philemon. He fled from and probably robbed Philemon (Philem. 18). During his travels he reaches Rome, hears the gospel, and is saved. Paul then writes to Philemon exhorting him to restore Onesimus, not only as a slave, but as a brother in Christ. Paul uses this opportunity to teach both the position (Philem.) and the responsibility (ch. 3) of Christian slaves. (First Reference, Col. 4:9; Primary Reference, Philem.)

4:13 Laodicea was the seventh of the Asian cities addressed in Revelation 2 and 3. It lay at the junction of east-west and north-south highways and in a fertile valley. It was located some distance from the other cities of Revelation, but was close to Colossae, being 11 miles northwest of that town. Whereas Colossae was declining during the New Testament era, Laodicea was prospering and was noted for its black wool, medicinal powders, and banking. Laodicea did not possess its own water supply. Rather, water had to be piped through huge cubical blocks of stone from distant hot springs, and it arrived lukewarm. In A.D. 60 the city, along with the neighboring towns of Colossae and Hierapolis, was greatly damaged by an earthquake. Of the seven churches of Revelation, Paul mentions only Ephesus and Laodicea. The church at Laodicea (like Colossae) was no doubt established by Paul’s coworkers while he was in Ephesus (Acts 19:10; Col. 2:1). Paul also mentions a letter “from Laodicea” (v. 16), which the Colossian church was to read. This phrase admits of several interpretations, among them: (1) a letter to Paul from them; (2) a letter written by Paul from Laodicea (Galatians?); (3) the letter to Philemon who may have lived in Laodicea; and (4) the epistle known as Ephesians.

4:14. Of all the individuals mentioned in verses 7–14, only Demas is given no commendation by Paul. Perhaps Paul already senses some glaring flaw in his character. This verse may well foreshadow 2 Timothy 4:10, where Luke, the beloved physician, has remained loyal to Paul, but Demas has forsaken him.

4:15. While Paul greets all Laodicean Christians, he especially singles out Nymphas, and the church which is in his house. If the church of Laodicea was too large for any one house, this likely refers to that part of it meeting in the house of Nymphas. (Church buildings set apart solely for church activities were not used until much later.)

4:17. Take heed to the ministry can be interpreted in one of two ways: (1) it is a rebuke to Archippus for failing to finish his Christian service; or (2) it may be Paul's way of informing the Colossian church of his approval on Archippus's ministry, and the church was to let him finish it.

4:14 Luke, mentioned by name only three times in the New Testament (v. 14; 2 Tim. 4:11; Philem. 24), was nevertheless an important individual in early church history. Though not identified by name in his writings, he was the author of the third gospel and Acts for the following reasons: (1) The author places himself with Paul on three occasions in Acts, which are indicated by the author's use of "we" instead of "they" and other third-person references to the group. Of Paul's companions only Titus and Luke could have been with him on these occasions. (2) The author demonstrates a knowledge of medicine. Luke was a physician (v. 14). (3) Early traditions unanimously concur that Luke was the author of both Acts and the third gospel. Though he was a Gentile, he authored more of the New Testament than even Paul, writing over 28 percent of it. Many, including the early church historian Eusebius, identify Antioch of Syria as Luke's home, which might explain why the Book of Acts gives much space to events in that city. Luke enters the narrative of Acts when he joins Paul at Troas during the second journey (Acts 16:10). He remains with Paul only briefly, because when Paul leaves Philippi, Luke seemingly stays behind (Acts 16:40). At the end of Paul's third journey five years later, Luke rejoins Paul as he passes through Philippi (Acts 20:5, 6). Luke later continues with Paul on his way to Rome and during the two-year imprisonment (Acts 27, 28; Philem. 23, 24; cf. vv. 9, 10). Several years later, after Paul's reimprisonment in Rome, Luke supports him to the end (2 Tim. 4:11). Tradition says that Luke subsequently served the Lord in Greece until his death at the age of 84.

THESSALONIANS

First and Second Thessalonians comprise some of the earliest New Testament writings. The first epistle was penned at Corinth by the apostle Paul in response to Timothy's report on the progress of the church they had recently established there (3:1-6).

Paul, along with Silas and Timothy, founded the church at Thessalonica on his second missionary journey (Acts 17:1-14). The apostle had been drawn to this important Roman port after seeing a vision in which a Macedonian man was calling for help (Acts 16:9).

The City. Thessalonica (Salonika today) had been named in 315 B.C. by Cassander after his wife, Alexander the Great's half sister. Under the Romans the city, famous for its hot springs, burgeoned to a population of over 200,000. It was situated strategically on the Via Egnatia, the main Roman highway from east to west. Its sheltered harbor made an ideal naval station. The city was a natural center for traffic moving in all directions. In Paul's day it was the capital of Macedonia. Although the provincial governor was headquartered there, he exercised no authority over Thessalonica. As a free city it was ruled by politarchs and enjoyed political autonomy.

As a military and commercial center, Thessalonica became famous for its wealth as well as its vice, attracting a strange mixture of Roman high society and pagan sensuality (cf. Acts 17:4; 1 Thess. 4:1-8). It also attracted merchants from other parts of the empire, including numerous Jews (Acts 17:4). The nucleus of the church was formed from this group of Jews—although 1 Thessalonians 1:9 indicates that the Apostle to the Gentiles had his greatest success among the non-Jewish peoples of the city (cf. Acts 17:4).

The Church. In Europe Paul and his companions had gone first to Philippi (Acts 16:12) where they established a church and were miraculously delivered from the jail. Leaving Philippi, they traveled through Amphipolis and Apollonia to Thessalonica. Going first to the Jewish synagogue, Paul there won his first converts—and met his most serious opposition. His ministry in the city lasted less than a month. During that time he worked as a tentmaker, not wishing to burden the fledgling assembly with his needs, and spent the balance of his time at the home of Jason, organizing the new believers into a church.

But almost immediately the Jews brought Paul before the politarchs and had him expelled from the city. He went on to Berea, meeting great initial success, but was again opposed by the Thessalonian Jews who dogged his trail and incited the people to riot against him. Paul barely escaped with his life, traveling to Athens where his message was received with little enthusiasm. From Athens Paul dispatched Timothy to check on the situation in the Thessalonian church (3:2).

Occasion and Purpose. After all this persecution and rejection of the gospel, Paul came to Corinth (Acts 18:1) "in weakness, and in fear, and in much trembling" (1 Cor. 2:3). When Silas and Timothy returned bearing good news about the Macedonian churches, Paul was greatly encouraged and pressed forward with his work (Acts 18:4, 5). But the Thessalonians were also reportedly having difficulties. Gentiles, and especially Jews, were impugning Paul's sincerity, defaming him as a wandering charlatan who had deceived them. The church was also somewhat confused about the second coming of Christ. Some members worried about believers who had died before His return. Others considered it unnecessary to continue working, since Christ would return at any time. Still others were sinking back into the immorality of the culture. There was also a crisis in the leadership; many of the rank-and-file apparently were being offended by certain tactless elders. These and other minor difficulties occasioned Paul's first letter to the Thessalonians.

Time of Writing. Since this epistle was certainly written during Paul's long stay at Corinth (cf. Acts 18:5; 1 Thess. 3:6), the date can easily be fixed. An inscription discovered at Delphi (dated from the summer of A.D. 52) refers to the proconsulate of Gallio, a position held for only two years. Paul arrived at Corinth before Gallio assumed this position, perhaps a year earlier. Thus, the time of the writing of 1 Thessalonians must have been the summer or fall of A.D. 51.

The Thessalonians' Work of Faith

1:1. Paul, and Silvanus, and Timothy: Paul's salutation takes the form of an everyday letter of the Hellenistic world. The names Silas and Timotheus are given here in their Latin forms. Silas and Timothy are mentioned not as coauthors but as a courtesy since they were Paul's companions while he was in Thessalonica. Silas had taken the place of Barnabas on Paul's second missionary journey (Acts 15:22-18:5). Timothy had joined them at Lystra, his hometown (cf. Acts 16:1-3), and had also just recently visited the Thessalonians at Paul's request (3:2). The church (Gr. ekklēsia, "assembly"): Since Jesus used this term (Matt. 16:18) it had become a technical term among the early believers for a local group of baptized Christians. In the New Testament the word never refers to a building, and in its technical sense is carefully distinguished from Israel as designating those who are "in the Father and in the Lord Jesus Christ." While local churches are implied, the more normative sense of the term may also signify all believers in Christ (Acts 8:3; 9:31; 1 Cor. 12:28; 15:9; Eph. 1:22, 23; Col. 1:18).

1:3. Your work of faith refers to the Thessalonians' conversion when they "turned to God from idols" (v. 9). The labour of love concerns their practice of serving the "living and true God" (v. 9), and the patience [i.e., perseverance] of hope has to do with their steadfastly waiting "for his Son from heaven" (v. 10).

Paul Recalls His Conduct

2 For yourselves, brethren, know our ¹entrance in unto you, that it was not in vain:

2 But even after that we had suffered before, and were ¹shamefully entreated, as ye know, at ^aPhilippi, we were ^bbold in our God to speak unto you the gospel of God ²with much contention.

3 ^aFor our exhortation was not of ¹deceit, nor of uncleanness, nor in ²guile:

4 But as ^awe were ¹allowed of God ^bto be put in trust with the gospel, even so we speak; ^anot as pleasing men, but God, ^awhich ²trieth our hearts.

5 For ^aneither at any time used we flattering words, as ye know, nor a cloke ¹of covetousness; ^bGod is witness:

6 ^aNor of men sought we glory, neither of you, nor yet of others,

2:6 ^a 1 Tim. 5:17

1:4. Knowing ... your election: Paul's conviction of the genuineness of his readers' conversion was based on subjective and objective factors. The former relates to his own assurance of the gospel, the propriety of his Christian life, and to the effectiveness of his ministry produced by the Spirit's power (v. 5). The objective factor concerns the Thessalonians' becoming followers of Christ (v. 6), being examples to other believers (v. 7), and their gospel witness (v. 8).

1:5. Gospel (Gr. euaggelion, "Good News") is a technical term for the Christian message, stated succinctly in 1 Corinthians 15:1-4.

1:6. Followers means "imitators." (See also 1 Cor. 4:16; 11:1.) Received (Gr. dechomai) means to "receive in a respectful, obedient, and favorable way." Joy of the Holy Ghost is joy inspired by the Holy Spirit.

1:7. The Greek word tupos is here rendered ensamples. Having become imitators of Christ (v. 6a), the readers were moral examples themselves that others could emulate. And the Thessalonians were fine examples in joyfully receiving the gospel amidst persecution (v. 6b) and in sharing their faith with others (v. 8).

1:8. The Greek word exēcheō, translated sounded out, means "to ring out." The Thessalonians' faith in Jesus resounded everywhere abroad.

1:9. Ye turned (Gr. epistrephō) describes their "conversion," which is both positive (to God) and negative (from idols). Serve (Gr. douleuō, "to perform the duties of a bondsman"): A bondsman was a person who had been sold to another, thus becoming his personal property. Socially this was a very undesirable condition; but spiritually being God's servant was a privilege. Such was the readers' relation to the Lord.

1:10. To wait signifies waiting with expectation—looking ahead in faith, to the fulfillment of Christ's promises to return to the saints. Wrath to come (cf. 5:9; Rev. 6:16) refers to the time of the Great Tribulation (spoken of by Christ, Matt. 24:21) from which the saints of the church will be delivered.

2:1, 2. Paul denies his adversaries' accusation that his ministry in Thessalonica had been in vain, that is, "empty" of proper motive. That he had been physically abused (suffered) and insulted (shamefully entreated) previously at Philippi, yet was bold in our God to speak unto you the gospel, verify the purity of his ministerial motives. Otherwise, persecution for the gospel would probably have prevented his courageous preaching. There was no impure incentive of any kind in his ministry (v. 3).

2:4. Allowed and trieth translates the same Greek verb dokimazō differently because it has two different meanings in this same verse. "Allowed" means that God had carefully examined Paul and found him to be fit for the ministry, thus entrusting the apostle with this responsibility. "Trieth" means that the Lord examines him daily to see whether he remains fit and can continue in the ministry. This habitual divine scrutiny is the reason Paul seeks to please God rather than men. God, then, is the ultimate cause and motive of Paul's ministry, not impurity (v. 3) or covetousness (v. 5).

2:5. Cloke (Gr. prophasis) signifies "excuse," "cover-up," or "front" for an impure motive of greed.

2:6. Might have been burdensome may be rendered, "though we could have wielded authority." Paul and his coworkers did not seek esteem (glory) when ^bwe might have ¹been ^cburdensome, ^das the apostles of Christ.

7 But ^awe were gentle among you, even as a ¹nurse cherisheth her children:

8 So being affectionately ¹desirous of you, we were ²willing ^ato have imparted unto you, not the gospel of God only, but also ^bour own souls, because ye were dear unto us.

9 For ye remember, brethren, our ^alabour and ¹travail: for labouring night and day, ^bbecause we would not be ²chargeable unto any of you, we preached unto you the gospel of God.

10 ^aYe are witnesses, and God also, ^bhow ¹holily and justly and unblameably we behaved ourselves among you that believe:

11 As ye know how we exhorted and comforted and ¹charged every one of you, as a father ^{doth} his children, from men nor from the Thessalonians (neither of you), although they could have "thrown their weight around" as the apostles of Christ, and thus demanded honor.

12 ^aThat ye would walk worthy of God, ^bwho hath called you unto his kingdom and glory.

2:7. Nurse cherisheth: Just as a nursing mother selflessly cares for her children, so Paul gave himself to the Thessalonians. He changes the figure of speech to that of a father in verse 11.

2:11. Exhorted (Gr. parakaleō, "exhort, comfort, encourage"): The noun form of this word ("Comforter") is used as a name for the Holy Spirit. (See John 14:16; 15:26; 16:13.) It is also used for Christ (1 John 2:1, "advocate"). Charged (Gr. martureō, "witness," "testify") is the term from which the English term martyr derives.

2:12. Walk refers to the Christian life and conduct.

2:13. The word of God which ye heard of us: Both Paul and the Thessalonians recognized that the Word he preached to them was the Word of God ("a word spoken by God"). In this context, Paul is boldly asserting the divine inspiration of his gospel (cf. 2 Tim. 3:16).

2:14. Followers (imitators): As the Thessalonians imitated the apostles in their commitment to the Lord

(1:6), they also imitated the Judean churches, since they also suffered at the hands of their own people.

2:15. Killed the Lord Jesus: If the Lord was not exempt from persecution, His followers could hardly expect to escape it. They please not God: Throughout this passage Paul shows that while his Jewish enemies think they are serving God, they really are not.

2:16. Fill up their sins: This expression parallels Genesis 15:16. Often God allows His people to suffer the indignation of others simply because He is longsuffering toward the sinner, "not willing that any should perish." Consequently, some will repent, and others will fully justify their condemnation.

2:17. Being taken from you: The Greek term (aporphanizō) is intensely passionate. It is related to our word "orphan," and could be translated "since we have been torn apart."

2:19. At his coming (Gr. parousia): This was a common term in the Hellenistic world for formal visits by royalty. It became a technical term in the New Testament for the second coming of Christ. As such, it is used 18 times (seven in the Thessalonian epistles). This is the first time Paul uses it in his writings.

3:1. Left at Athens alone: Apparently Silas was not with him at that time. It is not possible to determine his whereabouts with certainty.

3:2. Timotheus: See the Introduction. Minister of God is a variant reading, probably substituted for "God's fellow workers" (cf. 1 Cor. 3:9).

3:5. Know your faith: Paul was anxious to know the spiritual condition of this assembly. The tempter is another name for Satan (cf. 2:18).

3:9. Render (Gr. antapodidōmi) has the sense of paying back something owed. Paul repays God in the currency of thanksgiving.

3:10. Perfect (lit., "complete"): Paul's stay with the Thessalonians was so brief (see Introduction) that he could not complete the work to his satisfaction. He longed for the opportunity to remedy the deficiencies (that which is lacking) in their faith.

3:13. Coming of our Lord: Again Paul uses the term parousia to refer to Christ's second coming, repeating it for special emphasis. Saints, used here in the masculine plural, refers to holy people. These may be believers (see Eph. 1:1; cf. 1 Thess. 4:14) or angels (see Mark 8:38). In light of the problem cited in chapter 4, the former idea is likely in view here.

4:1. Furthermore (Gr. loipos) marks a key transition in the book. Here Paul introduces his exhortation on practical Christian living.

4:2. Commandments we gave you: Paul appeals to his apostolic authority, speaking as a representative of the Lord Jesus.

4:3. Sanctification (holiness): The New Testament delineates three kinds of holiness: (1) positional holiness (1 Cor. 6:11); (2) progressive holiness (Rom. 6:12–23); and (3) perfected holiness (3:13). The second kind is in view here. Fornication (Gr. porneia) means any form of sexual impurity.

4:4. This verse can be read, "that each of you know how to control his own vessel [i.e., body] in holiness and honor." Some believe vessel refers to one's wife. The verse would then advocate maintaining proper sexual relations with her to avert immorality.

The Dead in Christ Shall Rise

13 But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which ¹are asleep, that ye sorrow not, ^aeven as others ^bwhich have no hope.

14 For ^aif we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so ^bthem also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.

4:6. Go beyond means overstep this moral law. Defraud means literally “take advantage of,” “rob” or “cheat.” In any matter (or, “in this matter”) refers to the sexual misconduct deplored in the previous verses. It could refer to infidelity to one’s spouse, or to an unmarried person committing adultery with someone’s spouse.

4:8. Despiset: Paul’s language here seems to echo Jesus’ words in Luke 10:16.

4:11. Study literally means “aspire” or “determine.” Work with your own hands: This and 2 Thessalonians 3:11 suggest that some believers had abandoned their occupations, believing Christ’s second coming was near at hand.

4:12. Lack of nothing: The biblical means of supplying one’s needs is to work. Verses 11 and 12 are important for the Christian work ethic.

4:13. I would not have you to be ignorant is simply Paul’s way of saying, “I have something I want to tell you” (cf. Rom. 1:13; 11:25; 1 Cor. 10:1; 2 Cor. 1:8).

Asleep is a euphemism for “dead.” It is used often of believers in the New Testament (Matt. 27:52; Acts 7:60; 1 Cor. 15:20). That ye sorrow not is in the present tense: “So you will not continue to grieve.” Apparently these believers were concerned about their loved ones who had died in the Lord, especially in view of Christ’s promised second coming (cf. vv. 14, 15). Hope (Gr. elpis) means “certain expectation.”

4:14. Jesus died and rose again: The certainty of the believer’s hope is based on the resurrection of Jesus Christ (cf. 1 Cor. 15:20–23). Bring: This presupposes that those who sleep in Jesus are with Him, and when He comes they will come with Him. Them also which sleep in Jesus can be translated, “those who were put to sleep by Jesus.” As a parent lovingly puts a child to bed when tired, so Jesus just as lovingly takes His saints from this life (“were put to sleep”) at the right time.

4:15. Prevent (Gr. phthanō, “precede”): The Greek emphasizes that the living will have no advantage over the dead when Christ returns.

RAPTURE

4:17. Although the word Rapture does not occur in the English Bible (the Latin Bible uses the verb here from which rapture derives), the idea is expressed in the words “caught up.” The Rapture is the first phase of Christ’s return, involving every Christian alive at that time. These Christians will be caught up to meet Him in the clouds, instantaneously receiving glorified bodies. All those who have died “in Christ” will be resurrected; those who are alive and saved at the time of the Rapture will be caught up with Christ before the start of the “Seventieth Week of Daniel,” that is, the Great Tribulation. There are many reasons to believe that the Rapture precedes the Tribulation, but fundamentally this view is consistent with a historical-grammatical interpretation of the Scriptures. Illustration: A close examination of the prophetic Scriptures reveals a distinction between the Rapture (which relates to the church) and the revelation of Christ in power and glory (which relates more to Israel). Application: Christians should find comfort in the truth of the Rapture, and should comfort one another with this truth (v. 18). (First Reference, Jude 14; Primary Reference, 1 Thess. 4:13–18; cf. Matt. 24:21.)

Concluding Exhortations

5 But of ^athe times and the seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you.

2 For yourselves know perfectly that ^athe day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night.

3 For when they shall say, Peace and safety; then ^asudden destruction cometh upon them, ^bas ¹travail upon a ²woman with child; and they shall not escape.

4 ^aBut ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief.

5 Ye are all ^athe ¹children of light, and the ¹children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness.

6 ^aTherefore let us not sleep, as ^{do} others; but ^blet us watch and be ¹sober.

7 For ^athey that sleep sleep in the night; and they that be drunken ^bare drunken in the night.

8 But let us, who are of the day, be sober, ^aputting on the breastplate of faith and love; and for an helmet, the hope of salvation.

4:16, 17. The order of events at the time of Christ's coming is clearly given: (1) the Lord will descend with a shout, accompanied by the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God (cf. 1 Cor. 15:52); (2) the dead in Christ will be resurrected; and (3) then those remaining will be caught up with them in the clouds. Dead in Christ is a technical expression for believers of the church age. Caught up (Gr. harpazō, "to seize," "snatch"): The Latin word for carry off is raptus, from which we get rapture. The doctrine of the Rapture of the church is given its clearest expression in this verse, although it can also be seen in John 14:1-3; 1 Cor. 15:51, 52.

4:18. Comfort: The Christian's hope of the resurrection brings solace in the face of death—in contrast to the hopelessness of the heathen.

5:1. Times (Gr. chronos) denotes "periods of time" as opposed to seasons (Gr. kairos), which are specific points of time.

5:2. The day of the Lord is an all-encompassing term to describe the period that begins with the Great Tribulation, and includes the second coming of Christ and the millennial kingdom. This Old Testament expression is here identified with the parousia already introduced. It will begin unexpectedly (cf. Matt. 24:37).

5:3. Peace and safety were slogans of the Roman Empire.

5:4-9. But ye: In contrast to the wicked, for whom Christ's coming will be an hour of destruction, these believers are children of light who will not face God's wrath, but will be saved at the time of the parousia. Not appointed us to wrath: The wrath is the agony and tribulation occurring at the beginning of the day of the Lord. The believer is spared this, however (cf. 1:10; Rev. 6:16).

5:12. Are over you indicates a governing leadership, and refers to spiritual leaders such as elders and pastors. The people are to respect and regard them highly for their labor of love.

5:17. The Greek word here rendered without ceasing is used in secular literature to denote a man suffering from an intermittent cough—one that is not continuous, but occurs at intervals. Just as this individual has the tendency to cough, though does not always do so audibly, so the believer ought to remain in the attitude of prayer though not always praying audibly.

5:18. In every event or circumstance (thing) the Christian is to give thanks to God for the good He can bring out of the event, even should the event be unpleasant. The constant attitude of prayer, mentioned in verse 17, will help the believer to maintain gratitude in the face of adversity.

5:19. Quench means putting out fire in Matthew 12:20, Ephesians 6:16, and Hebrews 11:34. Here it is employed metaphorically to mean "stifle" or "suppress." The Christian can stifle the Holy Spirit's workings by hindering Him from leading the believer to rejoice (v. 16), to pray (v. 17), to give thanks in adversity (v. 18), and by despising prophetic utterances (v. 20) inspired by the Spirit.

5:23. This verse does not form a definition of the constituent parts of man, but is a Hebraism to denote the whole man.

5:26. The holy kiss was a Jewish custom of welcome. (See Luke 7:45; 22:48.) It was also used by the early Christians (cf. Rom. 16:16; 1 Cor. 16:20; 2 Cor. 13:12; 1 Pet. 5:14).

THESSALONIANS

Paul's second letter to the Thessalonians is a follow-up to the first.

It appears to have been written shortly after 1 Thessalonians, in response to certain reports that had come to the apostle regarding the Thessalonians' progress (cf. 3:11). Paul was still in Corinth and unable to leave his work there. However, he continued to maintain a keen interest in the little church to the north which had shown such promise (1:3, 4), despite some continuing serious problems. For background details on the city of Thessalonica and its church, see the Introduction to 1 Thessalonians.

While Paul was encouraged by their faith and steadfastness, he could see that many in the assembly were still very confused about the second coming of Christ. Paul even suggests the possibility that some are deliberately misrepresenting his teaching on this all-important subject (2:2). The possibility of such a deception is supported by counterfeit letters purportedly written by the apostle. He exhorts them to pay special attention to his signature, so that they may distinguish the genuine letters from the false (3:17). Paul knows the ultimate source of this trouble is Satan himself, the "evil one" (3:3), and he is confident that the Lord will protect them.

Nevertheless, this misunderstanding had led many in the church to forsake their occupations, to lead undisciplined lives, and to breed unrest among the people by becoming busybodies and beggars, living off those who still maintained gainful employment (3:6-15). Still others had become discouraged, thinking the day of the Lord had already begun and that they had somehow missed it. They had expected Christ to destroy their enemies. Yet they were still suffering persecution. Paul addresses these problems. He explains that while the time of the Lord's coming cannot be predicted, it will be a spectacular event that no one could miss. Furthermore, if the day of the Lord had already begun, then many other events would already have taken place (2:1-12). Since they had seen none of these events, they could be sure they had not missed the Lord's return. In the meantime, they should take heart in the fact that from the start, God's purpose was to include them in the glorious events of Christ's coming (2:13, 14). As for those who were presuming upon the good graces of their brethren, they should get to work or expect not to eat (3:6-15).

Patience and Faith in Persecutions

1 Paul, and Silvanus, and Timotheus, unto the church of the Thessalonians in God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ:

2 ^aGrace unto you, and peace, from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 We are bound to thank God always for you, brethren, as it is ¹meet, because that your faith groweth exceedingly, and the ²charity of every one of you all toward each other aboundeth;

2 Now we ¹beseech you, brethren, ^aby ²the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, ^band ²by our gathering together unto him,

2 ^aThat ye be not soon shaken in mind, or be troubled, neither by spirit, nor by word, nor by letter as from us, as that the day of Christ ¹is at hand.

1:1. For discussion of the salutation, see the note on 1 Thessalonians 1:1.

1:3. Your faith groweth: Paul cannot help but say once again how impressed he is with their spiritual growth (cf. 1 Thess. 1:2-10). This, no doubt, reflects the brevity of his stay there. Their testimony suggests that his earlier fears have been dispelled (cf. 1 Thess. 3:5, 10).

1:5. Token means literally "evidence." Of the righteous judgment of God: Another translation would be "for" the righteous. Paul is not saying that their suffering reflects God's judgment, rather that it will be "evidence" used in judgment against those who persecute them. God will righteously repay trouble to the wicked (vv. 6-8). Counted worthy: Their suffering does not qualify them for the kingdom. Instead it is a privilege extended to those who are genuinely members of the kingdom.

1:6. It is a righteous thing refers back to the righteous judgment of God cited in the previous verse.

1:7. Rest (Gr. anesis, "release" or "relaxation"): It is appropriate since Paul is encouraging them to relax and wait for the Lord's return, at which time He will judge all those who afflict His people. With us: Paul again uses himself as an example. He too had suffered (cf. 1 Thess. 3:3-5). Their suffering only gives them something in common with the apostle. The Lord Jesus shall be revealed (lit., "at the revelation of the Lord Jesus"): Second Thessalonians primarily concerns the revelation of Christ at His second coming (cf. Matt. 24:29-31), as distinguished from the Rapture (1 Thess. 4:13-18). The failure to recognize this distinction led to some of the problems at Thessalonica.

1:8. In flaming fire: The manifestation of the Son of Man employs this same apocalyptic imagery (Dan. 7:13; Rev. 1:13, 14). Paul employs know in a sense similar to the Hebrew cognate. In this context it signifies being intimately acquainted with and standing in a close relation to God. Thus, it means more than just knowing someone.

1:9. Everlasting destruction is not annihilation. It is a conscious, continuous expulsion from the presence of God, that is, from the place of blessing (cf. Is. 2:11, 17; Rev. 9:6).

1:10. In that day, that is, the day of His revelation—the Second Coming.

2:1. Our gathering together is a reference to the Rapture (cf. 1 Thess. 4:17).

2:2. Shaken (Gr. saleōō) denotes great anxiety and pain. The Thessalonians were deeply troubled about this matter. As that the day of Christ is at hand (lit., "as though the day of Christ is present"): These people thought the day of the Lord had already begun.

3 Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, ^aexcept there come a falling away first, and ^bthat man of sin be revealed, ^cthe son of perdition;

13 But we are ¹bound to give thanks alway to God for you, brethren

2:3. Falling away (Gr. apostasia) is the great and final apostasy or repudiation of the Christian faith that will occur at the appearance of the son of perdition (the Antichrist) (cf. 1 Tim. 4:1–5; 2 Tim. 3:1–5). Man of sin (some mss. read “man of lawlessness”): This is the beast out of the sea (Rev. 13:1), the little horn (Dan. 7:8), and the false Christ who will aim to rule the world (Rev. 13:15–17). This is the Antichrist.

2:4. Sitteth in the temple of God parallels the “abomination of desolation” (Matt. 24:15; cf. Dan. 9:27; 11:31; 12:11). When the Antichrist desecrates the rebuilt temple in Jerusalem, he will usurp worship for himself.

2:6, 7. Ye know what withholdeth literally means “restrains,” the same word translated “letteth” in verse 7. The restrainer may be the Holy Spirit, who will restrain sin throughout the church age until “He be taken out of the way,” that is, until His restraining influence is removed. This will occur at the Rapture of the church.

2:8. Then shall that Wicked be revealed (lit.,

“Then shall that lawless one be revealed”): Paul argues that the day of the Lord simply does not begin until the restraint by the Holy Spirit is removed, and the Antichrist is revealed. Since none of this had occurred, the day of the Lord had not yet come.

2:9. After [meaning “in accordance with”] the working of Satan: The Antichrist is so energized by satanic power that he can even counterfeit the signs of an apostle (cf. 2 Cor. 12:12).

2:10. Them that perish (Gr. apollumi) means “the lost” or “the perishing.” These are lost because they did not receive (Gr. dechomai) the gospel. (Contrast with the Thessalonian believers in 1 Thess. 2:13.)

2:11. God shall send them strong delusion shows that the judgment of God will already have fallen on them (cf. Matt. 13:10–17 for a similar instance).

2:13. From the beginning implies that from the start, the work of God was intended to bring them to salvation (i.e., glory, cf. v. 14) rather than to judgment. Spirit and belief: Salvation can occur only as a work of the Holy Spirit and through the means of belief.

APOSTASY

2:3. The word apostasy means “a standing away from” in the sense of a falling away, withdrawal, or defection from the truth. It may be the result of persecution (Matt. 24:9, 10), false teachers (Matt. 24:11), temptation (Luke 8:13), worldliness (2 Tim. 4:4), inadequate knowledge of Christ (1 John 2:19), moral lapse (Heb. 6:4–6), forsaking spiritual living and worship (Heb. 10:25–31), or unbelief (Heb. 3:12). While there are those in every generation who fall away, this will be a general condition prior to the revelation of the Antichrist. In classical Greek, the word apostasy was used of a revolt staged by a military commander. Illustration: The apostasy of Saul and Amaziah are but two examples of individuals rebelling against the revealed will of God. Application: The Christian should be careful to obey the Word of God to the best of his ability. (First Reference, Num. 22–24; Primary Reference, Jude; cf. 1 Cor. 5:6.)

RESTRAINING MINISTRY OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

2:7. The presence of the Holy Spirit in this world to some extent restrains evil. Often this is accomplished through the presence of Christians who are the “salt of the earth” (Matt. 5:13). Illustration: At the Rapture, when Christians are removed and the age of the Holy Spirit ceases, this restraining ministry will be “taken out of the way” during the Great Tribulation. Application: Until that time, God will use the godly examples of Christians to restrain evil in the world. (First Reference, Gen. 6:3; Primary Reference, 2 Thess. 2:7; cf. John 14:16.)

Lord ¹touching you, that ye both do and will do the things which we command you.

5 And ^athe Lord direct your hearts into the love of God, and into the ¹patient waiting for Christ.

Be Not Weary in Well Doing

6 Now we command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, ^athat ye withdraw yourselves ^bfrom every brother that walketh ^cdisorderly, and not after the tradition which he received of us.

7 For yourselves know how ye ought to follow us: for we behaved not ourselves disorderly among you;

8 Neither did we eat any man's bread ¹for nought; but ²wrought with ^alabour and ³travail night and day, that we might not be ⁴chargeable to any of you:

9 Not because we have not ^apower, ¹but to make ourselves an ensample unto you to follow us.

10 For even when we were with you, this we commanded you, that if any would not work, neither should he eat.

11 For we hear that there are some which walk among you disorderly, working not at all, but are ^abusybodies.

2:14. By our gospel (see Rom. 10:17): "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God."

2:15. Traditions ... taught refers to more than customs. In view here is the totality of the apostolic doctrine as it was given to them.

2:16, 17. Paul's prayer touches on themes given elsewhere in the epistle (cf. 1:11, 12: 3:5; 3:16).

3:2, 3. For all men have not faith. But the Lord is faithful: The unfaithfulness of men provides a contrast to the faithfulness of God, a favorite topic of Paul's (cf. 1 Cor. 10:13; 1 Thess. 5:24; 2 Tim. 2:13). Keep means "guard." Evil or "evil one": The reference is to Satan.

3:6. Command, used above in verse 4, is a very strong, authoritative term. Since it is buttressed by an appeal to the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, one cannot miss the seriousness of the apostle here. Withdraw literally means "dissociate." This is the only time this term is used in the New Testament to mean church censure. Walketh disorderly indicates a pattern of life not in conformity to the Word of God.

3:10-12. Paul expounds his simple and straightforward work ethic: If a person will not work, he should not eat! The Thessalonians' diversion encouraged their meddling ways, demonstrating that "idle hands are the Devil's workshop."

TRADITION

2:15. The word tradition literally means "a giving over by word of mouth or writing." It refers to teachings handed down from one person to another. Tradition is not in and of itself wrong; it is only wrong when opposed to the Word of God. In the early church, good tradition was the principal means of Christian instruction (Luke 1:2). Paul used this word to describe his teachings, especially at Corinth and Thessalonica (v. 15; 3:6). False tradition ends up as heresy or apostasy. Illustration: The religious leaders of Jesus' day erred in placing the traditions of men above the Word of God (Matt. 15:1-9). In contrast, Luke sifted through existing records and apparently interviewed witnesses in writing an inspired record to instruct Theophilus in the faith (Luke 1:1-4). Application: Christians need to sit under the preaching and teaching of the Word of God, but when the content conflicts with the Scriptures, the teaching of men should be disregarded for the certain truth of the Bible. (First Reference, Matt. 15:2; Primary Reference, 2 Thess. 2:15; cf. 2 Tim. 2:15.)

12 Now them that are such we command and exhort by our Lord Jesus Christ, ^athat with quietness they work, and eat their own bread.

13 But ye, brethren, ^abe not weary in well doing.

14 And if any man obey not our word by this epistle, note that man, and ^ahave no company with him, that he may be ashamed.

18 ^aThe grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

3:14, 15. This instruction falls short of excommunication. Paul intends his readers to shame the brother, who is not an enemy, into obedience.

3:17. Salutation of Paul: Paul's seal in his own handwriting indicates the authenticity of this letter.

This was necessary, since apparently some forged documents claiming to be from his pen were circulating (cf. 2:2). Paul makes clear how they can identify his genuine writings.

TIMOTHY

This is the first of Paul's epistles to the young pastor Timothy. In it he exhorts Timothy to guard against false doctrine, protect public worship, and develop mature leadership. Much of the epistle deals with the nature of pastoral conduct, including the qualifications of a bishop (pastor) as a true teacher of God's Word. Practical directions for elders and for widows are also given in detail.

Timothy (Gr. Timotheos) means "Honoring God" or "Honored by God." He was the son of a Greek father and a Jewish mother named Eunice (2 Tim. 1:5). Timothy was likely one of Paul's own converts from his first missionary journey to Lystra. The apostle calls him "my own son in the faith" (1:2) and "my dearly beloved son" (2 Tim. 1:2). He became Paul's companion on his second missionary journey. After a period of faithful service he was sent as Paul's apostolic representative to oversee the affairs of the church at Ephesus. This then was the occasion of the writing of this first epistle. Paul was giving Timothy detailed instructions for the care and oversight of the church at Ephesus.

Authorship. Tradition strongly supports the fact that the apostle Paul was the author of this epistle. The letter claims Paul as its author (1:1), and it is filled with Pauline themes and even contains a brief autobiography (1:11-15). While some critics tend to reject the Pauline authorship of the Pastoral Epistles, the letters' acceptance dates as far back as Polycarp, Clement of Rome, Irenaeus, Tertullian, and Clement of Alexandria.

Paul wrote 1 Timothy from Macedonia in A.D. 62 or 63. He sent the letter to Timothy, whom he had left at Ephesus. He wrote to encourage Timothy in his responsibilities for overseeing the work of the Ephesian church and possibly the other churches of the province of Asia. It is possible that he wrote this epistle from Philippi after being released from his first imprisonment at Rome.

Purpose. First Timothy lays the foundation for ordaining elders in the local church. It provides an apostolic guideline for ordaining men to the sacred office of the church. In essence, it is a leadership manual for church organization and administration. Its tone is practical and spiritual. Its theme is that of conduct in the church of the living God.

Christ is presented in this epistle as the "mediator between God and men" (2:5). As such He is the Savior of all men who believe in Him (4:10). He is the Lord of the church to whom Timothy is responsible as an under-shepherd. Thus, the young pastor is to fulfill his duties in light of God's authority. The term bishop (Gr. episkopos) is used synonymously with the term elder (presbuteros) and refers to the same office (cf. Acts 20:17, 28; Titus 1:5-7). The office of deacon (diakonos, "servant") is a different office, but with similar qualifications.

9 Knowing this, that the law is not made for a righteous man, but for the lawless and disobedient, for the ungodly and for sinners, for unholy and profane, for murderers of fathers and murderers of mothers, for manslayers,

10 For ¹whoremongers, for ²them that defile themselves with mankind, for ³menstealers, for liars, for ⁴perjured persons, and if there be any other thing that is contrary to sound doctrine;

11 According to the glorious gospel of the ^ablessed God, which was ^bcommitted to my trust.

1:1. God is described as our Saviour because He is the author of man’s salvation. Jesus is called our hope since He is the object and embodiment of our expectation.

1:2. My own son (or “genuine child”): Paul acknowledges Timothy to be a real believer, in contrast to some whose Christian claims are spurious.

1:3, 4. We may read verses 3b and 4a as follows: “That you might command certain people not to teach other doctrines, nor to give heed to myths and endless genealogies.” Timothy is to put an end to the teaching of false doctrines. Which minister questions, rather than godly edifying (i.e., they promote useless speculations rather than God’s work): Attention given to the circulating false doctrines, fables and ... genealogies, does not assist believers in carrying out responsibilities divinely entrusted to them, but gives rise to idle queries.

1:5. This verse could be translated as follows: “But the goal of this command is love from a pure heart, from a clear conscience, and from genuine faith.” The “goal” of Timothy’s “command” of forbidding false teaching (vv. 3, 4) is not all negative; its positive aim is to bring about true love in Christians. Note the spiritual evolution here: “genuine faith” in Christ produces “a clear conscience,” that is, one cleared of offense before God by Jesus’ atonement. This in turn leads to “a pure heart,” that is, a life free of sin; and this brings about “love” for God and others.

1:6. From which refers to verse 5’s “pure heart,” “clear conscience,” and “faith unfeigned.” Because heretics have swerved (deviated) from these practical virtues of daily living, they have turned aside unto vain jangling (fruitless discussion). Such talk is profitless because it detracts from spiritual progress.

1:9, 10. The law is not made for a righteous man (or, “The law is not valid for a righteous person”) implies that the heretics of verses 6 and 7 are misusing the law, trying to impose it on the Christian. Properly used, the law benefits unbelievers in pointing out their sin (Rom. 7:7-9) and leading them to Christ (Gal. 3:24). The lawless are criminals. The disobedient are the rebellious. The ungodly are the godless, that is, showing no reverence for God. Sinners are those failing to measure up to divine standards. The unholy are impure. Profane means defiling sacred things. Whoremongers are fornicators. Them that defile themselves with mankind are homosexuals. Menstealers are kidnapers. Sound doctrine (lit., “healthy teaching”): The Bible properly taught is a sort of spiritual medicine that heals man’s diseased moral nature, making him spiritually and ethically sound and healthy.

1:11. The glorious gospel of the blessed God means the gospel about the character of the blessed God. The law reveals man’s sinful character (vv. 9, 10), but the gospel discloses God’s salvation from sin and from the law's curse. The blessed God: All blessings and happiness are in God, and He bestows them upon those embracing His gospel.

1:12. Christ provided all the enablement required, so that Paul could fulfill his apostolic duties.

1:13. Injurious means violent.

1:14. Grace ... was exceeding abundant (or, "grace ... was more abundant"): Christ's undeserved favor far outweighed Paul's previous sinful life. With faith and love: God's grace brought about faith in Paul, in contrast to his former "unbelief" and it also produced love in him, in contrast to his previous blasphemy, persecution, and violence to the church (v. 13). Which refers to faith: Paul's faith or trust is in Christ Jesus.

1:15. Chief denotes rank or degree. Paul views himself as the foremost of sinners; of whom I am chief (the worst).

1:16. We could read the verse thus: "But I obtained mercy for this reason: that in my case as the worst [sinner] Christ Jesus might demonstrate the fullest of patience, as an example for those about to believe on him for eternal life." Paul's conversion encourages other sinners; since Christ has already saved the worst sinner, He can save those less sinful.

1:18. This charge (or, "this command"): This refers to the command to forbid the teaching of false doctrine (v. 3). The prophecies which went before on thee (or, "the prophecies that pointed to you"): These were divine revelations given through New Testament prophets, which pointed out to Paul that Timothy was to be his coworker.

1:19. Faith is used in two different ways in this verse. The first "faith" is subjective, referring to Timothy's own personal trust or faith in God; holding faith means that he is to maintain his confidence in God. The second "faith" is objective, referring to the body of revealed truth believed by the church, that is, "the faith which was once delivered unto the saints" (Jude 3). The last half of verse 19 may be translated: "which [a good conscience] some, having repudiated, have become shipwrecked concerning the faith." Because some rejected their inner moral voice of conscience, they have strayed far from the truth of God into theological heresy. Often religious error has its roots in moral rather than intellectual causes.

1:20. I have delivered unto Satan may signify (1) that the two heretics mentioned were excommunicated from the church, (2) the supernatural infliction of corporeal suffering, or (3) both.

2:1. First of all (or, "most important of all"): Prayer is to hold the preeminent place in church meetings. Four different types of prayer are mentioned here: (1) supplications are precise requests for specific needs; (2) prayers is a general word embracing various kinds of prayer—confession, adoration, and so on; (3) intercessions denote prayers to God on behalf of others; (4) giving of thanks refers to prayers of praise.

2:2, 3. There are three reasons why the prayers of verse 1 are to be offered "for all men": (1) that Christians may enjoy a tranquil life (v. 2); (2) such praying is good and acceptable to God (v. 3); (3) such prayers help bring about the salvation of men (v. 4).

2:2. A quiet and peaceable life: The word quiet means "not troubled from without"; that is, intercessory prayer enables good government to ensure that its citizens are not troubled by enemies or forces outside its borders. "Peaceable" means "not troubled from within"; that is, the church's prayer also aids competent government in maintaining law and order within its own borders. The translation godliness and honesty is unfortunate, for the exercise of these virtues is not dependent upon good government; they can be cultivated even in poor political management quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and ²honesty.

3 For this is ^agood and acceptable in the sight ^bof God our Saviour; and persecution. The text should read, "That we may lead a quiet and peaceable life with the utmost reverence and respect." This respect is for governmental authority. Respect can best be realized when rulers are competent and rightly discharging their duties. Otherwise, it is difficult to respect rulers when they are incompetent and unjust.

4 ^aWho ¹will have all men to be saved, ^band to come unto the knowledge of the truth.

2:5–7. These verses provide a threefold evidence confirming the assertion in verse 4 that God "will have all men to be saved": (1) There being but one God implies that He must have the same desire toward all people, which is, namely, their salvation. One mediator suggests His having made the same provision for all people, namely redemption. (2) Jesus gave himself a ransom for all (v. 6). (3) Paul's being divinely ordained ... a teacher of the Gentiles (v. 7) shows that if sinful pagans are instructed in faith and verity (truth), then surely God does indeed want all to be saved.

2:6. To be testified in due time (or, "the proof given at the right time"): Jesus' sacrifice is "proof" of God's wish for all to be converted.

2:8. I will ... that men pray every where (or, "I intend ... that men in every locality pray"): The Greek word andres means "males." Men are to lead audibly in public prayer; women are to pray silently. This directive remains the same "in every locality," geography being no factor. The manner in which men are to pray is that of lifting up holy hands, that is, with a pure life, which is without wrath and doubting (disputes).

2:9. Verses 9–15 give guidelines for the woman's place in public worship. With shamefacedness and sobriety (or, "with modesty and discretion"): The female has a divinely implanted desire to have a good appearance, and Paul is not discouraging this. Rather, he is speaking against extravagant and ostentatious dress. Women are neither to dress immodestly, so as to exploit their feminine charm, hindering their brethren from worship; nor are they to overdo their dress, provoking their Christian sisters to jealousy.

2:10. This verse could be rendered: "But let them dress themselves with that which is proper for women who profess, by their good works, reverence for God." For such women proper dress should conform to their Christian testimony and behavior.

2:11. In public worship services women are to learn in silence with all [the fullest] subjection to church leadership.

2:12. The prohibition against women teaching in the church is qualified by Titus 2:4, which allows them to instruct other women (and probably children also).

2:13, 14. Two reasons are given for the apostolic command of verse 12. (1) Priority in Creation denotes man's authority over woman (v. 13). God could have created the woman first or both simultaneously; but He did not, as it was always His intention for man to lead and woman to follow. (2) In the serpent's temptation (Gen. 3) Adam was not deceived, but Eve was deceived.

2:15. This verse is amphibological, that is, it means two different things concurrently, both of which are correct. She shall be saved has a soteriological and an ecclesiastical meaning. The former means that although Eve fell "in the transgression" (v. 14), women can be spiritually saved from sin, provided they persevere in faith and charity [love] and holiness with sobriety (chastity). The ecclesiastical meaning indicates the woman "shall be saved" from having no role or significance in the local church. Her primary ministry is that of childbearing and the rearing of children who will become godly adults and leaders. "The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world."

3:1. We could render the verse as follows: "This is a reliable statement: if anyone strives for the position of overseer, he desires a noble task." See the note on Philippians 1:1 for bishops and "overseers."

2 A bishop then must be blameless, the husband of one wife, ¹vigilant, ²sober, of good behaviour, given to hospitality, ³apt to teach;

3 Not ¹given to wine, ²no striker, not greedy ³of filthy lucre; but patient, not a brawler, not covetous;

Qualifications for Deacons

8 Likewise must the deacons be ¹grave, not doubletongued, ^anot given to much wine, not greedy of ²filthy lucre;

9 Holding the ¹mystery of the faith in a pure conscience.

3:2. Blameless means irreproachable, that is, impeccable in reputation. The husband of one wife, faithful to his wife. Vigilant means temperate. This speaks of spiritual sobriety: not intoxicated or controlled by fleshly passions and sensual appetites. To be sober is to be of sound mind; that is, not of frivolous disposition, but serious and possessing good judgment. Of good behaviour means orderly in life, habits, and work. One who is given to hospitality receives strangers warmly and treats guests generously. To be apt to teach is to be skillful in teaching Scripture.

3:3. Not given to wine means not addicted to wine. No striker means not physically violent. Not greedy means not fond of dishonest gain. Patient means not quarrelsome, peaceable; that is, does not argue over minor matters or always seek to have his way, but defers to the wishes of others when no cardinal doctrine or policy is sacrificed. Not covetous, literally, “not a lover of money”: His main priority is not the acquisition of money. Materialism ill befits one called above all to care for the spiritual welfare of souls.

3:4. Ruleth well his own house means that he manages his family rightly. Having his children in subjection means that he brings about with all gravity (in a dignified manner) obedience in his children.

3:5. Paul’s reasoning is from the lesser to the greater: a man poorly managing his own family is incapable of giving proper leadership to the church family.

3:6. Not a novice: He is not a new convert or young Christian. We may render the last part of the verse: “lest, being conceited, he fall into judgment incurred by the Devil.” As Satan fell through pride, similarly a neophyte could be ruined by pride after being promoted to leadership too swiftly.

3:7. A good report: The overseer must not be the object of justified criticism (cf. Luke 6:26) by non-Christians (them which are without). Otherwise, he is likely to become a target for reproach [disgrace] and the snare sprung by the devil.

3:8. Grave means worthy of respect. Not doubletongued means saying the same thing to one party as to the other. Not greedy of filthy lucre means not being fond of dishonest financial profits. The same word is used in verse 3.

3:9. Holding the mystery of the faith: As capable apologists and defenders, deacons must preserve the truth as God revealed it.

PASTORAL OFFICE

3:1. The pastor, who shepherds today’s church, also fulfills the New Testament role of elder and bishop (overseer), and is responsible to God for the spiritual welfare of the church (Acts 20:28).

When Christ returns, He will judge and reward these pastors (elders) according to their faithfulness in leading the church to accomplish God’s will (1 Pet. 5:4). There are at least seven different titles for the New Testament pastor. The term elder is used over 20 times, emphasizing the pastor’s wisdom and maturity. The title bishop emphasizes the administrative function of the office. The word pastor emphasizes the responsibility of caring for the church, as a shepherd cares for the sheep. The word preacher emphasizes the ministry of publicly proclaiming God’s Word. The title teacher emphasizes that the pastor should be “apt to teach.” The pastor is also called a servant, reminding him that he is to minister to others; and he is a steward, managing the property of others (the church of Christ). Illustration: Both Timothy and Titus were pastors of churches started by Paul, who wrote Pastoral Epistles to them. Application: Christians should be supportive of their pastors, as they attempt to fulfill their biblical ministry. (First Reference, Jer. 2:8; Primary Reference, 1 Tim. 3:1–7.)

3:8–13. The word deacon derives from a Greek word for servant; hence, the deacons are a serving office in the church. In order to free the apostles for the more important duties of prayer and ministry of the Word, seven men were appointed to care for the church. These are generally thought to have been deacons (Acts 6:1–4). While there is no “job description” for a servant, the nature of a deacon’s qualifications gives insight into his duties (Acts 6:1–8; 1 Tim. 3:8–13). The first deacons performed routine labors in the church, and were responsible for promoting harmony among various groups within the assembly. Deacons may also have served in an advisory capacity, and they engaged in spiritual ministries, including preaching and church planting. Application: In one sense, every Christian should act like a deacon in encouraging church harmony and helping others serve Christ more effectively. (First Reference, Phil. 1:1; Primary Reference, 1 Tim. 3:8–13; cf. Eph. 4:11.)

10 And let these also first be proved; then let them ¹use the office of a deacon, being found blameless.

11 Even so must their wives be ¹grave, not slanderers, ²sober, faithful in all things.

12 Let the deacons be the husbands of one wife, ruling their children and their own houses well.

13 For they that have ¹used the office of a deacon well ²purchase to themselves a good ³degree, and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus.

3:10. The verse may be translated, “and let these, too, first be examined; then let them serve as deacon, if found blameless.” This probably refers not to a probationary period, but to an examination of the required qualities of character. The word “too” implies that this requirement applies also to overseers (elders).

3:11. Their wives (or, deaconesses): As in Romans 16:1, these women who held office ministered especially to female believers, instructing them, giving counsel, helping when sick, and so on. Grave means dignified or worthy of respect. Not slanderers means not guilty of defamation of character. Sober means temperate, possessing self-control. Faithful in all things is dependable in all matters.

3:13. The verse may be translated, “For they who have served well as deacons obtain for themselves a good standing and much joyful confidence in the faith which is in Christ Jesus.” This “good standing” is spiritual progress acquired by faithful church service.

3:15. If Paul should delay (tarry long) in visiting Timothy, this epistle instructs him how he must behave himself in the house of God, that is, how to properly order his personal conduct in the church, and how to manage church affairs as a leader. Timothy must comply with Paul’s directions because the church belongs to God and is the pillar [support] and ground [foundation] of the truth. If church members and affairs do not conform to the standards set forth in this epistle, the bulwark of the truth (the church) will be seriously undermined.

3:16. Great is the mystery of godliness may be translated: “Great is the mystery of the [Christian] religion.” The importance of the faith (truth) preached by the Christian church is another reason Timothy must “behave” himself and manage ecclesiastical affairs (v. 15) as set forth in this epistle. Should he fail to do so, the heralding of the Christian faith will be hindered. God was manifest in the flesh: Jesus was revealed in human form. Justified in the Spirit: The Holy Spirit vindicated Jesus in that His true nature was disclosed and His messianic claims substantiated. Seen of angels: They witnessed Jesus’ whole earthly career. Preached unto the Gentiles: The gospel of Jesus has been proclaimed to the nations. Believed on in the world: Multitudes have accepted the gospel, trusting in Jesus. Received up into glory: Jesus was divinely taken back into heaven.

4:1. Expressly means clearly. To depart means to apostatize. Apostasy is the deliberate and permanent rejection of Christianity after a previous profession of faith in it. Doctrines of devils, that is, doctrines taught by demons.

4:2. Speaking lies in hypocrisy (or, “by the hypocrisy of liars”): The demons of verse 1 expound their doctrines, not directly, but indirectly through such human ministers. These are further described as having their conscience seared with a hot iron, that is, branded (scarred) in their conscience. Permanently defaced, the moral life of these hypocrites is scarred by sin as they carry around the awareness of their guilt, yet continue preaching to others.

DEMONS

4:1. Demons are real, incorporeal beings, probably fallen angels who rebelled against God in heaven and were cast out of His presence. Thus, much of what is true of angels is also true of demons. They, however, appear to be evil in nature and loyal to Satan. Underestimating their immense power would be a grave mistake. Christians who believe they can “wrestle” with demons without using “the whole armor of God” are seriously deluded. While apparently some demons are currently confined (2 Pet. 2:4; Jude 6), most are not and will not be finally punished until the Millennium (Rev. 20:3). After a brief period of freedom at the end of the Millennium (during which they inspire a final rebellion), they will be eternally confined to hell, which was originally prepared for them (Matt. 25:41). (First Reference, 2 Pet. 2:4; Primary Reference, 1 Tim. 4:1; cf. Eph. 6:12.)

11 These things command and teach.

Be an Example

12 Let no man ¹despise thy youth; but be thou an ^aexample of the believers, in word, in ²conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity.

13 Till I come, give attendance to reading, to exhortation, to ¹doctrine.

14 ^aNeglect not the gift that is in thee, which was given thee by prophecy, ^bwith the laying on of the hands of the ¹presbytery.

15 Meditate upon these things; give thyself ¹wholly to them; that thy ²profiting may ³appear to all.

16 Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee.

4:3. Two examples of demonic doctrines are cited here: (1) prohibition against marriage, and (2) abstaining from certain foods.

4:4. Every creature of God is good (or, "Everything created by God is good"): This substantiates the remark in verse 3 that God created foods to be eaten, not abstained from.

4:5. By divine statements (by the word of God) declaring all foods fit for man, and by the believer's giving of thanks before meals (by ... prayer), food is sanctified. This means food is set apart (reserved) for consumption by Christians.

4:6. Nourished up in (or, "being trained in"): As Timothy teaches the brethren God's word, he also instructs himself. Good doctrine helps make a good minister. Whereunto thou hast attained (or, "which good doctrine you have followed"): Timothy has faithfully conformed to the truth Paul taught him.

4:7. We may read the verse, "But avoid profane and fabricated myths, and exercise yourself to be godly." These false doctrines, called "myths," are described as "profane" because they promote ungodliness, and "fabricated" because they—like modern-day soap operas—are silly and flighty in character. Not only must Timothy avoid false teaching, he must spare himself no pain and effort to be pious. Godliness does not come automatically. To attain holiness he must be diligent in prayer, Bible study, obedience, fellowshiping with other believers, and Christian service.

4:8. The verse may be paraphrased, "For physical exercise is of limited value, but godliness, the result of spiritual exercise, has unlimited value, since it brings blessings for both now and eternity."

4:10. For therefore we both labour and suffer reproach (or, "For we both toil and labor to attain this goal"). That is, Paul and associates exercise themselves spiritually to be godly, so they may realize the promise of abundant life and blessings (v. 8). God

... is the Saviour of all men in that He has provided salvation for all. But only those that believe are actually saved.

4:11. Command and teach: Chronologically, teaching precedes commanding, but "command" is put first to remind timid Timothy, who is eager to teach but hesitant to exercise authority, that this is also one of his responsibilities as a leader.

4:12. Youth: This Greek word was applied to men 40 years of age and younger. To help prevent some from despising his "youth," Timothy is to be ... an example of [for] the believers in the areas of word (conversation), conversation (conduct), charity (love for those treating him well and ill), spirit (proper attitude), faith (trusting God in good and bad times), and in purity (sexual purity and integrity of life).

4:13. In his Ephesian ministry Timothy is to read and teach the Scriptures, and exhort God's people to obey the truths learned.

4:14. Neglect not the gift that is in thee (or, "Stop neglecting the spiritual gift which is in you"): Evidently he had not been fulfilling all the responsibilities of verse 13. This gift ... was given Timothy by prophecy; that is, through utterance of some New Testament prophet(s), the church was informed of the divine enablement granted him. This was accompanied by the laying on of the hands of the church elders in recognition of the fact that God had called Timothy to the ministry and had gifted him for it.

4:15. Meditate upon these things could be rendered, "Take pains with these things." Give thyself wholly to them could be rendered, "Be completely absorbed in them." Timothy can prevent the neglect of his gift (v. 14) by totally giving himself to carry out the tasks at hand. He is to do this for the purpose that thy profiting [spiritual progress] may appear to all.

4:16. Timothy is to keep constant watch (take heed) over both his own spiritual life (thyself) and what he teaches others (doctrine). He must continue in these two activities, for in doing so he will both save himself from the coming apostasy (v. 1) and them that hear him.

12 Having ¹damnation, because they have cast off their first ²faith.

13 And ¹withal they learn to be idle, wandering about from house to house; and not only idle, but ²tattlers also and busybodies, speaking things which they ought not.

5:1. Elder here denotes, not a man holding the church office of overseer or elder, but a man older than Timothy. He is to deal with older men as though each were his father.

5:3. Honour in this context signifies the expressing of esteem by material and financial support. That are widows indeed (or, "who are real widows"): The following verses set forth three prerequisites for a widow to qualify for church aid: (1) she must be desolate, having no family to care for her; (2) she must possess certain spiritual qualities; (3) she must be a certain age.

5:4. A widow's children or nephews (grandchildren) are to show respect (shew piety at home) by caring for her (requite their parents). This prevents the church from being unnecessarily burdened financially. The responsibility for supporting a widow lies first with her family, second with the church.

5:5. A widow deserving of church aid is desolate (has no family to care for her); trusteth in God (lives the Christian life faithfully); continueth in supplications (constantly prays for her support and for the church's ministry).

5:6. This may be paraphrased, "But the widow who indulges in luxurious living, though physically alive, is spiritually dead."

5:7. Timothy is to ensure that the church complies with the directives of verses 3–6, so they [the widow and her relatives] may be blameless in the matter of widow care.

5:8. Any family member or relative who fails to care for his own widow, especially for those of his own house (in his immediate family) disavows Christianity (hath denied the faith). He is morally worse than an infidel (unbeliever), for even unbelievers generally assume responsibility for aged parents.

5:9, 10. A widow qualifies for church aid if she (1) is at least 60 years in age, (2) was faithful to her husband, and (3) has done good works. The wife of one man does not forbid remarriage. For Paul would hardly exclude here a widow from receiving church assistance who, on his advice in verse 11, had remarried and later become a widow again. This phrase denotes marital fidelity.

5:11. The church is to refuse to financially support younger widows, that is, those below 60 years of age. Wax wanton means that some younger widows rebel against Christ in that they will marry outside of His will, that is, marry people of whom He disapproves.

5:12. When a widow marries outside of Christ's will (v. 11), she then incurs judgment (damnation) from others because she has broken (cast off) her first faith, or primary pledge to obey Him.

5:13. Tattlers are gossips. With time on her hands and no responsibilities, a young widow financially supported by the church is likely to illustrate that "idleness is the Devil's workshop."

5:14. I will denotes strong intention based on thorough deliberation. Younger women are young widows. Guide the house means to manage their homes.

5:15. Turned aside after Satan: Some younger widows have rejected chaste living, propriety, and a proper second marriage, pursuing—in accord with Satan's wishes—a carnal, self-indulgent, self-willed life.

16 If any man or woman that believeth have widows, let them ¹relieve them, and let not the church be ²charged; that it may relieve them that are widows indeed.

Honour the Elders

17 Let the elders that rule will be counted worthy of double honour, especially they who labour in the word and doctrine.

25 Likewise also the good works of some are manifest beforehand; and they that are otherwise cannot be hid.

Honour Your Masters

6 Let as many ^aservants as are under the yoke count their own masters worthy of all honour, that the name of God and his doctrine be not blasphemed.

2 And they that have believing masters, let them not despise them, because they are brethren; but rather do them service, because they are faithful and beloved, partakers of the benefit. These things teach and exhort.

5:16. A Christian man or woman with a widow in the family is to support (relieve) her. This prevents the church from being unnecessarily burdened (charged), freeing it to aid widows in more dire need.

5:17. Elders are the same as the “bishops” or overseers of 3:1-7, who are charged with the spiritual oversight of the church. Those devoting full time to the ministry are to receive double honour, that is, esteem for the office held, as well as financial remuneration compensating for the loss of income sustained in fulfilling their duties.

5:19. We may translate the verse: “Don’t ever accept [as true] an accusation against an elder, unless verified by the evidence of two or three witnesses.”

5:20. Them that sin refers to elders guilty of persistent, flagrant sin, and against whom an accusation has been proven (v. 19). Such are to be publicly censured before the church, that others (the remaining elders and all believers) may not sin.

5:21. The apostle strictly commands Timothy to comply with (observe) the directives of verses 1-20. He is to do so both without preferring one before another (without prejudging a matter ahead of the facts), and without partiality (preferential treatment is to be shown no one).

5:22. Lay hands suddenly on no man cautions Timothy against hastily ordaining a man as elder. Otherwise Timothy will be partaker of this unqualified elder's sin if he acts irresponsibly in office. Timothy can keep himself pure by not putting such men into office prematurely.

5:23. This verse may be rendered, “Stop drinking only water, but periodically use a little wine for the sake of your digestion and frequent sicknesses.”

5:24, 25. Reinforcing the command to “suddenly” ordain no one to leadership (v. 22), these verses are applied to Timothy by analogy. The sins of some men are obvious (open), declaring in advance (beforehand) the judicial decision to be passed upon them by God in judgment; the sins of others are not so obvious, but will catch up (they follow after) with them in judgment. Whether sins be conspicuous or inconspicuous, God will find them out. Similarly the good works of some are easily seen (manifest), while those of others are not; nevertheless, even good works that are undetected by man will eventually be made known in judgment. The point is that thorough examination exposes all deeds—good and bad, known and unknown. The application is that if Timothy and the church will not hastily install men into office, but carefully examine each elder candidate, his true character and fitness for office can eventually be determined.

6:1. Let as many servants as are under the yoke (or, “let all those who are under the yoke as slaves”): This gives instructions to slaves of unbelieving masters, while verse 2 instructs slaves under Christian masters. The name of God refers to His reputation.

6:2. Christianity creates equality of standing before God. Because some believing slaves felt there should also be social equality, they despised their Christian masters. Christian slaves are not to despise their believing masters; rather do them service [but serve them all the better]. Because they are faithful, and so on, may be translated, “Because those who partake of this good service [the slaves’ fine work] are believers and dear to God.” The phrase these things refers to the contents of this epistle. Timothy is to teach (explain the letter’s truths to the church) and exhort (urge the people to comply with Paul’s instructions).

15 Which in his times he shall ¹shew, who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords;

6:3. Consent not means that one does not agree with or adhere to. Wholesome words are teachings that are sound (correct) and promote spiritual health. Doctrine which is according to godliness is doctrine that is in accord with, and leads to, godliness.

6:4, 5. These verses may be rendered, “He is conceited, understanding nothing, but has a morbid interest about controversies and disputes over words, from which come envy, strife, defamation, evil suspicions, constant irritations between men who are morally corrupt in thinking, bereft of the truth, and who suppose that godliness is a means of financial profit.”

6:7. And it is certain we can carry nothing out (or, “because we are unable to carry anything out”): Man enters the world at birth possessing nothing, in order to teach him that he will exit the world in the same manner—taking nothing with him. This is a divine means of showing man that since material wealth is relatively insignificant, he should pursue the important things mentioned in verse 11.

6:8. This verse prevents the wrong understanding of verse 7, that material possessions have no place in the Christian’s life. By figure of speech food and raiment stand for all of life’s basic necessities. These are all the believer needs, and having these he can be content.

6:9. They that will be rich are those whose ambition is to be rich.

6:10. The root of all evil means a root or source of all kinds of evil. The love for money is not the only source from which evils come. Coveted after means that some have “striven after” money as the goal of life.

6:11. Flee these things means shun a love for money (v. 10) and the striving for material wealth (v. 9) with all its resulting woes. Follow after means pursue. Righteousness is practical correctness, conforming to God’s will in one’s thinking and acting. Godliness is proper reverence for, and obedience to, God. Faith is a trust in God that grows stronger. Love is a maturing affection for God and man. Patience is perseverance or steadfastness in life and service. Meekness is gentleness.

6:12. The good fight concerns the daily struggle with sin in the Christian life, and the hardships and adversities in the ministry. A genuine believer demonstrates the reality of his faith by being engaged in this warfare. Lay hold on eternal life does not negate the fact that a believer now possesses spiritual life (John 3:36); rather, it speaks of fully realizing or appropriating salvation as the believer matures.

6:13. A charge is a command. Quickeneth contains the idea of giving life to. Since God gives life to all things, He can also enable Timothy to “fight the good fight” (v. 12).

6:14. This commandment refers back to the charge in verse 13 which embraces the injunctions of verses 11, 12. Thus, “this commandment” is the charge to pursue godliness (v. 11) and to fulfill one’s ministry (v. 12). Without spot, unrebukable means Timothy is to be meticulous in his obedience of verses 11–13, that is, without fault and failure in compliance.

6:15. We may read the first part of the verse, “Which [Jesus’ appearing of 6:14] He will make visible at the proper time.” A Potentate is a sovereign ruler.

16 Who only hath immortality, dwelling in the ^alight which no man can approach unto; ^bwhom no man hath seen, nor can see: to whom be honour and power everlasting. Amen.

21 Which some professing have ¹erred concerning the faith. Grace be with thee. Amen.

6:17, 18. Paul charges wealthy believers (1) not to be proud and look down on those who are not rich, (2) to confide in God rather than in unstable riches, (3) to be rich in good works by generously sharing their surplus of financial resources with the needy. To be ready to distribute is to be generous in sharing. To be willing to communicate is to be liberal in giving.

6:19. When wealthy believers generously share (v. 18), they secure an assurance (laying up in store for themselves a good foundation) that in the future (against the time to come) they will indeed enter heaven (lay hold on eternal life). Salvation is not purchased by the giving of money, but generosity demonstrates the reality of one's faith. Since the believer trusts God and not money, he gives. This giving shows where his heart is and that he views his wealth in light of eternity.

6:20. That which is committed to Timothy's trust is a knowledge of the truth imparted by Paul. He is to keep or guard it. To ensure this, Timothy must turn away from vain babblings [empty talk devoid of truth], and oppositions (heretical arguments used to oppose truth).

6:21. Those who erred went astray from the truth.

TIMOTHY

Second Timothy is the latest of the Pauline letters. As such it is of special interest not only because of what it reveals concerning the last days of Paul's life, but also because of what it reveals about its recipient.

Historical Setting. Paul was freed from his house arrest in Rome in the spring of A.D. 63 and traveled to Macedonia (cf. Phil. 2:24; Philem. 22) across the Adriatic Sea, visiting Philippi, Ephesus, Colossae, and Laodicea. The great Roman fire occurred in A.D. 64. Paul possibly went to Spain, probably by sea, in A.D. 64 and 65. In the summer of 66 he returned to Ephesus in Asia Minor and left Timothy in charge (cf. 1 Tim. 1:3). In the summer of 67 he wrote Timothy from Macedonia and probably visited Philippi and Corinth. He went on to Crete and left Titus there (cf. Titus 1:5). He wrote Titus from Ephesus in the autumn of A.D. 67, visited Miletus (4:20), Troas (4:13), Corinth (4:20), and spent some time at Nicopolis (Titus 3:12). He was imprisoned again in the spring of 68, having been free about five years. He may have been arrested in Corinth because of an accusation made by Alexander (4:14, 20). Paul was tried by the city prefect, imprisoned, and sent to Rome where he was placed in a dungeon cell of the Mamertine Prison, from which he knew he would never be set free (4:6). His only contact with the outside world was a hole, about 18 inches square, in the ceiling of his cell. Through that opening passed everything that came to and from the apostle, including his second letter to Timothy, in the fall or winter of A.D. 67. He was beheaded in Rome in May or June of 68.

The last words of people are particularly treasured by their loved ones. In 2 Timothy we have the last known words to flow from the apostle's pen. In a very real way, this epistle represents Paul's last will and testament. If ever there was a time to set the record straight, it was then. If Paul were going to make any complaints, he would have to make them then, for he was at the end of his life. However, in this letter, there is not one word of apology, explanation, caution, or complaint. Paul used his last letter to deliver five exhortations to his son in the faith, which in summary tell Timothy to "keep on keeping on" just as he had told him all along.

Authorship. Second Timothy claims to have come from the pen of "Paul, an apostle of Jesus Christ" (1:1). Though widely contested, both internal and external evidence support this claim. The style, vocabulary, and contents of the epistle are in keeping with what would be expected of the apostle when he knew he was near the end of his life (4:6). He had four purposes in writing: (1) to exhort Timothy in his ministry at Ephesus; (2) to warn Timothy of trouble both inside and outside the church; (3) to request Timothy to come to Rome to visit him in prison and bring certain personal effects to him (4:5-13, 21); and (4) to instruct all the churches in Timothy's territory.

1:1-5. An apostle [one sent with a commission] of Jesus Christ (lit., "from Jesus Christ"): Paul was not one of Jesus' earthly disciples; he received his apostleship by direct appointment of the risen Christ.

1:6-10. Paul urges Timothy to stir up [keep in full flame] the gift of God (the "grace gift" which came from God). By the putting on of my hands: This refers to Timothy's ordination. The gift was given by God at Timothy's conversion and officially recognized at his ordination. Power (Gr. dunamis) is the ability to accomplish whatever He wills us to accomplish. Love (Gr. agapē) is volitional love. A sound mind is a disciplined mind. The testimony of our Lord refers to the gospel Paul preached. Me his prisoner indicates that although Paul is actually a prisoner in a dungeon cell in the city of Rome, he regards himself there in the directive will of God. Hence, he is really God's prisoner, and Rome is merely God's agent to put him where God wants him. Who hath saved us refers to the ultimate effect: our salvation. And called us with an holy calling looks at the means by which our salvation was effected. His own purpose and grace ... was given us indicates that our salvation was totally unmerited. Abolished death ("having rendered death ineffective"): By His vicarious death, Christ reversed the curse of sin and brought life [eternal union of the soul with God] and immortality ("incorruption") which is guaranteed by His resurrection.

The Word of God Is Not Bound

8 Remember that Jesus Christ ^aof the seed of David ^bwas raised from the dead ^caccording to my gospel:

9 ^aWherein I suffer trouble, as an evil doer, ^beven unto ¹bonds; ^cbut the word of God is not ²bound.

10 Therefore ^aI endure all things for the ¹elect's sakes, ^bthat they may also obtain the salvation which is in Christ Jesus with eternal glory.

11 It is a faithful saying: For ^aif we be dead with him, we shall also live with him:

12 ^aIf we ¹suffer, we shall also reign with him: ^bif we deny him, he also will deny us:

13 If we ¹believe not, yet he abideth faithful: he ^acannot deny himself.

1:12. Persuaded (Gr. peithō): The perfect tense indicates that "I was persuaded in the past and remain so now." That he is able to keep refers to the assurance of salvation which is committed... against that day, when we will stand before the judgment seat of Christ.

1:15-18. Asia refers to the Roman province of Asia Minor of which Ephesus was the chief city. Phygellus and Hermogenes: Nothing is known of these men besides this citation, although they were well known to Timothy. Onesiphorus is mentioned only here and in 4:19. He frequently helped Paul in Ephesus and evidently made a special effort to visit him in Rome.

2:1-7. Paul warns Timothy of the difficulties of the ministry and urges him to be strong, in contrast to those who defected. Faithful men were to be selected and trained to be leaders and teachers. Thus, personal discipleship was to be a vital part of Timothy's leadership. Endure hardness (lit., "suffer affliction"): Paul illustrates this truth by a soldier, an athlete, and a farmer, all of whom suffer privation in order to be rewarded. Strive lawfully means to play according to the rules.

2:8-10. Paul cites two examples of endurance: the supreme example of One who endured such hardship—Jesus Christ—and the human example of one who endured such hardship—Paul himself.

2:11-13. The principles of endurance are enumerated on the basis of the assurance of salvation.

Work for God's Approval

14 Of these things put them in remembrance, *a*charging them before the Lord that they strive not about words to no profit, but to the ¹subverting of the hearers.

16 But shun profane and ¹vain babblings: for they will increase unto more ungodliness.

17 And their word will ¹eat as doth a ²canker of whom is ^aHymenaeus and Philetus;

2:14, 15. The command to put them in remembrance means to remind them of these truths. The command to study means "give diligence and be zealous." It involves a total effort of mind, emotion, and will. Rightly dividing [lit., "cutting straight"] the word of truth. The apostle appeals for effort to be made to properly interpret the Word of God.

2:16–21. Shun profane and vain babblings refers to useless disputes about genealogical histories and hair-splitting debates over the law. Eat as doth a canker ("like gangrene"): Useless bickering is a dangerous cancer that destroys the church. Hymenaeus is the one whom Paul delivered to Satan (cf. 1 Tim. 1:20), and Philetus is unknown apart from this mention. Hymenaeus and Philetus were false teachers who denied the literal resurrection of Christ. The foundation of God standeth sure refers to the permanence of the church, which is built on the foundation of the apostles. This seal guarantees the security of the body of Christ.

2:22. Youthful lusts are deep-seated desires that are particularly perilous to those who are youthful and inexperienced. Follow [lit., "pursue with intensity"] righteousness, those things that are consistent with the character of God. Faith is belief in God's Word. Charity is volitional love, given regardless of its recipient's worthiness.

2:25. Repentance (Gr. metanoia, lit., "change of mind") refers to the conviction that precedes genuine faith in Christ. The preaching of repentance clearly ought to accompany the proclamation of the gospel (Acts 20:21).

PRINCIPLES OF INTERPRETATION

2:15. As we study the Word of God, we should apply both the spiritual and literal principles of interpretation. The spiritual principles include prayer (Ps. 119:18), cleansing (1 John 1:9), and the illumination by the Holy Spirit (1 Cor. 2:12–16). The principles of literally understanding Scripture is to interpret it according to: (1) the mind of the author; (2) its historical background; (3) the context of the passage; and (4) the basic rules of grammar. Illustration: Joshua was promised success if he meditated on the law (Josh. 1:8), and he won that success when he conquered the kings of Canaan. As a disciple of Moses, and as one who had a personal relationship with God, he could interpret the law of God and understand God's will for his life. Application: If we desire the will of God in our lives, we must regularly and systematically interpret God's Word according to its proper meaning. (First Reference, Josh. 1:8; Primary Reference, 2 Tim. 2:15; cf. Acts 2:42.)

3:1-4. The last days began with the birth of Christ and will culminate in Christ's return to the earth to set up His kingdom. The prediction of perilous times indicates that apostasy will characterize the final days of the church age.

3:5-9. A form of godliness is mere religion without power or spiritual life. Paul commands Timothy to turn away from these false teachers who prey upon silly women laden with sins, who are especially susceptible to false teachers. Ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth condemns not intense study but some esoteric quest for truth apart from God's Word. Jannes and Jambres, according to Jewish tradition, were the two magicians in Pharaoh's court who attempted to duplicate Moses' miracles (cf. Ex. 7:11; 9:11).

3:14-17. Continue literally means "remain." The things which thou hast learned were his oral instruction in the holy scriptures (the Old Testament, here) by his mother (Eunice) and grandmother (Lois). Inspiration of God (Gr. theopneustos, lit., "God-breathed") describes the unique character of Scripture. It is not only written by men, but authored by God. For doctrine means to tell one what to believe. For reproof means to tell one what is wrong. For correction means to tell one how to correct wrong. For instruction in righteousness means to tell one how to live. Perfect (Gr. artios, "proficient, capable") is having everything needed to do what God wants. Thoroughly furnished means "thoroughly equipped." God's inspired Word, properly used and applied, provides all we need for life and ministry.

INSPIRATION

3:16. This refers to the supernatural guidance of the writers of Scripture by the Spirit of God, so that what they wrote was the divine Word of God, transcribed accurately, reliably, and without error in the original manuscripts ("autographs"). The word inspiration itself pictures God breathing out His Word to men. Illustration: Not everything written by an apostle or a prophet was necessarily inspired. Paul wrote at least three epistles to the Corinthians, but apparently only two were an inspired record (1 Cor. 5:9). Samuel, Nathan, and Gad each wrote accounts of David's life; only one of these prophets produced an inspired record (1 Chr. 29:29). Application: Since the Scriptures are given to help Christians grow in maturity, they should rely upon them for doctrine, reproof, correction, and instruction in righteousness (right living). (First Reference, Gen. 1:3; Primary Reference, 2 Tim. 3:16, 17; cf. 2 Pet. 1:21.)

4:1–4. Preach the word: Preaching is the God-ordained means to prevent defection from the truth. Teachers who appeal to itching ears tell people what they want to hear, not what they need to hear. Thus, both shall be turned unto fables (myths or legends).

4:5–8. Do the work of an evangelist: Paul commands Timothy to fully discharge his evangelistic ministry by preaching the gospel (Good News) of Jesus Christ. Evangelism is viewed by the New Testament writers as an essential task of the New Testament church.

4:9–13. Paul makes three personal requests. He asks Timothy (1) to come soon; (2) to bring along Mark because he is profitable (which lets us know that the disagreement between Barnabas and Paul over John Mark had been rectified, cf. Acts 15:36–41); and (3) to bring his cloke. Apparently Paul had been arrested suddenly without a chance to take his personal belongings with him. Books and parchments probably refer to Paul's personal copies of the Old Testament books and the New Testament manuscripts.

4:16–18. No man stood with me, but all men forsook me does not mean that no one cared for the apostle, but that in his final hours he realized that only the Lord stood with him. Despite his impending execution, Paul was convinced that the Lord ... will preserve me unto his heavenly kingdom.

The Epistle of Paul to TITUS

Titus was one of the circle of young men who were the “many witnesses” to whom the apostle Paul committed the things given to him, so they could pass them on to others who in turn would “teach others also” (2 Tim. 2:2). He, together with Timothy, traveled with the apostle Paul. While Timothy was half Jewish and half Gentile, Titus was of purely Gentile extraction (cf. Gal. 2:1-3).

Historical Setting. Timothy served as Paul’s special apostolic delegate to Ephesus. In like manner, Titus served as Paul’s special apostolic delegate to Corinth (cf. 2 Cor. 7:6, 7; 8:6, 16). About A.D. 63–64, Paul traveled with Timothy and Titus. He left Timothy in Ephesus and traveled on to Crete with Titus. Paul left Titus in Crete to provide leadership for the church there (cf. 1:5). Somewhere during the period of A.D. 64–66 Paul wrote letters to Timothy (1 Tim.) and Titus. Titus was apparently less reserved than Timothy. The precise date of the letter and who bore it to Titus are not known. The immediate occasion of the letter was to tell Titus that Paul had meant to send Artemas and Tychicus to replace him at Crete, and to instruct Titus to come to him at Nicopolis (3:12). The last mention of Titus is in 2 Timothy 4:10. He had apparently visited Paul in prison in Rome and had departed for Dalmatia, perhaps to start a new work there.

In his short epistle to Titus, Paul wrote directions similar to those he had written in his first letter to Timothy. The difference between the two epistles is one of emphasis. In 1 Timothy Paul’s emphasis is on the leaders of the local church; in Titus the emphasis is on the organization of the local church.

Authorship. The epistle claims to have come from the pen of Paul. Its contents bear this out. Paul’s purposes in writing were to assist Titus in his task of bringing organization to the disorganized work on the island of Crete, to instruct and encourage Titus in his work, to instruct Titus to assist Zenas and Apollos in their ministry, and to help them get to their next place of ministry (3:13).

Rebuke the Vain Talkers

10 For there are many ¹unruly and vain ^atalkers and deceivers, specially they of the circumcision:

11 Whose mouths must be stopped, who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, ^afor ¹filthy lucre's sake.

12 ^aOne of themselves, even a prophet of their own, said, The Creteans are always liars, evil beasts, ¹slow bellies.

13 This witness is true. ^aWherefore rebuke them sharply, that they may be sound in the faith;

14 Not giving heed to Jewish fables, and ^acommandments of men, that turn from the truth.

15 ^aUnto the pure all things are pure: but unto them that are defiled and unbelieving is nothing pure; but even their mind and conscience is defiled.

1:1-4. The author, Paul, describes himself as a servant (Gr. doulos, "slave" or "bondservant") who has no rights of his own. An apostle (Gr. apostolos) is one sent with a commission. According to the faith of God's elect means "with a view to." Hence Paul was made an apostle in order to call the elect to faith in Christ by preaching the gospel to all men.

1:5-9. Titus is to set in order the church. The church had been established but needed to be organized to function effectively. Ordain elders in every city: Elders (Gr. presbuteroi) were to be appointed in every city to rule and teach in the churches. The qualifications listed here are similar to those in 1 Timothy 3. Blameless means without blame or rebuke. It does not mean sinless. Husband of one wife (lit., "a one-woman man"): This may preclude those who are divorced and certainly any who are polygamous. Bishop (Gr. episkopos, lit., "overseer") shows that the elders mentioned in verse 5 are also bishops. The two words describe the office and the maturity of the same person. He is also called the steward of God, meaning God's household servant. No striker means not a brawler or fighter. Not given to filthy lucre means not greedy of financial gain.

1:10-12. The circumcision: Paul describes the Jews who are trying to impose the teachings of Moses, especially circumcision as necessary for salvation, on the Christians of Crete as being unruly, not subject to rule or order. He also calls them deceivers. A prophet of their own refers to the Cretan poet Epimenides (born c. 600 B.C.), whom Paul quotes merely to prove a point.

1:13, 14. Paul instructs Titus to perform a task of reproof. He is to rebuke them sharply. Jewish fables refer to Jewish myths, that is, legalistic error (cf. 1 Tim. 4:1-5).

1:5 Crete is the large island southeast of Greece in the southern portion of the Aegean Sea. It is 156 miles long and ranges in width from 7 to 35 miles. In ancient times two great civilizations existed on Crete: the Minoan, involving the semi-mythical King Minos, and later the Mycenaean. Then, after a one-thousand-year period of decline it was conquered by the Romans in 67 B.C. Crete enters into New Testament history three times. First, on the Day of Pentecost, Jews from Crete were in Jerusalem witnessing the notable events. Second, when Paul was being sent to Rome for trial, his ship passed by Crete (Acts 27:7-13). Third, after Paul's Roman imprisonment he visited Crete and left Titus to establish the churches (v. 5).

2 But speak thou the things which ¹become sound doctrine:

2 That the aged men be sober, ¹grave, temperate, sound in faith, in ²charity, in patience.

3 The aged women likewise, that they be in behaviour as becometh holiness, not ¹false accusers, not given to much wine, teachers of good things;

4 That they may ¹teach the young women to be sober, to love their husbands, to love their children,

Teachings of the Grace of God

11 For ^athe grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, 12 Teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present ¹world;

Justified by God's Grace

3 Put them in mind ^ato be subject to ¹principalities and ²powers, to obey magistrates, ^bto be ready to every good work,

2 To speak evil of no man, to be ¹no brawlers, but gentle, shewing all meekness unto all men.

3 For ^awe ourselves also were sometimes foolish, disobedient, deceived, serving divers lusts and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful, and hating one another.

2:1–5. The aged men are elderly men, not necessarily those who hold the office of elder. They are to be sober [sensible], grave [dignified], temperate [prudent and thoughtful], sound [healthy] in faith [lit., “the faith”], in charity [that is, love], in patience (or perseverance). Thus, the aged men are to be examples of godliness to the younger men. The aged women, older women, are to be in behaviour [de-meanor] as becometh holiness. They must thus be teachers of good things by teaching the young women to be sober, to love their husbands, and to love their children. The older women are to teach the younger by their example. Discreet means modest and decent. Chaste is sexually pure. Keepers at home means workers at home, not idle. Obedient to their own husbands means being submissive to their own husbands.

2:9, 10. Servants (Gr. douloi, “slaves”) are to be obedient unto their own masters. The servant who does this will adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour in all things. This passage is not meant to condone slavery but to show how godliness can overcome tyranny. The slave who did his job well was a testimony to the grace of God and the power of the gospel.

2:11–15. The salvation that appeared to all men is based on God’s grace that has provided salvation universally for all mankind through the unlimited atonement of Christ. That blessed hope and glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ refers to His second coming. The use of the definite article “the” with the first noun “God” and the connecting “and” indicates that the first and second “Saviour” (nouns) are one and the same person. Our “great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ” is thus one and the same person, clearly proving the deity of Christ.

3:1–8. Speak evil of no man literally means blaspheme no one. Be no brawlers (lit., “abstain from fighting”). Unto all men indicates the universal extent of the Christian mission. Salvation is not accomplished by works of righteousness, but by the washing of regeneration, that is, the cleansing that results from being born again (cf. John 3:3). This is not a reference to baptism but to the spiritual renewing produced by the Holy Ghost. Consequently, we are justified by his grace and will be made heirs because we have the hope (strong confidence) of eternal life.

3:10, 11. A heretick was originally one who caused divisions or factions, but later the word emphasized such a person's peculiar or unorthodox beliefs. Therefore, heretics and schismatics are to be rejected. As in all his epistles, Paul urges fidelity to the apostles' doctrine.

REGENERATION

3:5. Regeneration refers to the work of the Holy Spirit in the salvation experience that produces new life in the believer. To express this concept, Jesus used the expression “born again” in His conversation with Nicodemus (John 3:3–7). Regeneration is the work of God, through the Holy Spirit, of placing in one who has faith a new nature, capable of doing God's will. The Holy Spirit is the agent or divine workman of this regeneration. His instrument is the Bible, which is likened to a hammer that judges sin (Jer. 23:29), a mirror that reveals sin (James 1:23), a sword that defeats Satan (Heb. 4:12), and a lamp that guides the believers (Ps. 119:105). Illustration: People are instantaneously “born again,” the moment they trust Christ as Savior (1 Pet. 1:23). Application: Christians should be careful to cooperate with God in growing as children of God after they are regenerated, or given new life. (First Reference, John 3:3; Primary Reference, Titus 3:5; cf. Eph. 1:15.)

HERESY

3:10. The word heresy literally means “choosing one's own ideas,” but now refers to that which is untrue. Even the New Testament church had false or heretical teachers who taught erroneous doctrine. Some epistles were specifically written to combat them (e.g., Galatians, 2 Thessalonians). Paul warned the Romans against identifying with those who promoted divisive, heretical teachings (Rom. 16:17). He advised Titus to reject heretics if they did not respond after two warnings (v. 10). John warned that a heretic should not be admitted into a Christian's home (2 John 10). Illustration: Not everyone who makes an incorrect doctrinal statement is a heretic. When Apollos was further instructed concerning the gospel, he grew into a mighty Christian leader (Acts 18:24–28). By contrast, Hymenaeus and Philetus were heretics when they rejected God's truth and hurt the faith of some believers (2 Tim. 2:16–18). Application: Christians should as much as possible dissociate themselves from every heretic so as to be unhindered in their Christian lives. (First Reference, Acts 15:1; Primary Reference, Titus 3:10; cf. John 21:18.)

The Epistle of Paul to

Title. The title of this letter is the name of the addressee, taken from verse 1.

Authorship. There is little doubt that Paul wrote this epistle, since he refers to himself at least three times (vv. 1, 9, 19). Its canonicity was widely recognized in the early church, particularly by Ignatius, Tertullian, Origen, Eusebius, Marcion, and in the Muratorian Canon. Even destructive critics do not question its authenticity.

Date. Paul was a prisoner at the time (vv. 1, 9), so this is one of the four “prison epistles,” along with Ephesians, Philippians, and Colossians, which Paul wrote during his first Roman imprisonment. According to Colossians 4:7–9, Onesimus accompanied Tychicus to Colossae—so Paul must have written to the Colossians and to Philemon at approximately the same time. Suggested dates range from A.D. 60–63. (See the Introduction to Colossians.)

Interpretation and Purpose. This epistle is the story of three main characters—Onesimus, Philemon, and Paul—and their interaction. Onesimus, a slave in Colossae, had evidently robbed Philemon, his master (v. 18), and run away. During the course of his flight, Onesimus encountered Paul in Rome, and through his ministry came to faith in Christ. Subsequently, Onesimus became a helper to Paul (vv. 12, 13). But Paul recognized Onesimus’s duty to his master, so sent him back to Philemon, along with Tychicus, who carried Paul’s letter to the Colossian church at the same time (Col. 4:7–9). In the letter, Paul implores Philemon to receive Onesimus, not as a slave, but as “a brother beloved” (v. 16). Paul himself, in a gracious act of Christian love, assumed Onesimus’s debt in full: “Put that on mine account” (v. 18). Though very brief, the epistle is a valuable addition to the New Testament record for three reasons: (1) it reveals more of the apostle’s own character than most of his letters; (2) it gives important insight into the institution of slavery in the ancient Roman world; and (3) it serves as a vivid picture of the truth of Galatians 3:28, that in Christ “there is neither bond nor free.”

19 I Paul have written it with mine own *a*hand, I will repay it: albeit I do not say to thee how thou owest unto me even thine own self besides.

1. A prisoner of Jesus Christ, a phrase found nowhere else, shows that Paul did not look on himself merely as a prisoner of the Roman Empire. His witness for Christ in prison made him a prisoner. His our dearly beloved, and fellowlabourer tells us all we know about Philemon: he was dear to Paul, who considered him a valued coworker in the ministry.

2. Apphia was probably Philemon's wife. Archippus may have been Philemon's son, but was more likely the minister in the church (cf. Col. 4:17). The church in thy house: The earliest churches met in homes; Christian church buildings were unknown until the third century. Philemon was probably one of the wealthier church members, since it met at his house, and since he was a slave-owner.

3. The salutation, almost identical to other Pauline greetings (cf. Rom., 1 and 2 Cor., Gal., Eph., and Phil.), expresses a beautiful connection between two great works of God: grace, or His undeserved favor, which is intimately associated with peace, the settled confidence that comes from being right with God.

4. Paul always opens his letters with a word of thanksgiving. (Galatians is the exception.)

8. Paul's request that Philemon take back Onesimus has a connotation of brotherly persuasion, rather than a formal appeal to apostolic authority. Onesimus is now both a son to Paul (v. 10) and a brother to Philemon (v. 16). Though he possessed no legal rights in the Roman world, Onesimus the slave was now on an equal spiritual plane with both his owner and the apostle Paul.

11. Onesimus means "useful." Through a clever word-play Paul is saying: "Onesimus was useless to you in the past, but in the future he will live up to his name!"

13, 14. Paul might have exploited his brotherly relationship with Philemon to request that Onesimus remain with him as a helper, but he could not take advantage of Philemon in this way.

16. Paul's appeal that Philemon receive the runaway slave is well stated here: Onesimus has a new relationship to Philemon as a brother in the Lord. Whether Philemon subsequently freed Onesimus is not known, but certainly Paul's statements imply that slavery is incompatible with Christian teaching. In the Bible, slavery is usually viewed as an existing social and economic practice. Like divorce, it is tolerated, but consistent application of Christian theology leads to the abolition or discouragement of both.

18. Onesimus's crime is not mentioned, but probably it was stealing from his master. Paul writes, put that on mine account, using a current bookkeeping term in Greek.

Paul Encourages Philemon's Obedience

22. Prepare me also a lodging reflects both Philemon's financial status, and Paul's confidence that he would be released from prison. It may also be a subtle encouragement that Philemon should fulfill Paul's request.

23, 24. This list of people is almost identical with that in Colossians 4:10-14. (Only one name is missing here.) It is another proof of how closely related these two epistles are.

The Epistle to the HEBREWS

Authorship. One of the great mysteries surrounding the Book of Hebrews concerns its authorship. For some unknown reason the author remains anonymous to us, though he was known to his original readers (13:23). Discussion of the author's identity dates back to the second century, but convincing evidence was lacking even then. Indeed, the great critical scholar of the third century, Origen of Alexandria, had to concede that only God truly knows who the author of this epistle is. The author, whether Jew or Gentile, had a superb knowledge both of Jewish levitical thought and also of Greek literary style (which is often regarded as the finest in the New Testament). Yet he does seem to be Jewish in that he apparently identifies himself with his Jewish readers by writing: "Let us go forth therefore unto him without the camp" (13:13; see the note on this verse). These and other factors will help to show the strengths and weaknesses of the more common views of authorship.

The strongest argument for Pauline authorship of this epistle involves the ancient tradition of the church. As early as the second century Paul was regarded in the East as the author, and during the third century his authorship was the accepted view. In the West, where the epistle was known from earliest times, Pauline authorship was rejected and did not gain general acceptance until the fourth century. Yet the strongest argument against Pauline authorship is found within the epistle itself. In 2:3 the author regards himself as one whose knowledge of Christ was secondhand. By contrast, Paul vehemently declares that his apostleship and message were directly from Jesus Christ (Gal. 1:1, 12).

Other worthy suggestions for author include Luke, Barnabas, Silas, and Apollos. The arguments that speak against Pauline authorship speak for Lucan authorship: his secondhand knowledge of Jesus and even the witness of ancient church tradition. Though such scholars as Calvin and Delitzsch have supported Lucan authorship, the fact that Luke was a Gentile remains a major obstacle. Both Barnabas and Silas were leaders in the Jerusalem church and thus had the status to write to Jewish Christians wherever they lived. Barnabas was even a Levite and as such would have been familiar with the levitical ritual commonly cited in this epistle. The major argument against the authorship of both Barnabas and Silas is that there is little positive evidence for it. The early church did not regard either one of these men as author. The view that Apollos was the author of Hebrews was first suggested by Luther and has become popular. Apollos was an Alexandrian Jew and so most likely was familiar with the philosophical thinking commonly seen in the development of this epistle. He was an eloquent man who was "mighty in the scriptures" (Acts 18:24). The greatest weakness in the argument for Apollos's authorship is again the lack of early historical evidence. It seems logical that if Apollos had indeed written such a remarkable epistle, one of the early Alexandrian fathers, such as Clement or Origen, would have laid claim to one of their own as the author. The matter of authorship must remain unresolved.

Recipients. The headings in the oldest extant manuscripts of this epistle read: "To Hebrews." The exhortations and warnings of Hebrews indicate that the recipients were Jewish Christians who were in danger of returning to Judaism. By returning, these early Christians could avoid persecution. Judaism was sanctioned and protected by Roman law; Christianity was not. Many of the recipients had undergone persecution and were growing weary (10:32).

Many cities have been suggested as the locality of these believers. The situation favors two regions: Jerusalem (or any city of Palestine) and Rome (Italy). In both regions the Jewish Christians had often received persecution. In Palestine it was at the hand of Jews for being Christians. In Italy it was primarily at the hand of Gentiles, sometimes for being Jews (Acts 18:2) and other times for being Christians. One evidence that makes Italy attractive is the author's closing statement that "they of Italy salute you" (13:24). Since the word "of" (Gr. apo) is more commonly translated "from," the author may be relaying greeting to those in Italy from those who had formerly lived there. The epistle seemingly was either written by an author in Italy or to recipients in Italy.

Date. The question of date remains somewhat unresolved, since the authorship and destination of the epistle escape complete analysis. The evidence clearly places Hebrews within the first century. The allusions to Hebrews by Clement of Rome demand a date prior to A.D. 96. The reference to Timothy as still living (13:23) likewise demands a date in the first century. Yet that date cannot be early within the church age, since the readers are described as second-generation Christians (2:3), and the reference to an imprisonment of Timothy (13:23) does not correlate with Acts or Paul's writings. So probably a date later than the early sixties is required. Evidently the date precedes the Roman destruction of Jerusalem and the temple in A.D. 70. Throughout all the discourses on the tabernacle ritual, not once is any allusion made regarding the destruction of the temple. The Jewish sacrificial system appears to be still in effect (8:4; 10:8, 11). A date within the mid-sixties conforms to the known data.

Theme. First-century Jewish Christians were confronted with the anguish of having given up long-held godly traditions only to experience increased persecution and unfulfilled promises. Both family and foe now harassed them. Further, Christ had not yet returned, and there were no apparent indications that His return and the restoration of Israel would ever occur. The first generation of Christians had passed, and Israel was still unsaved. Outwardly, Christ remained unvindicated before many of them. The Book of Hebrews is an exhortation to Jewish Christians to hold fast to their faith in Christ.

Throughout the epistle the author stresses the continuity and flow between the Old Testament revelation and the new faith in Christ, while emphasizing the superiority of both Christ and His New Covenant, using such words as better, perfect, and heavenly. By so doing, he assures the Jewish Christians of the biblical heritage contained in the New Covenant. (Hebrews contains 29 direct quotations from and 53 clear allusions to the Old Testament.) He challenges them to run with endurance the race that is set before them (12:1), even as their Jewish ancestors had done (ch. 11). The style of the epistle is one of encouragement, comfort, and warning. The book leads one from superficial thinking to profound depths concerning the person and work of Christ. Its argument is the superiority and finality of Christianity. Its theme is the high priestly ministry of Christ in behalf of believers.

1:1, 2. The author immediately shows that Jesus Christ, as the agent of God's revelation, is far superior to the Old Testament prophets. Their message was fragmentary and incomplete. It came bit by bit through visions, dreams, events, and direct communication as men were ready and able to receive it. Christ's revelation is climactic and complete, because He is the Son and because His is the message for the last days. His incarnation initiated the end time, and it will be fulfilled when He returns to earth to reconcile and restore all things (cf. Acts 2:16, 17; 3:19-21; 1 Pet. 1:20).

1:3. Christ's person, power, and position are all expressed in this verse. He is described as being the brightness of God's glory. The word being, whose force is "eternally being," guards against the idea that Jesus became the Son at some point during His earthly ministry. He did not become deity; He always was equal with the Father. The attributes ascribed to Him express His very nature. They were neither added to nor taken from Him during His earthly life. The "brightness" spoken of here refers to a radiance or a shining forth of the divine glory. As the rays are intrinsically related to the sun, with neither one existing apart from the other, so the Father and the Son are essentially one. Further, the Son is the express image or imprint (as of a die perfectly representing the original design) of the Father's person (nature). The radiant light implies the oneness of the Son with the Father; the imprint expresses the distinctness of the Son from the Father. Yet, oneness and distinctness are implicit in each; thus, they enhance and balance each other. Upholding all things manifests the power of the Son. Verse 2 has already presented Him as Creator and hence the heir of all things. Certainly He is far superior to the prophets with whom He has just been compared, and to the angels to whom He will be compared. "Upholding" (Gr. pherōn), more precisely stated, describes the Son as "carrying" all things. Christ is not viewed simply as an Atlas supporting the dead weight of the world, but as the Creator who is now sustaining and bringing it to its goal. Compare the similar teaching of Colossians 1:16, 17.

Sat down ... on high reveals the position of the Son. When He had provided purification for sin, He sat down on high. This sitting does not imply a present

MEANS OF REVELATION

1:1. God has revealed Himself through various means, such as visions (Is. 6), dreams (Dan. 2), poetry (Ps. 139), biography (especially the Gospels), sermons (Matt. 5-7), face-to-face conversations (Deut. 5:4), tablets of stone (Deut. 10:4), miracles (John 6), parables (Luke 15), inner compulsion (Acts 21:10-13), history (1 and 2 Chronicles), angels (Luke 1:26-38), historical research (Luke 1:1-4), and the person of Christ (John 1:14). His means of self-revelation today is the Bible. Illustration: When God wanted Peter to preach the gospel to the Gentiles, He imparted this through a vision (Acts 10). Even then, Peter appears to have been somewhat reluctant to obey God completely. Application: Today we do not depend on dreams and visions to learn about God and His will for our lives, but rather on God's revelation in the Scriptures. God did not impart the gospel to Cornelius in a vision, but commanded a man to go and preach the Word of God to him. (First Reference, Gen. 1:14; Primary Reference, Heb. 1:1; cf. Eph. 3:3-5.)

Give Earnest Heed to Salvation

inactivity; rather it suggests His finished redemptive work, quite in contrast to the unending sacrifices of the Levitical priest (cf. chs. 7, 9, 10). The author of Hebrews is virtually silent concerning Christ's resurrection, yet he repeatedly stresses the Ascension and its significance (cf. 4:14; 6:19, 20; 7:26; 8:1; 9:24; 10:12; 12:2).

1:4–14. The main point of chapters 1 and 2 is that Christ is superior to the angels because of the work He has accomplished. In verses 4–14 the writer of Hebrews proves Christ's superiority by citing seven Old Testament passages. It was necessary that he prove to his readers Christ's superiority over the angels, for in the first-century world, pagan and Christian alike accorded great significance and power to angels. Some had possibly taught that Christ Himself was an angel and for that reason able to perform miracles. There is evidence from Scripture (Col. 2:18) that some even worshipped angels. Angels were also involved in the giving of the Mosaic Law (2:2; Acts 7:53; Gal. 3:19). Thus, if the author wishes to prove the overall superiority of Christ, he must prove that Christ is superior to the angels. Jesus' superiority to the angels is presented in a sevenfold manner. (1) Being the Son, He has a better name than they (vv. 4, 5); (2) He is worshiped (v. 6) and (3) served (v. 7) by the angels; (4) Jesus is God (v. 8); (5) He created the angels (v. 10), (6) is from everlasting to everlasting (vv. 11, 12), and (7) sits at God's right hand (v. 13). The dignity of the Son is the dignity of God, but the dignity of the angels is that of mere servants (v. 14).

2:1–4. The Book of Hebrews contains five warning passages (2:1–4; 3:7–4:13; 5:11–6:20; 10:19–39; 12:18–29). These passages contain much exhortation but also some explicit warnings—a danger sign. This first passage warns: Do not neglect Christ's message.

ANGELS

1:4. Angels are created, spiritual beings who are servants of God. The word angel means “messenger.” Though they also have power to become visible in human form, they are incorporeal beings, possessing intellect, emotion, and will. The word angel is always used in the masculine gender, although sex in the human sense is never ascribed to them. They have great power (2 Kin. 19:35), but are not omnipotent. They have extensive wisdom (2 Sam. 14:20), but are not omniscient. Their number is great (12:22), but not limitless. Illustration: Man is made “a little lower than the angels” (2:7), although the same writer reminds us that Christ is greater than the angels (v. 4). Application: There are a number of benefits derived from understanding the ministry of angels. When we realize that they constantly observe our Christian lives (1 Cor. 4:9; 11:10; Eph. 3:10), we will improve our conduct. When we understand how they protect us, we will appreciate God's care for us (v. 7). When we consider their tremendous strength and ability, we will be encouraged. Finally, their example of unceasing service ought to motivate us to more consistent service for God. (First Reference, Gen. 1:1—heaven is plural in Hebrew, meaning God created the whole, with its innumerable separate parts, including angels; Primary Reference, Heb. 1:4; cf. Heb. 12:22.)

A Crown of Glory and Honour

9 But we see Jesus, ^awho was made ^{1a}a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, ^bcrowned with glory and honour; that he by the grace of God should taste death ^cfor every man.

Since God has no greater messenger than His Son, He has no more important message than the gospel which the Son has given. And if the law given through angels was stedfast, producing sure judgment, how shall we escape, if we ignore the sure message of the Son? This message was proclaimed by Christ to His apostles and then by the apostles to the author of Hebrews (v. 3). For further discussion regarding the significance of this verse on the authorship of Hebrews, see the Introduction.

2:4. God verified the Son's message with miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost. The author states that these sign gifts were given to the first-generation witnesses. He does not suggest that his readers possessed these same miraculous gifts. The phrase "gifts of the Holy Ghost" could refer to God's bestowal of the Holy Spirit Himself upon every believer (cf. Rom. 8:9; Gal. 3:5; Eph. 1:13), or more likely it refers to the gifts given by the Spirit (cf. Rom. 12; 1 Cor. 12).

2:5-9. If Christ became a Man and partook of death, how can He be superior to the angels? This apparent contradiction is presently answered as reasonable and logical. The writer states that the angels do not have authority in the world to come. Throughout the past and present ages angels have administered judgment on man: at Sodom (Gen. 19:13), on Israel (2 Sam. 24:15-17), on kings (Acts 12:23), during the Great Tribulation (Rev. 8, 9). But in the age to come angels will have no authority over the saints. In fact, the saints will judge angels (1 Cor. 6:3). Quoting Psalm 8, the author shows that man will rule in God's coming age. Psalm 8 describes man as made by God a little lower than the angels. "A little" (Gr. brachu ti) has two possible interpretations. It can refer to time (for a little while) or degree (a little lower). Both concepts are true, but the second fits the context better. Although God has made man slightly lower than the angels for the present, He also has crowned him with glory and honour and set him over His creation. Man is the capstone and crown of God's creation. Into man's hands God will ultimately place His creation. As He proclaimed from the moment of creation (Gen. 1:26, 28), God will ultimately place His creation into man's hands through Christ. By death Christ will regain for man what he lost by sin and death, namely, the dominion of the world. The author interprets all things to mean that God left nothing, including angels, independent of man's dominion. So as Man, Jesus will rule the earth. He to whom world dominion is divinely committed is greater than the angels, who do not have this privilege.

2:9. Verse 8 ends with the confession that man's present status does not suggest that he will someday be over all creation. But Christ's status does. Unlike man, He already has been crowned, and because of His identity with and victory for man, He makes

SIGN GIFTS

2:4. The miraculous sign gifts of the Holy Spirit were present in the first century to confirm apostolic revelation (2 Cor. 12:12; Heb. 2:2-4) and are not expected today. Just as it is necessary to erect a scaffolding to aid construction when a building is being erected, so sign gifts were the spiritual scaffolding used by God to give credibility to His revelation which became the foundation of the church. When the written Word of God was complete, God removed the scaffolding. These gifts were given primarily as signs for the Jews (1 Cor. 1:22). Also, as the apostles were primarily communicating an oral tradition, they needed signs to authenticate their message (2 Thess. 2:15). When considering a sign gift, one should remember that gifts, such as the gift of apostles, were foundational gifts needed in the first century, and were characterized by certain qualifications that could not be met today (cf. Acts 1:21, 22). Also, Paul specifically indicated that some gifts would cease (1 Cor. 13:8), and he referred to miracles seemingly in the past tense, which he would not do if they were still prevalent at the time of writing (v. 3). The sign gifts would include apostles (Eph. 4:11), healing (1 Cor. 12:9), tongues, miracles, and interpretation of tongues (1 Cor. 12:10). Some might add to that list the discernment of spirits (1 Cor. 12:10). (First Reference, Eph. 4:8; Primary Reference, 1 Cor. 12—14; cf. 1 Cor. 7:7.)

Psalm 8 a future reality for man. Death is one significant quality that makes man lower than the angels (Luke 20:36), but Christ has conquered death for man.

2:10. The concept of a suffering Messiah was a real stumbling block to the Jews. The author tackles this problem by declaring that the sufferings of the Cross were an integral part of God's redemptive plan. In fact, Christ was made perfect through the suffering of death. Not that His deity lacks perfection (cf. 1:3, 8), but His humanity was vocationally perfected. That is, as Man, Jesus was enabled through suffering to become the captain of man's salvation; suffering allows Him to experientially empathize with us (v. 18), and death was the means of His destroying Satan (v. 14) and securing our redemption (9:12).

2:17, 18. The author provides three reasons for Christ's sufferings: (1) to identify with humanity (vv. 10-13); (2) to destroy the power of death (vv. 14, 15); and (3) to become an intercessory High Priest (vv. 17, 18). One of the key thoughts of this epistle is the High Priestly work of Christ. As a Man He can compassionately serve as our High Priest. His primary role as High Priest is to make reconciliation for the sins of the people. The verb (Gr. hilaskomai) means "to propitiate," or "to expiate or make satisfaction for sin." He as our High Priest does not merely make atonement (a covering) for our sins; He satisfactorily and actually takes sin away. The word succour (Gr. boēthēō) means "to come to the aid of" someone. How much easier it is to help someone when we ourselves have gone through similar trials! Christ as Man has fully suffered the greatest of trials and so can ably comfort (cf. 2 Cor. 1:3-5). These suffering Jews needed to hear that Christ had suffered as they were suffering.

3:1, 2. Jesus is both the Apostle and High Priest of the Christian faith. These titles do not involve His divine essence; they speak in regard to His superior ministry. Moses is very highly regarded by the Jews, so the author of Hebrews now attempts to make his argument for the superiority of Christ without belittling the ministry of Moses. The author's use of the word "Apostle" (used of Christ only here) expresses the superiority of His commission, He being sent directly from God as a messenger. As High Priest He is man's direct intercessor with God.

3:3-6. More glory than Moses: Christ's superiority and greater glory are not based on His faithfulness (both were faithful, v. 2), but on His superior position. Christ is the One who hath builded the house, whereas Moses is part of the house, being a servant in it (vv. 3, 5). Christ is identified as a son over his own house. The translation, "his own," is somewhat

ONTOLOGICAL ARGUMENT FOR THE EXISTENCE OF GOD

3:4. The word ontological comes from the root "being" and is a deductive argument that only indicates the probable existence of God. (See Rom. 1:20 and Ps. 94:9 for stronger arguments.) It reasons that the idea of a perfect and infinite Being cannot be derived from a finite and imperfect human being. Therefore, a perfect and infinite Being who exists must have placed the idea in mankind. (First Reference, Gen. 1:1; Primary Reference, Heb. 3:4; cf. Rom. 2:15.)

4 For every house is builded by some man; but ^ahe that built all things is God.

5 ^aAnd Moses verily was faithful in all his house, as ^ba servant, ^cfor a testimony of those things which were to be spoken ¹after;

6 But Christ as ^aa son over his own house; ^bwhose house are we, ^cif we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end.

Labour to Enter God's Rest

4 Let ^aus therefore fear, lest, a promise ¹being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it.

2 For unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them: but the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it.

stronger than the Greek (autou). It is His house, but His house is the same as God's. Only one house is involved in these verses. It is not Moses' house, and it is not ours. It is God's. Moses was a part of this one house. It is what Paul calls the household of God (Eph. 2:19; cf. 1 Pet. 4:17) or the household of faith (Gal. 6:10). It includes all believers of all time.

3:7-11. The second of the five great warnings of Hebrews begins here (see 2:1). The first concerned neglect; this one warns against doubt. Do not doubt God's promise. As is common with the other warning passages, exhortations and illustrations are incorporated with the warning. Israel's disbelief and hardness of heart, under the godly leadership of Moses and then Joshua, serve as examples.

3:8. The terms provocation and temptation are taken from the Septuagint (Greek) reading of Psalm 95, which are etymological translations of the Hebrew words, Meribah and Massah, respectively. These Hebrew terms are likewise descriptive translations, rather than the rendering of proper names. Both terms originate with Moses' smiting of the rock for water while in Rephidim (Ex. 17:1-7). Following that experience, verse 7 states concerning Moses, "And he called the name of the place Massah, and Meribah, because of the chiding of the children of Israel, and because they tempted the LORD saying, Is the LORD among us, or not?" At that time Israel had been out of Egypt only one month and had repeatedly witnessed God's miraculous deliverance and provision. This incident became symbolic of Israel's temptation (Massah) of God (cf. Deut. 6:16). David in Psalm 95 uses it to speak of Israel's continuous rebellion throughout the 40 years in the wilderness.

3:12, 13. The second warning (see v. 7) actually begins here and is addressed to brethren, professing believers, lest any have unbelief in his heart and thus depart from God. This departing (Gr. apostēnai) is the source of our word apostasy, which is a deliberate departure from God's full revelation. These Hebrew brethren were being tempted by an evil heart of unbelief to return to Judaism. To do so meant they would have to reject the fuller revelation they had received in Christianity and return to the incomplete revelation of Judaism. Thus, they are admonished to exhort one another daily with the truths that will strengthen their faith in Christ, such as the truths contained in this epistle.

3:14. One's conversion to Christ, which occurred in days past (we are made partakers of Christ), is proved to have been genuine by perseverance in the days to come (if we hold ... our confidence stedfast unto the end). This means that continuance in the faith is a test of the reality of one's faith in Christ.

3 For we which have believed do enter into rest, as he said, "As I have sworn in my wrath, ¹if they shall enter into my rest: although the works were finished from the foundation of the world.

4 For he spake in a certain place of the seventh day ¹on this wise, "And God did rest the seventh day from all his works.

14 Seeing then that we have a great ^ahigh priest, that is passed ¹into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, ^blet us hold fast our profession.

4:3. If they shall enter into my rest should be rendered exactly as it was in 3:11: "They shall not enter into my rest."

4:6-9. To day: Long after Israel's failure, David in Psalm 95 was still looking for a rest in his own day. Likewise, the author of Hebrews uses that word repeatedly in this passage to declare that a rest can still be experienced. The reference to Jesus in verse 8 is to Joshua of the Old Testament. The names Joshua and Jesus are identical in Hebrew and Greek (hence 1611 rendering of "Jesus" here). The context certainly involves Joshua, the son of Nun. Joshua brought the second generation into Canaan, and they did enter into a rest as the Scriptures record (Deut. 12:9, 10; Josh. 21:44; 22:4; 23:1). Yet the author suggests that there must be a permanent, better rest for the people of God, or David would not have still been looking forward to it in his day.

4:9-11. Rest involves more than mere inactivity. It follows the satisfactory completion of a task. Salvation-rest is the gift to the believer, resulting from Christ's finished work (Rom. 5:1-21).

4:12, 13. For the word of God: The reason given for one's careful scrutiny of his life involves the reality that God is intently scrutinizing it. His word is quick

(living). This word is first in the Greek and is the emphasis. God's Word is not old or archaic; it is alive. It is not inept or inactive; it is powerful (active). It reaches into the inner secrets of man's mind to discern even his thoughts and intents. Likewise, God's eye sees man as though he were naked, unable to hide behind excuse or pretense.

4:14, 15. At this point the author begins his discussion of Christ as high priest. His priestly ministry is far superior to any other priest's because of the intercession He provides. The earthly high priest, with fear, once a year gained access to the mercy seat in the Holy of Holies; Christ not only has access to but is seated in the very presence of God the Father (cf. note on 1:3). Yet, prior to this position, He partook of man's nature and temptations so that He might sympathize (cf. 2:14-18), yet without sin. To imagine that since Jesus could not sin He could not suffer, misses the point of the passage. Temptation can be a reality apart from sin. "God cannot be tempted with evil" (James 1:13); yet God is tried or tempted (Gr. peirazō) by men (3:9; Acts 15:10). Yet, beyond the statements of this passage, He who was God, though made like man, could not sin (being impeccable); and indeed, He need not sin to be human. Before Adam sinned,

IMMATERIAL PART OF MAN

4:12. The writer here draws an interesting parallel between the joints and the marrow, which have different functions, yet both are part of a human's bone structure. Thoughts and intents are also two distinct activities, yet both are activities of the mind. And while the soul and spirit are distinct in function, both have an immaterial character. When considering the nature of humanity, we must realize a person is a two-part being, that is, with body and soul. But in activity or function the body, soul, and spirit of a person each has a different function. Paul desired that his converts' "whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ" (1 Thess. 5:23). (First Reference, Gen. 2:7; Primary Reference, 1 Thess. 5:23; cf. Prov. 4:23.)

12 For ¹when for the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need that one teach you again which be the first principles of the ²oracles of God; and are become such as have need of ^amilk, and not of ³strong meat.

13 For every one that ¹useth milk is unskilful in the word of righteousness: for he is ^aa babe.

5:13 ^aEph. 4:14 ¹partakes of

he was completely human. The glorified saint will never again be able to sin, yet he remains human. Temptation is greatest in duration and intensity when one does not accept the "easy" way out by sinning. If man's temptation is greater when he endures it, surely Christ's was great since He had no alternative, in His humanity, but to endure it.

4:16. Only Christianity provides such boldness for sinful men before a holy God, and that boldness is possible only because of our High Priest. The figure of a throne suggests a place of authority and provision. It is the place to obtain God's grace when it is especially needed.

5:1-10. Three qualifications for the Levitical priest are presented in verses 1-4. First, he must minister in behalf of other men by offering sacrifices for sins. Second, he must have compassion on those who inadvertently sin out of ignorance. Third, he must be appointed by or called of God. In verses 5-10 the author demonstrates that Christ meets these requirements. He reverses the order showing, first, Christ's divine appointment (vv. 5, 6), second, in verses 7, 8, His compassion—probably relating His Gethsemane experience (Mark 14:32-42), and third, in verses 9, 10, His perfect offering for sin.

5:11-14. The third warning passage of Hebrews, 5:11-6:20 (see the note on 2:1), does not involve insecurity of salvation as many suppose, but immaturity (see 6:4-6). The author wishes to continue discussing Melchizedek but must wait until chapter 7, because his readers are dull of hearing. This adjective (Gr. nōthroi), which is used elsewhere in the New Testament only at Hebrews 6:12, is there translated "sloughful." The warning of this passage is that what is now described as lazy hearing can result in an entire life of sluggishness (6:12).

IMPECCABILITY OF CHRIST

4:15. Two words, temptability and impeccability, describe Christ in His temptation. The basic idea of temptability is "to be appealed to." Christ was in this sense tempted, but He was not tempted with evil nor was He tempted by evil desires (James 1:13). As God, He could not be tempted with evil. The word impeccability means Christ as God could not have sinned. The comparative attributes of God made it impossible for Him to sin when He was tempted. Illustration: As you read about Christ's temptation notice that He did not rely on His attributes but on the Word of God to resist the temptation of Satan (Matt. 4:1-11). Application: In this same way the Christian today can overcome temptation (Ps. 119:9-11). (First Reference, Matt. 4:1-11; Primary Reference, Heb. 4:15; cf. 2 Pet. 1:16.)

14 But ¹strong meat belongeth to them that are ²of full age, even those who by reason of ³use have their senses ⁴exercised *a*to discern both good and evil.

Striving for Perfection

6 Therefore ^aleaving the ¹principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on unto ²perfection; not laying again the foundation of repentance from ^bdead works, and of faith toward God, ²Of the doctrine of baptisms, ^band of laying on of hands, ^cand of resurrection of the dead, ^dand of eternal judgment.

6:1-3. The readers are encouraged to go on to maturity by leaving the elementary teachings of the Word. The word for perfection (Gr. teleiotes) has both an absolute and a relative sense. Its relative sense involving maturity is expressed here. The six representative doctrines listed here involve three sets: the elementary teachings concerning conversion itself, the post-conversion experiences, and teachings on “last things.” Eschatology is included here among the first truths, rather than as deeper truth. The mere study of last things does not demonstrate spiritual maturity. The practical changes these eschatological truths produce manifest maturity.

6:4-6. This passage does not teach that one can lose his salvation through disbelief or apostasy. These verses refer to a hypothetical situation whereby the author stresses what would happen to a saved person if he could fall away. The author does not believe one can lose his salvation, or that his readers had (cf. v. 9); but he so speaks to demonstrate the folly some might have in imagining that they can turn back to Judaism without suffering loss. Though the author is not writing about his readers (v. 4, those), he still is writing for their sakes (v. 9, you). If they shall fall away is the translation given to the fifth participle of the passage. This is a legitimate and even common grammatical usage by the author within the warning passages (cf. 2:3; 10:26; and even 6:8). The first four participles refer to actual blessings whereas number five describes a potential situation, and so can be translated unlike the first four.

The important point about Hebrews 6 is that it agrees with the general tenor of Scripture concerning the security of the born-again believer. One basis for the security of the believer involves the promises recorded in God’s Word (vv. 18-20; 7:24, 25; 8:12; 10:10-14; John 10:28-30; Rom. 8:28-39; Eph. 1:13, 14; 4:30; Phil. 1:6; 1 John 5:13). Yet, an even stronger basis for security is found within the nature of the new life God gives. Though conversion involves man’s will, it is God’s will that produces regeneration (John 1:13). Thus, salvation is infinitely more than a decision that one can make and then break. It is the work of God that transforms one from darkness to light (1 Cor. 4:4; Col. 1:13), from death to life (John 5:24), from a child of the Devil to a son of God (Rom. 8:14-17). It is a completed, regenerating work (10:14; Eph. 2:8—“You are saved,” or “You have been saved and stand saved”—Greek perfect tense).

FUNDAMENTALISM

6:1, 2. Fundamentalism is a movement growing out of the controversy with religious liberalism at the beginning of this century, when godly Christian leaders insisted that certain truths were fundamental to Christianity and could not be compromised. These included divine creation, the verbal inspiration and inerrancy of Scripture, the virgin birth of Christ, His deity, substitutionary atonement, bodily resurrection, and physical return, and the existence of a literal heaven and hell. Though good Christians might disagree in other areas, to deny these essentials is to abandon the Christian faith.

Illustration: History records the sad accounts of some who refused to accept scriptural authority and made shipwrecks of their faith. For example, Diotrephes opposed an epistle from John, and then began harming the ministry of faithful Christians under his influence (3 John 9, 10). Application: Christians are wise to build their lives and ministries upon the solid foundation of Christ’s teaching (Matt. 7:24, 25). (First Reference, Luke 1:1; Primary Reference, Heb. 6:1, 2; cf. 2 Thess. 2:15.)

11 And we desire that every one of you do shew the same diligence ^ato the full assurance of hope unto the end:

12 That ye be not ¹slothful, but ²followers of them who through faith and patience ^ainherit the promises.

The Promise of God

13 For when God made promise to Abraham, because he could swear by no greater, ^ahe sware by himself, 14 Saying, ^aSurely blessing I will bless thee, and multiplying I will multiply thee.

15 And so, after he had patiently endured, he obtained the ^apromise.

16 For men verily swear by the greater: and ^aan oath for confirmation is to them an end of all ¹strife.

20 ^aWhither the forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus, ^bmade¹ an high priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec.

The King of Righteousness

7 For this ^aMelchisedec, king of Salem, priest of the most high God, who met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings, and blessed him;

2 To whom also Abraham gave a tenth part of all; first being ¹by interposition King of righteousness, and after that also King of Salem, which is, King of peace;

3 Without father, without mother, without ¹descent, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life; but made like unto the Son of God; abideth a priest continually.

6:13-18. God's covenant with Abraham, which involves salvation (Gal. 3:15-25), is secure, being based upon two immutable things, that is, elements that cannot change. First, God's promise is based on His own unchanging Word. He cannot lie, nor will He allow His Word to fail (Matt. 5:18; John 10:35; 17:17). Further, His Word was confirmed by an oath. And since He can swear by none greater, He swears by Himself. He rests His Word on His holy character.

6:19, 20. Starting at the end of verse 18, the author uses three pictures to demonstrate the security of being in Christ. First, it is described as a safe retreat for the believer, as were the six cities of refuge in the Old Testament to those allowed their protection (Num. 35:6-32). Second, our hope is sure and steadfast as is a well-placed, unbending anchor. Our anchor is not located in the deepest sea but in the highest heaven. The third figure is that of a forerunner. Though the figure changes, the location does not. Our forerunner is likewise positioned in the sanctuary of heaven. As our forerunner, Jesus is far different from the Old Testament priests. In the sanctuary they could intercede for the people, but they could not lead the people in themselves. As our forerunner, Jesus has opened the way before us, that eventually (and certainly) we might enter in with Him.

7:1-3. Melchisedec (Melchizedek) appears only briefly in the Old Testament, yet our author minutely scrutinizes him. (See Gen. 14:18-20; Ps. 110:4.) Being by interpretation: The writer sees in Melchizedek a type or figure of Christ and draws parallels between the two. Without father, without mother: What is true of Melchizedek typically only because of silence is intrinsically true of Christ. Melchizedek is without parents only in that they are unknown. He is without descent in that his genealogy has not been preserved. Genealogy was essential to a priest, for under the Levitical system one could not serve if he could not prove his pedigree (cf. Ezra 2:62; Neh. 7:64). Further, he is without beginning and ending due to the Old Testament never mentioning his birth and death. The author explicitly states his point when he declares that Melchizedek is made like, or resembles, the Son of God. But has the author taken too much liberty with his typology? No, for God Himself first made the similar connection in Psalm 110:4, "Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchizedek."

Some understand these verses in Hebrews to suggest that Melchizedek was a theophany, an appearance of Christ Himself, rather than a historical king at Salem. Neither Hebrews nor Genesis, however, supports that view. Even in Hebrews, such phrases as made like unto the Son of God (v. 3) and "after the order of Melchisedec" (v. 17) indicate a clear distinction between Melchizedek and Christ. The Genesis account provides sufficient historical data to disallow the idea that this is a temporary manifestation. This Melchizedek was a king of a literal city in Canaan. The setting of Genesis 14 is unlike any of the settings involving a theophany. In those settings the theophany is recognized as the Lord or is declared within the text to be the Lord (Gen. 16:7-13; 18:1-33; 22:1-14; Ex. 3:2-4). Further, to argue from etymology that since the name means "king of righteousness," Melchizedek is not historical, lacks substance. Both historical and archaeological evidence demonstrate that the Jebusite kings of that area used compound names including -zedek for their titles. For example, Adoni-zedek was the Jebusite king of the same city several centuries later (Josh. 10:1).

4 Now consider how great this man was, unto whom even the patriarch Abraham gave the tenth of the ¹spoils.

5 And verily ^athey that are of the sons of Levi, who receive the office of the priesthood, have a commandment to take tithes of the people according to the law, that is, of their brethren, though they come out of the loins of Abraham:

6 But he whose ¹descent is not ²counted from them received tithes of Abraham, ^aand blessed ^bhim that had the promises.

7 And ¹without all contradiction the less is blessed of the better.

8 And here men that die receive tithes; but there he receiveth them, ^aof whom it is witnessed that he liveth.

9 And as I may so say, Levi also, who receiveth tithes, payed tithes ¹in Abraham.

10 For he was yet in the loins of his father, when Melchisedec met him.

A Surety of a Better Testament

11 ^aIf therefore ¹perfection were by the Levitical priesthood, (for under it the people received the law,) what further need was there that another priest should rise after the order of Melchisedec, and not be called after the order of Aaron?

12 For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law.

14 For it is evident that ^aour Lord sprang out of ^bJuda; of which tribe Moses spake nothing concerning priesthood.

15 And it is yet far more evident: for that after the ¹similitude of Melchisedec there ariseth another priest, 16 Who ¹is made, not after the law of a ²carnal commandment, but after the power of an endless life.

17 For he testifieth, ^aThou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec.

19 For ^athe law made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of ^ba better hope did; by the which ^cwe draw ¹nigh unto God.

20 And inasmuch as not without an oath he was made priest:

21 (For those priests were made without an oath; but this with an oath by him that said unto him, ^aThe Lord sware and will not ¹repent, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec:)

22 By so ¹much was Jesus made a ²surety of a ^abetter ³testament.

An Unchangeable Priesthood

23 And they truly were many priests, because they were not ¹suffered to continue by reason of death:

7:4-10. Even Abraham, the great patriarch of the Jewish people, considered Melchizedek enough superior that he tithed to him willingly and humbly of his spoils. So, Levi and the entire Levitical priesthood which proceeded from Abraham, are inferior to Melchizedek and his priesthood. Even though Abraham was the recipient of the covenant (and later, his descendant Moses, of the Law), he is the receiver, rather than the bestower, of the blessing. Thus Melchizedek is his better, and is certainly superior to Abraham's offspring.

7:11, 12. The author raises the question as to why the Old Testament should make reference to another priesthood. If the Levitical priesthood were producing perfection, meaning completion or fulfillment of its role, why is another needed? The old system pronounced its own doom by speaking of another. Further, the author teaches that the passing of the Levitical priesthood necessitates the removal of the Mosaic Law, for they are inextricably united. The law did not produce the Levitical priesthood; rather the priesthood required the law. Both Moses and Aaron were chosen by God before the law was given. The law was given at Sinai to provide the procedures and ordinances for the functioning of the priesthood God had already established. So our author accurately acknowledges that the passing of the Levitical priesthood demands the passing of the Mosaic legal system. Note Paul's teachings concerning the passing of the law in relation to the believer (Rom. 7:1-6; 10:4; 2 Cor. 3:7-11; Gal. 3:9-25). God has not, however, annihilated the law. He has removed it from the life of the believer because it can neither save nor sanctify. The unsaved man, however, still lies under its convicting and condemning work (1 Tim. 1:8-11).

7:15-28. Though the author has repeatedly mentioned the unending nature of the Melchizedekian priesthood, this now becomes the central point. Because of its unending nature it provides a better hope and an unchangeable priesthood, resulting in an unending salvation and intercession through a perfect, one-time sacrifice.

24 But this man, because he continueth ever, hath an unchangeable priesthood.

25 Wherefore he is ^aable also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth ^bto make intercession for them.

26 For such an high priest ¹became us, ^awho is holy, ²harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, ^band ³made higher than the heavens;

27 Who needeth not daily, as those high priests, to offer up sacrifice, first for his ^aown sins, and then for the people's: for this he did once, when he offered up himself.

28 For the law maketh men high priests which have ¹infirmity; but the word of the oath, which ²was since the law, maketh the Son, who ³is consecrated for evermore.

8 Now of the things which we have spoken this is the ¹sum: We have such an high priest, ^awho is set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens;

The Need for a New Covenant

7 For if that ^afirst covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second.

8 For finding fault with them, he saith, ^aBehold, the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah:

9 Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt; because they continued not in my covenant, and I ¹regarded them not, saith the Lord.

Laws Written in Their Hearts

10 For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the ^aLord; I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts: and ^bI will

8:7-13. Many important truths can be gleaned from this passage regarding the new covenant, quoted from Jeremiah 31:31-34. First, during Jeremiah's day it was future and was something new. Second, it will be established with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah. This statement is very precise. It involves the Jewish people at a time when they will again be united. When Jeremiah revealed this prophecy, Israel was scattered throughout the Middle East, and Judah had just recently begun its exile in Babylon. This new covenant made with the Jewish people would come after they were regathered to Israel (Jer. 30:1-3) and after a time of severe tribulation identified as "the time of Jacob's trouble" (Jer. 30:7). Third, it is unlike the covenant God made with Israel at Sinai (v. 9). It is different in that the old covenant had been conditional. When Israel abandoned it, God also abandoned them. The new covenant is a promise. Fourth, this new covenant is based upon an inner, spiritual change. It is not written on stone, but in their hearts (cf. Ezek. 36:26, 27; 2 Cor. 3:6-8). Its followers are those who know the Lord.

The relation of the new covenant to the Gentile, church-age believer is viewed in one of several ways.

INTERCESSION OF CHRIST

7:25. The intercessory work of Christ for the Christian is similar to preventive medicine. In one sense, intercession identifies Christ's present work of mediation in heaven. The biblical use of the term more specifically describes Christ's intervention on behalf of believers' weaknesses and temptations. Christ is continually and actively interceding on our behalf. Application: The assurance of the believer should rest in part on this present ministry of Christ's intercession. (First Reference, Is. 59:16; Primary Reference, Heb. 7:25; cf. Gen 3:15.)

11 And ^athey shall not teach every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the ^bLord: for all shall know me, from the least to the greatest.

First, amillennialists believe that the church replaces Israel and so this covenant is fulfilled by the church. A second view proposes that this covenant, as Jeremiah 31 suggests, is for the nation of Israel alone. The third view suggests that two new covenants exist: one for Israel and one for the church. The fourth (and probably the best) view is that there is one new covenant which God will one day fulfill with Israel and in which the church participates soteriologically today. In other words, though the covenant is not fulfilled, Christ's death has initiated its present benefits for those who will someday share in its ultimate blessings when it is fulfilled with Israel. This view allows the witness of both the Old and New Testaments to stand. Further, nowhere does Scripture speak of two new covenants, any more than it speaks of two old covenants. Paul was a minister of this new covenant to the churches (2 Cor. 3:6). The ordinance of the Lord's Supper which has been given to the church is based upon the sacrifice of the new covenant—Christ's death. Many references to the new covenant within the New Testament clearly relate it to the church (12:23, 24; 1 Cor. 11:25; 2 Cor. 3:6), and others also relate it to Israel (v. 10; 12:23, 24; Rom. 11:27). As heirs of Christ's kingdom, the church partakes of the new covenant's spiritual blessings today and will in the future share in its fulfillment with Israel.

9:4. Verses 1-5 describe the contents of the two chambers of the Mosaic tabernacle. A problem occurs in verse 4 in that the golden censer (altar of incense) was physically located in the outer, first chamber, whereas the "Holiest of all," or Holy of Holies (v. 3), contained only the ark of the covenant. The author's careful choice of the word had (note, by contrast, his earlier word wherein in v. 2) provides the latitude needed to express the altar's liturgical function with the Holy of Holies despite its location in the outer, Holy Place. This altar was physically located in the Holy Place so that incense could be placed upon fresh coals morning and evening, yet it was located immediately in front of the Holy of Holies so that its fragrant cloud might enter the Holy of Holies and cover the ark of the covenant. See Exodus 30:6; 40:5; Leviticus 16:12, 13.

9:6, 7. The priests entered the Holy Place daily to perform their interminable tasks. Morning and evening the lamps were trimmed, and the coals with incense were placed upon the golden altar. The showbread was replaced weekly. But the Holy of Holies was a closed chamber into which the high priest alone ventured one day a year, on the Day of Atonement (cf. Lev. 16:5-34).

9:8-10. The Holy Ghost this signifying: Through this typological picture of the tabernacle, the Holy Spirit was showing that man did not possess direct and complete access to God (and would not) while the tabernacle with its Mosaic Law still stood. The tabernacle further served as a figure, a physical picture or symbol, for all to see. Just as access was not open to the Holy of Holies, so access to God was not complete. Man's conscience was always left unsatisfied. Since he must return repeatedly, and since he never knew what happened within the closed chambers, he could never feel he had been completely and permanently cleansed. This would continue only until the time of reformation when Christ would establish a new order, the new covenant.

The Mediator of the New Testament

15 And for this cause ^ahe is the mediator of the new ¹testament, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first ¹testament, ^bthey which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance.

16 For where a testament is, there must also of necessity be the death of the testator.

17 For ^aa testament is of force after men are dead: otherwise it is of no strength at all while the testator liveth.

18 ^aWhereupon ¹neither the first ²testament was dedicated without blood.

9:11, 12. The reference in verse 12 to the holy place (Gr. ta hagia) needs to be understood as the Holy of Holies. This Greek phrase is not used consistently for any one part of the tabernacle. In verse 2 it is used for the Holy Place; in verse 25 it has reference to the Holy of Holies. Thus, the usage of the phrase must be determined by the demands of the context. Verses 11 and 12 clearly relate to the inner sanctuary, the Holy of Holies, as have the preceding verses (vv. 7-10). These two verses present the essentials in operating the new covenant: a superior sanctuary and an infinitely superior sacrifice. Christ has opened the inner sanctuary (Most Holy Place) of the heavenly tabernacle, quite in contrast to the closed sanctuary of the earthly.

9:13. The ashes of an heifer refers to the ceremony involving the red heifer (Num. 19). A heifer would be taken outside the camp, killed, and then burned. As it was burning, the priest would throw cedar, hyssop, and scarlet wool upon it. Afterwards, the ashes would be gathered and stored outside the city. When anyone became ceremonially unclean because of contact with a dead body, these ashes would be mixed with water and sprinkled on that person. This procedure certainly demonstrates the largely ceremonial nature of purification provided by the old covenant practices.

9:15. The redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament: The Old Testament sacrifices could not take away sin (10:4); they merely made a provisional atonement, a temporary covering, for sin. Christ's sacrifices expiated all those past sins that had received such atonement (cf. Rom. 3:25). The Old Testament sacrifices might be compared to the writing of a check. The paper on which it is written is practically worthless. Yet it is used and accepted in place of money, since it is backed by what has been deposited in the bank. Christ's death was deposited from the foundation of the world as that which backed the Old Testament sacrifices. With Christ's death on the cross, the deposit was released and all the past checks were honored and paid.

9:16, 17. The word testament (Gr. diathēkē) refers here to a will (in accordance with the Greek usage of the New Testament era) even though the Greek word is commonly used in Hebrews and throughout the New Testament for a covenant. A will requires the death of its maker before it can be set in force. Christ's sinless life could not establish the New Testament. His death, involving His shed blood, was necessary.

PURIFICATION OF HEAVEN

9:12. The most holy place in existence is in the presence of God or in heaven. The primary purpose of the blood of Christ was to propitiate (satisfy) the wrath of God and pay the price of redemption. But also, as the earthly high priest used the blood of bulls and goats to cleanse the Holy of Holies, so Christ, the Eternal High Priest, entered heaven to purify it "by his own blood." Illustration: Although heaven is a perfect place, Satan also had access to it (Job 1:6). The purification of heaven probably entailed the casting out of Satan. Application: Purity ought also to characterize the earthly dwelling place of God, that is, the Christian, whom Christ indwells (Gal. 2:20). The Christian is therefore called the temple of God (1 Cor. 6:19). (First Reference, John 2:19; Primary Reference, Heb. 9:12; cf. Eph. 4:9.)

according to the law, ^ahe took the blood of calves and of goats, ^bwith water, and scarlet wool, and hyssop, and sprinkled both the book, and all the people, 20 Saying, ^aThis is the blood of the ¹testament which ^bGod hath ²enjoined unto you.

21 Moreover ^ahe sprinkled with blood both the tabernacle, and all the vessels of the ministry.

22 And almost all things are by the law ¹purged with blood; and ^awithout shedding of blood is no ²remission.

23 It was therefore necessary that ^athe patterns of things in the heavens should be ¹purified with these; but the heavenly things themselves with better sacrifices than these.

24 For ^aChrist is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the ¹figures of ^bthe true; but into heaven itself, now ^ato appear in the presence of God for us:

25 Nor yet that he should offer himself often, as ^athe high priest entereth into the ¹holy place every year with blood of others;

Christ the Perfect Sacrifice

10 For the law having a ^ashadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things, ^bcan never with those sacrifices which they offered year by year continually make the comers thereunto perfect.

2 For then would they not have ceased to be offered? because that the worshippers once ¹purged should have had no more ²conscience of sins.

3 But in those sacrifices there is a remembrance again made of sins every year.

4 For ^ait is not possible that the blood of bulls and of goats should take away sins.

5 Wherefore when he cometh into the world, he saith, ^aSacrifice and offering thou ¹wouldest not, but a body hast thou prepared me:

6 In burnt offerings and sacrifices for sin thou hast had no pleasure.

7 Then said I, Lo, I come (in the volume of the book it is written of me,) to do thy will, O God.

8 ¹Above when He said, Sacrifice and offering and burnt offerings and offering for sin thou ²wouldest not, neither hadst pleasure therein; which are offered ³by the law;

9:22. On the basis of the preceding verses the author concludes two things: (1) the law seems to require that almost everything be purged with blood; and (2) there is no remission, forgiveness, without the shedding of blood.

9:24. This verse identifies the true holy places as heaven itself. This would dispute the notion that heaven contains a tabernacle corresponding in appearance to that which Moses was commanded to build. Heaven itself is the fulfillment, or archetype, of that pattern.

9:27, 28. The relation of verse 27 to its context is often dismissed in order to stress the certainty of man's future judgment. It is axiomatic that man dies once. However, exceptions do exist: Enoch and Elijah of the Old Testament; the saints who are alive at Christ's return, who will never die; Lazarus and others who were raised from the dead and later died a second time. But no exceptions concerning God's judgment can be cited. There is no reincarnation; every person gets one chance to prepare. Yet the full significance of verse 27 cannot be seen apart from verse 28. As it is appointed unto men once to die ... so Christ was once offered: The author is clearly presenting a comparison. As it is with man, so it was with Christ. As man can die only once, so the Man Christ could die only once as a sacrifice. His relation to humanity would be marred if He had to die more than once. Further, a second comparison seems evident. Beyond death there exists another reality. For man it is the reality of appearing for judgment; for Christ it is the certainty of appearing with deliverance from condemnation for them that look for him.

10:1-18. The feature of the new covenant emphasized here is Christ's once-for-all sacrifice. The author has frequently stated this point in the preceding chapters (cf. 7:27; 9:12, 26, 28), but here it becomes the focal point of the discussion. First, this truth is highlighted by contrast with the repetitious service of the Mosaic system. Those sacrifices had to be offered year by year continually. Later, the author demonstrates that Christ's single, one-time sacrifice is completed by His continuing position—seated at God's right hand (vv. 11-14).

9 Then said he, Lo, I come to do thy will, O God. He taketh away the first, that he may establish the second.

10 "By the which will we are ¹sanctified ^bthrough the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all.

11 And every priest standeth ^adaily ministering and offering ¹oftentimes the same sacrifices, which can never take away sins:

12 ^aBut this man, after he had offered one sacrifice for sins for ever, sat down ^bon the right hand of God;

13 From henceforth ¹expecting ^atill his enemies be made his footstool.

14 For by one offering he hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified.

15 Whereof the Holy Ghost also is a witness to us: for after that he had said before,

16 This is the covenant that I will make with them after those days, saith the ^aLord, I will put my laws into their hearts, and in their minds will I write them;

17 And their sins and ¹iniquities will I remember no more.

18 Now where ¹remission of these is, there is no more offering for sin.

Hold Fast the Faith

19 Having therefore, brethren, ^a'boldness' to enter ^b'into the holiest by the blood of Jesus,

20 By a new and ^a'living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh;

21 And having an high priest over the house of God;

23 Let us hold fast the ¹'profession of our' ²'faith without wavering; (for ^a'he is faithful that promised;)

24 And let us consider one another to ¹'provoke unto love and to good works:

25 ^a'Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and ^b'so much the more, as ye see ^c'the day approaching.

Punishment for Wilful Sin

26 For ^a'if we sin wilfully' ^b'after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth' ^c'no more sacrifice for sins,

27 But a certain fearful looking for of judgment and ^a'fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries.

10:20. Jesus Christ is the new and living way by which believers have direct access into the very Holy Place of God (cf. 4:14; 6:20; 7:25; John 14:6).

10:24. The word translated provoke (Gr. paroxysmos) usually has a negative sense, as is witnessed by its only other New Testament usage (Acts 15:39). The positive connotation which the word has in the present text means to stir up. It is easy to stir up hatred and godless deeds; it takes much more to stir up another to love and good works.

10:25. Not forsaking the assembling: This admonition involves far more than erratic attendance. It involves the entire worship of Christ and is an outward indication of an inner condition. The assembling of God's people provides opportunity for reciprocal encouragement, strengthening, and the stirring up that can be gained from one another (cf. Col. 3:12-16). It consists of participation in worship and fellowship. The church is a body interacting (1 Cor. 12:14-27); it is not merely a dispensary of spiritual food and medicine.

10:26-29. Verses 26-31 contain the fourth warning passage of Hebrews (cf. 2:1-4). The surrounding verses (vv. 19-39) contain related exhortations, but the warning itself is limited to these verses. They warn of the critical danger of turning from Christ's once-for-all, perfect sacrifice back to their old ways. If we sin wilfully reveals that this act is deliberate. It parallels the sin of Numbers 15:30, 31. When one willingly or defiantly disobeyed God, there was no sacrifice for such apostasy. He had to die. This is the nature of the sin in verse 26. Verse 28 seems to allude to Deuteronomy 17:2-7. These verses record that upon the testimony of two or three witnesses, death by stoning was the punishment for apostasy—going after and serving false gods (Deut. 17:2). Now in verse 29, the one who would despise the person of Jesus and His ministry as High Priest is worthy of even greater judgment. Verse 29 (due to the verb and participles used) should not be understood as judgment that has happened because of such apostasy, but as judgment that would happen should such apostasy occur. The author places his recipients and himself (we) under this warning just as he did in the earlier warnings. By so doing he demonstrates that the warnings are intended for the saved as well as for the unsaved. Yet, here, as in chapter 6, the author does not say that anyone has committed this sin. He describes what would happen, not what has happened. He is describing a hypothetical situation. The severe admonition of this warning, and all others in Scripture, is God's means to ensure our perseverance.

28 He that ¹despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three ^awitnesses:

29 "Of how much ¹sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath ²trodden under foot the Son of God, and ^bhath counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified, ³an unholy thing, ^cand hath ⁴done despite unto the Spirit of grace?

30 For we know him that hath said, "Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will ¹recompense, saith the Lord. And again, ^bThe Lord shall judge his people.

31 "It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God.

Faith Before the Flood

11 Now faith is the ¹substance of ¹¹things hoped for, the ²evidence ^aof things not seen.

2 For by it the elders obtained a good report.

3 Through faith we understand that ^athe ¹worlds were ²framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which ³do appear.

10:30, 31. These verses, along with verses 27-29, reveal the severity and certainty of God's judgment. At times some express the idea that God's punishment ought to be milder during this age of grace. They entertain the notion that judgment was more severe under law. These verses should shatter that impression. This harmonizes with what Jesus often taught. The man who has greater revelation will receive greater judgment (Matt. 11:20-24); and to whom much is given, much is required (Luke 12:48). One's knowledge of God ought to strengthen, not weaken, his awareness of God's inevitable judgment. His divine character demands justice and holiness; His divine attributes can perform punishment. The fifth warning passage (12:18-29) further reveals God's judgment.

11:1. Verse 1 is not so much a definition of what faith is, as it is a description of what faith does (cf. 11:6). Two truths concerning its activity are stated here. First, faith provides substance (Gr. hypostasis). Though broad in its usages, this Greek word normally has the meaning of "assurance" in the New Testament (cf. 3:14; 2 Cor. 9:4; 11:17) and this seems to be the best sense here. Second, faith provides evidence (Gr. elegchos). It is evidence in the sense of proof that results in conviction. The difference between assurance and evidence would be minimal were it not for the phrase qualifying each: of things hoped for and of things not seen. The first involves future hope; the second involves present realities that are unseen. The first includes the hope of the resurrection, the return of Christ, and the glorification of the saints. The second involves unseen realities, such as the forgiveness of sin through Christ's sacrifice and the present intercession of Christ in heaven. Hope is faith relating to the future; conviction is faith relating to the present.

11:4. Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain: In what way was his sacrifice better? Was it because his was animal and Cain's vegetable? Or his a firstling and Cain's not the firstfruit? Or his with blood and Cain's without? Both Hebrews and Genesis (4:1-15) demonstrate that it was not the offering that made one acceptable and the other unacceptable. God accepts both grain and animal offerings according to their purposes. The character of the worshiper made one offering acceptable and the other not. Abel offered his by faith; Cain obviously did not. Genesis records that even before the rejection of Cain's offering his heart was not right with God (Gen. 4:7).

his gifts: and by it he being dead yet ^bspeaketh.

5 By faith ^aEnoch was translated ¹that he should not see death; and was not found, because God had translated him: for before his translation he had this testimony, that he pleased God.

6 But without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him.

7 By faith ^aNoah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with ¹fear, ^bprepared an ark to the saving of his house; by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of ^cthe righteousness which is by faith.

The Faith of the Patriarchs

8 By faith ^aAbraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out, not knowing ¹whither he went.

11 Through faith also ^aSara herself received strength to conceive seed, and ^bwas ¹delivered of a child when she was past age, because she judged him ^cfaithful who had promised.

11:19. In a figure: Though Abraham was stopped before the actual slaying of his son, Isaac was as good as dead in Abraham's mind (cf. Gen. 22:10-12). Thus, Isaac serves as a type (Gr. parabolē) of a literal resurrection. This incident prefigured the resurrection of Abraham's ultimate Seed, Jesus Christ.

The Author and Finisher of Our Faith

12 Wherefore ¹seeing we also are ²compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, ^alet us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily ³beset us, and ^blet us run ^cwith ⁴patience the race that is set before us,

11:39, 40. Genuine faith perseveres to the end; emotional decisions do not. True faith continues to believe the truth. Once again, the author shows the superiority of the new covenant. God saved this better thing, or the fulfillment of the promise, for this age. In fact, without those of the new covenant, even the mightiest champion of faith from the Old Testament could not be made perfect.

12:1. The present exhortation to run finds its basis in the examples of the champions mentioned in chapter 11. These heroes of the faith are like a cloud of witnesses. As “witnesses” (Gr. marturōn) they are sometimes regarded as spectators (Gr. theatai) or as martyrs; yet this Greek word should be understood as referring simply to those who testify or witness. The emphasis is on the witness provided by their living by faith. This race of faith is described by three modifying statements. First, it is to be run by laying aside every weight. This refers to impediments that weigh one down, whether clothing or excessive body weight. These things are not inherently wrong, but for the diligent runner or the faithful Christian they must be removed. Second, it is to be run by putting off the entangling sin. This seems to refer to the one sin above all others that defeats a Christian. This may be a different sin for each individual. Third, it is to be run with patience (Gr. hypomonēs). Since patience is not an attribute commonly associated with running, this word would be better translated as endurance (as it is in the cognate verb forms of vv. 2, 3). Endurance and persistence have been on the author’s mind since the end of chapter 10 (cf. 10:32, 36-38; 11:13).

12:2. Just as verse 1 establishes some qualities for the entrance into and the actual running of life’s race, so verse 2 directs one’s eyes to the finish line. Jesus is the author and finisher in that He has already blazed the trail and finished the course.

18 For ye are not come unto ^athe mount that might be touched, and that burned with fire, nor unto blackness, and darkness, and tempest,

12:18 ^aEx. 19:12, 16; 20:18; Deut. 4:11; 5:22

12:3, 4. Though chapter 11 provides many championships for believers to emulate, the supreme example of endurance is Jesus Himself.

12:6. Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth: God's principle of disciplining His own people is completely congruous with human practices. This quotation from Proverbs 3:12, stating God's practice, corresponds to the commands God gave to fathers: "He that spareth his rod hateth his son: but he that loveth him chasteneth him betimes [promptly]" (Prov. 13:24; cf. 22:15; 23:13). Love and corporal punishment are not incongruous; they are two complementary and necessary aspects of training.

12:12, 13. Some of the runners of verse 1 have grown so weary that they have become stooped and need spiritual strength to be straightened up again. They must be given help, yet they themselves also must straighten their paths by avoiding obstacles that would spiritually trip them up.

12:15. Root of bitterness accurately portrays the nature of bitterness. First it is hidden, but when it is discovered its noxious roots have spread and it springs up as something much bigger and more destructive (cf. Deut. 29:18).

12:16, 17. Profane person: This profanity (Gr. bebēlos) involves far more than one's speech; it is a quality of one's life. The author sees this quality exemplified in Esau, even though Esau was not a vile man. In fact, he was less of a crook than his brother Jacob. The author accurately focuses on the one area that revealed Esau as profane—the selling of his birthright. To "profane" is to regard something as unhallowed, to treat something sacred as common. Being totally concerned with his temporary and material needs, Esau gave them priority over his rights as the firstborn son and his responsibilities as heir to the blessing of the Abrahamic covenant (Gen. 25:29–34). The result in Esau's life was that afterward, when he wanted the blessing, he was rejected. He repented with tears, but the situation was irrevocable.

19 And the sound of a trumpet, and the voice of words; which voice they that heard ^aintreated¹ that the word should not be spoken to them any more:

20 (For they could not endure that which was commanded, ^aAnd if so much as a beast touch the mountain, it shall be stoned, or thrust through with ^{1a} a dart:

12:18–29. These verses contain the fifth and final warning passage of Hebrews. (See 2:1–4.) In each of these passages a particular area of danger is revealed. Like the second warning (3:7–4:13), the fifth begins by exhibiting Israel’s failures and disobedience while journeying to the Promised Land. In the second, Israel’s sin was unbelief concerning God’s promise to care for them. In the fifth, their sin is the refusal to hear God’s warning at Sinai. Verses 25–27 contain the heart of this warning. The danger lies in refusing to hear the warning of Him who speaks from heaven, for if those at Mount Sinai did not escape God’s wrath much more shall not we escape. One may escape God’s warnings now, but once more at Christ’s second coming, God will shake the earth and no one will escape (Is. 3:1–8; Joel 3:14–16; Matt. 24:27–30; Rev. 16:16–21).

12:23. The general assembly translates one Greek word (panēguris) which is used only here in the New Testament. It refers to a festal assembly and probably describes either the assembly of the angels that precedes it or the church that follows, rather than setting forth a third group.

13:2. One incentive the author uses to encourage love and hospitality is that some have entertained angels unawares. For example, Abraham (Gen. 18:1–3) and Lot (Gen. 19:1, 2) were unaware that their guests were angels at the time they received them. Care must be taken so as not to read too much into this statement. The verse says that “some have entertained” (aorist tense). The use of the present tense, meaning that some do entertain angels, would provide grounds for expecting this still to happen. But such is not the teaching. We should, nonetheless, show hospitality to the needy, for it will benefit us as well as them when it is done as to the Lord (cf. Matt. 25:35–40).

RANKING OF ANGELS

12:22. The description of angels suggests that they exist in orderly arrangement, perhaps with specialized responsibilities. Illustration: Michael is the archangel (Jude 9), the highest in the order of angels. Gabriel appears to be the messenger angel of God, usually cited when an angel gives a message from God to man. The cherubim are portrayed as being in diligent service to God and attached to the throne of God to guard His holiness. Seraphim is the title applied to those angels assigned to God’s altar; they, like the cherubim, are concerned with the holiness of God. The seraphim probably relate to sacrifice and cleansing, whereas the cherubim deal with judgment. Application: When a Christian recognizes the order within the various ranks of angels, he will realize that what is done for God should be done in an orderly manner. (First Reference, Gen. 1:1; Primary Reference, Heb. 12:22; cf. Is. 14:12.)

13:10–14. We have an altar: Does the author mean “we Christians” or “we Jews”? In light of the following verses, “we Jews” provides the clearer thought. The argument of verse 11 is that there were times within the Jewish ritual when even the priests could not eat of the sacrifice (e.g., the Day of Atonement). Rather, the flesh was taken outside the camp and burned (Lev. 16:27). So now also, as the believer’s sin offering, Christ has been separated from the camp of Levitical worship. Those who have turned to Him for redemption must also join Him outside the camp. For here have we no continuing city may be a foreboding of Jerusalem’s imminent destruction. Even if there were no prophetic intent within the author’s statement, God is about to remove the temptation for Jewish Christians to return to the sacrificial ritual of the Jerusalem temple. This occurred in A.D. 70 when Titus, the Roman, destroyed the temple and Jerusalem.

13:24. They of Italy: The preposition (Gr. apo) might better be translated “from” Italy. It can equally refer to those who were presently in Italy (cf. Acts 10:23 or 17:13) or to those who were formerly from Italy (cf. Acts 21:27). The phrase identifies only their origin; they were Italians. It is reasonable, therefore, to conclude that either the writer or the recipients were living in Italy.

The General Epistle of JAMES

Authorship. The author is identified only as James, and there are four men so named in the New Testament. Yet the evidence unquestionably favors one candidate.

Two that were insignificant in the early church were James the son of Alphaeus, called “the less” (Mark 3:18; 15:40), and a virtually unknown James (Luke 6:16). James the son of Zebedee and brother of John, though better known, also lacked prominence in the early church and was martyred at the early date of A.D. 44 (Acts 12:2).

By contrast, James, the half brother of Christ, possessed all of the qualities of the author. First, he was the one James referred to by his name alone (cf. Gal. 1:19 with 2:9, 12; Acts 12:2 with 12:17; and see Acts 15:13; 21:18; Jude 1), so was obviously well known to the scattered believers. Second, the language of this epistle echoes the speech of this James in Acts 15. Third, as a leader of the Jerusalem church, this James was a prominent figure among the dispersed Jewish Christians. The Jews regarded him as the James.

As a half brother of Jesus, James grew up in a carpenter’s home in Nazareth (Matt. 13:55) and later moved to Capernaum when Jesus began His public ministry (John 2:12). Like his brothers, he did not believe in Jesus as Lord until the end of Christ’s earthly ministry (John 7:1–5). But after the resurrection of Jesus, James received a special, post-resurrection appearance of Jesus (1 Cor. 15:7), experienced Pentecost (Acts 1:14), and was a leader of the Jerusalem church throughout most of the history of Acts (15:13; 21:18). Josephus, the first-century Jewish historian, records that James was martyred about A.D. 62.

Date. Everything about the Epistle of James suggests that it was one of the first New Testament books written: (1) Addressed to the 12 scattered tribes, it was written when the church was still primarily Jewish. (2) Its many allusions to Christ’s teachings, but independence from the Gospels, favor a very early date. (3) Its emphasis on the Lord’s return (while omitting other doctrines concerning Christ) also implies an early date. (4) The simple church structure described in James supports its probable antiquity. For example, bishops and deacons are not mentioned, only elders, who were part of the pre-church, Jewish structure. The Greek word for synagogue is used for the assembling of the church (2:2). (5) There is no hint of a Jew-Gentile controversy, so James was probably written before A.D. 49. A date in the early forties is commonly accepted.

Characteristics and Theme. The approach of James is practical rather than theoretical. It is the Proverbs of the New Testament, and the most Jewish of all New Testament books, containing little that is distinctively Christian. Even such basic doctrines as redemption through the death of Christ or His resurrection are absent. It seems like a commentary on the teachings of Jesus, incorporating many ideas and phrases from the Sermon on the Mount (Matt. 5–7). There are many obvious parallel references to the Gospels. Even James’s frequent illustrations from nature correspond to Christ’s parabolic teaching.

The themes of faith and works surface repeatedly. And James presents these subjects not as conflicting values, but as complementary. For James, “faith” may be either saving faith or profession of faith (much like the usage today). For Paul, faith is faith; for James faith may be genuine or spurious (cf. notes at 2:14–26). Hence James demands that faith must demonstrate itself as real. Therefore, the theme of James is not merely faith and works, but faith that works.

1:1. See the Introduction for information concerning the author.

1:2, 3. In this epistle on Christian living, James opens with a most crucial topic: the trials of life. These verses describe the various testings—whether from the world and Satan, or from God—into which godly Christians fall (Gr. peripiptō). These “negative” experiences are to be accepted with great joy, not for the sake of the trial itself but because of the positive work God can accomplish through the testing. The words in verses 2 and 3 (temptations and trying) are often regarded as virtually synonymous. If this were true, then trials themselves would produce spiritual maturity. But they do not. Often, testings make Christians bitter instead of better, with no spiritual growth occurring. The Greek word for “trying” (dokimion) might be better translated as “approving.” It is not merely one’s presence in such trials but one’s victory over them that brings spiritual growth and maturity. Those Christians whom God can use the most are those whom God has bruised the most.

1:4. The natural response to adversity is to escape it. But God uses trouble to mature His people.

1:5. This verse is not a blanket promise of wisdom for any situation. In the context of life’s trials, it probably speaks of the believer being granted (1) wisdom as to the reason for his trials and (2) wisdom to endure them.

1:9-11. At first sight, these verses seem unrelated to the larger theme of life’s trials. Yet money is a common cause of trials and “double-mindedness” (unreliability). James is teaching us here to adopt a non-materialistic worldview. Wealth is meaningless in the face of certain death. Rather, we must focus upon God’s view of exaltation and lowliness. Both positions are true of all believers. But the lowly need to be encouraged that they are exalted before God, whereas the exalted need to hear a message of humiliation. Compare Paul’s statement in 1 Corinthians 7:22.

1:12. Mankind understandably may look on tragedy as the curse of God, as Job’s friends did. Trials are, however, the means through which God’s blessings can come. One’s endurance in and victory over trials bring God’s blessings. Christians, therefore, are not instructed to seek avenues of escape. God desires that they mature in the situation rather than move from it (cf. Rom. 5:3-5; 1 Pet. 1:6, 7). He does, however, promise to provide an escape if the testing becomes unbearable (1 Cor. 10:13). God’s people need to meditate more on James 1:12 than 1 Corinthians 10:13. The reason for this, and why God allows trials in the lives of His people, is revealed in the Mosaic Law: “That he might humble thee, and that he might prove thee, to do thee good at thy latter end” (Deut. 8:16).

1:13-15. The temptation of verses 13-15 differs from that in verses 2-12, as the context shows. Here the source is identified as internal, from one’s own lust, and the outcome is death. In verses 2-12 the “temptations” or trials have an external origin in that they fall on man. The trials of verses 2-12 cannot be avoided, so believers are encouraged to endure them, and mature as a result. The temptations of verses 13-15 must be avoided, according to God’s express commandments (Rom. 13:14; 1 Tim. 6:11; 2 Tim. 2:22). The progression of sin, from temptation to death, has an analogy in the physical life cycle: conception, birth, maturity, and death.

James uses words with the same Greek root in verses 2-12 and 13-15 to express different concepts. Outwardly, trials and temptations may appear the same, and what may start as a trial may develop into temptation, if not properly answered by the Word of God.

15 Then ^awhen ¹lust hath conceived, it ²bringeth forth sin: and sin, when it is ³finished, ^bbringeth forth death.

16 Do not ¹err, my beloved brethren.

17 ^aEvery good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, ^bwith whom is no ¹variableness, neither shadow of turning.

18 ^aOf his own will begat he us with the ^bword of truth, ^cthat we should be a kind of firstfruits of his creatures.

Hearers and Doers of the Word

19 Wherefore, my beloved brethren, let every man be swift to hear, ^aslow to speak, ^bslow to wrath:

20 For the wrath of man ¹worketh not the righteousness of God.

22 But ^abe ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves.

2:1 ^a Acts 7:2; 1 Cor. 2:8 ^b Lev. 19:15 ¹ hold ² partiality

1:17. Three great principles are presented: (1) God is the Father, or Creator, of the heavenly bodies. (2) As their Creator, He is certainly more stable than they. With God there is not even the slightest change; He is immutable. (3) God is only good—and always good. This third principle relates verse 17 to the preceding context. It answers the implication of verse 13 that God may sometimes tempt man to evil. Though God tries the saints (John 6:6; Heb. 11:17), He never tries with evil intent so as to tempt them.

1:18. All the redeemed are God's firstfruits in that they are the first step in God's redemption of all creation (Rom. 8:18–23).

1:19. This is a key verse because it expresses three topics that James develops later: hearing, verses 19–27; speaking, 3:1–12; and wrath, 4:1–12.

1:20. Trials require silence and patience because talk inflames anger, and anger inflames talk. Anger also distracts from listening to God.

1:21. Engrafted word might better be translated “implanted word” and may reflect Christ's parable of the seed planted in the four different soils (Matt.

13:3–9). Both Christ and James focus on the proper hearing of God's Word (Matt. 13:13, 19, 20, 22, 23). One needs to hear that Word, for it is able to save your souls. Though this phrase accurately describes the Word's work of producing initial salvation, it is better in this context to understand it as the Word's ability to preserve and mature the Christian's life through trials.

1:25. The perfect law of liberty probably refers to the teachings of Christ and His apostles. This law is perfect, since Christ brought to completion the teachings and work of the Mosaic Law (cf. Matt. 5:17–20; Rom. 10:4). It is a law of liberty because it frees from the principles of sin and death (Rom. 8:2, 3; Gal. 5:1, 13). James also describes it as the royal law (2:8) for it is the law of the messianic King (cf. Gal. 6:2).

1:26, 27. In verses 22–25 James has rebuked mere listening—by the hearer who does not do. In verses 26 and 27 he rebukes mere doing—by the doer who leaves his inner life unchanged. James offers not a formal definition but three key aspects of pure religion: controlled speech, altruistic service, and separation from the world.

IMMUTABILITY OF GOD

1:17. Since all changes are either for the better or for the worse, God is unchanging because He is perfect and cannot get better nor become worse. The Scriptures describe God's nature, will, and character as immutable or unchanging. Illustration: To be immutable, however, does not mean to be immobile. God also has the qualities of personality and can act, think, create, and make decisions. Application: God is unchanging; therefore, Christians can depend on His love and power, because God has not changed since biblical times. (First Reference, Ps. 9:7; Primary Reference, James 1:17; cf. Lev. 19:2.)

3 And ye ¹have respect to him that weareth the ²gay clothing, and say unto him, Sit thou here in a good place; and say to the poor, Stand thou there, or sit here ³under my footstool:

2:1-13. James begins this passage on partiality with an exhortation (v. 1), then a brief illustration (vv. 2-4). Most of this discussion is an argument against partiality (vv. 5-13). First, partiality shows inconsistency in one's conduct: those we spurn are the ones God has chosen (v. 5), and those we favor are the godless whom God rejects (vv. 6, 7). Second, partiality is more than an error in judgment; it is an act of sin. The one who shows respect of persons is a transgressor of the law. The law is like a ring or hedge encircling those within. When one breaks this ring he stands outside (v. 10), becoming a transgressor—whether he commits adultery, murder, or shows partiality. Third, James argues that partiality provokes God's judgment (vv. 12, 13).

2:14-17. Can faith save him? This statement and others in verses 14-26 persuade some critics that James is teaching salvation through faith and works. Luther called this epistle "strawy," believing it emphasized works too much. Today, some regard it as a late writing in which the author is reacting to Paul's doctrine of salvation by faith alone. This is not the case. James's teachings reflect neither a negative nor a positive response to Paul's teachings. For Paul, faith practically equals salvation. James, however, sees two kinds of faith: saving faith and professing faith (much like the usage today). For Paul, justification is by faith (Rom. 4:5). For James, justification is by a faith that works—by a genuine faith that manifests itself in post-conversion works. Before salvation, these Jews had believed in the efficacy of works. Now some were reacting at the opposite extreme, imagining that works play no part in the salvation experience. James retorts that the kind of faith that does not produce works is not saving faith. As Calvin said: "Faith alone saves, but a faith that saves is never alone." Thus, James's question is not simply "Can faith save?" but as the Greek text may suggest, "Can that faith save him?" Can merely professed but undemonstrated faith save? (See vv. 21-24 for further discussion.) The Greek grammar expects a negative answer to the question that ends verse 14. Hence it can be rendered, "That faith [i.e., the one mentioned in verse 14a which is without works] cannot save."

2:19, 20. The reference to faith in one God probably alludes to Israel's great creedal statement of Deuteronomy 6:4, "Hear, O Israel: The LORD our God is one LORD." Adherence to a creed is not true faith. Even the 25 Likewise also ^awas not Rahab the harlot justified by works, when she had received the messengers, and had sent them out another way?

26 For as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also.

demons know and accept the truth of the creed, but they do not possess saving faith. If one does nothing to enact his knowledge of God, he is worse than the demons, for they at least tremble.

2:21–24. These verses present the crux of the issue: Is a man justified by works? Do Paul and James contradict each other? Several factors demonstrate that they do not. First, as already noted in verses 14–17, the apostles use the word for faith with different meanings. Second, they use “justified” in different senses. It is customary to identify all nuances of this word with the theological idea Paul popularized—that is, God’s act of declaring all believers righteous on the basis of Christ’s redemptive work. But a common Old Testament and gospel usage involves demonstrating or showing something to be righteous (cf. Ps. 51:4; Luke 7:35; Rom. 3:4); it is this usage that James follows. Third, though both men use Abraham as an illustration, they focus on different aspects of his life. Paul shows that Abraham was declared righteous by faith when he trusted God (Gen. 15:6). James declares that he was shown to be righteous by his offering up of Isaac (Gen. 22:9). Fourth, even the terminology of these two apostles differs. Paul constantly speaks against the works of the law, as being a false use of those works to merit salvation. James, however, is speaking of works of love that follow belief. Fifth, the two apostles are discussing totally different subjects, since they are confronted by different problems. Paul, opposing the Judaizers, seeks to prove that the Gentiles can be saved and sanctified apart from circumcision or any other work of the law. James, opposing merely nominal, professing Christians, seeks to show that true faith confirms itself by deeds of love. If James were fighting Paul over law and grace—or faith and works—surely the subject of circumcision would have arisen, since it lies at the core of that issue. James and Paul are not face-to-face fighting each other—they are back-to-back fighting opposite foes!

2:25. Just as James presents two examples of spurious faith (vv. 16, 19), he concludes with two examples of genuine faith: Abraham and Rahab. One was a Jewish patriarch of great sanctity, whose faith was perfected by his works. The other was the lowest citizen of a condemned Gentile city, whose newfound faith was dramatized by her works. No matter whether one has the mature faith of an Abraham or the baby-like faith of a Rahab, there must be evidence of that faith.

2:26. The point of this analogy between the body and one’s faith is that both require an energizing element. The absence of that element renders the other component dead.

3:1, 2. The word masters (Gr. didaskaloi) would today be translated “teachers.” The theme of Chapter 3, often regarded as the tongue, is more properly the teacher. The chapter progresses from the teacher to his primary tool, the tongue (vv. 2–12), then to the source of his teaching, his wisdom (vv. 13–18). James must warn the many who were seeking to teach in the church, since in the early church it was an easy matter to teach in the synagogue as well. Both Jesus and Paul demonstrate that even strangers could teach (cf. Acts 13:15). Anyone who thought he had the “gift” to teach would also want to use it (1 Cor. 12:8, 28), and it was misused (1 Cor. 14:26; 1 Tim. 1:7). James’s warning is twofold: (1) the teacher will receive greater scrutiny from God, because the teacher often passes judgment upon his hearers; and (2) the primary teaching tool is the tongue, which no one can control sufficiently.

3:6. The tongue is a system (world) of iniquity that sets on fire the whole course of life, and is even set on fire by Satan (cf. 3:15).

7 For every kind of beasts, and of birds, and of serpents, and of things in the sea, is tamed, and hath been tamed of mankind:

 4:6 ^aJob 22:29; Ps. 138:6; Prov. 3:34; Matt. 23:12; 1 Pet. 5:5

3:7. The word tamed (Gr. damazō) occurs in only one other New Testament passage (Mark 5:4), about the maniac of Gadara, which helps us to establish the proper meaning of the word in James. The “taming” has nothing to do with domesticating animals or training them to perform. The meaning is control or dominion. Mankind can control every lesser creature, but no one can control his own tongue.

3:9. James explains that man is made in God’s image (cf. Gen. 1:26, 27; 5:1), so to curse people and yet bless God is inconsistent. Though the fall of mankind has marred that image or likeness, James teaches that it still exists (as do Gen. 9:6 and 1 Cor. 11:7).

3:12. The last clause of verse 12 differs from those that precede it. The former are questions that attempt to illustrate; this one is a statement to teach. As salt water cannot make sweet water, so the person who curses others cannot bless God. The cursing of people truly indicates what lies within a person.

3:13. Beginning at verse 13, James says that godly wisdom is necessary in a teacher. The teacher must exhibit a meek and practical application of the truth. One cannot teach what one does not live.

3:14-18. Two wisdoms are expounded by teachers. The one from God is pure and promotes peace, ending in righteousness (vv. 17, 18). But the other is natural and demonic, visible in the teacher as jealousy and ambition (strife, Gr. eritheia). The result of such teaching is evil living and confusion.

4:1-3. Chapter 3 ended by stressing the peace that results from heavenly wisdom. Now James emphasizes the strife so common among his readers, stemming from their unsatisfied, selfish desires. Instead of wrestling with God in prayer, these believers are striving with one another.

4:4. As Israel was a spiritual adulteress, unfaithful to God, so the church is a spiritual adulteress when she is the unfaithful bride of Christ (cf. Hos. 2:5, 19, 20; Matt. 12:39). One cannot be both a lover of God and a lover of the world.

4:5, 6. Although many believe that verse 5 refers to the positive ministry of the indwelling Holy Spirit, yearning jealously over the believer, the tenor of verses 4 and 5 is negative, speaking of man’s envy. The good work of God begins at verse 6 in contrast to 4 and 5 as the conjunction indicates. But he giveth more grace is literally “greater grace” (Gr. meizonā). God gives grace that is greater than the world’s attraction of verse 4 and the inner lust of verse 5 (cf. Rom. 5:20), and so can withstand both.

7 Submit yourselves therefore to God. ^aResist the devil, and he will flee from you.

8 ^aDraw ¹nigh to God, and he will draw ¹nigh to you. ^bCleanse your hands, ye sinners; and ^cpurify your hearts, ye double minded.

11 ^aSpeak not evil one of another, brethren. He that speaketh evil of his brother, ^band judgeth his brother, speaketh evil of the law, and judgeth the law: but if thou judge the law, thou art not a doer of the law, but a judge.

The Value of Patience and Prayer

4:7-10. Therefore: The exhortations that follow logically result from the conditions in verses 1-6. Resist the devil: Do not submit to, fear, or flee from Satan, but stand against him (1 Pet. 5:8-10). Satan cannot lead into sin against one's will. Draw nigh: God will not be unmoved; His welcoming response is always near (cf. Deut. 4:7; Lam. 3:57; Luke 15:20). Hands and hearts: The cleansing of one's life must involve both outward deeds and inner thoughts (cf. Ps. 24:3, 4).

4:13, 14. This one is a fool, for he thinks he knows something that he doesn't. He presumes he has the resources to control his destiny (cf. Prov. 27:1; Luke 12:13-21).

4:15. This, or that: This verse teaches that God does have something for Christians to do and that they should plan accordingly. James condemns only elaborate planning that omits God (cf. Prov. 16:9).

4:17. To do good here requires including God in one's plans. Omitting God is not merely bad planning; it is sin.

5:1-6. Ye rich men: James's common address, "brethren," is not found once in this section. By contrast, it occurs four times in verses 7-12. James is now addressing wealthy, unsaved Jews who have poor Jews working for them. They have mistreated the poor, so God's judgment will fall on them.

5:3. Ironically, they have stored up treasure for their last days (retirement), which God will use against them in the last days.

5:4. The Lord of sabaoth, meaning the Lord of Hosts (i.e., of Armies), describes the omnipotent, avenging character of the God who sees and hears this injustice.

5:7, 8. The coming of the Lord: Few doctrines concerning Jesus Christ are taught in James. His vicarious death and resurrection are omitted, yet Christ's return is cited to encourage patient endurance. Early and latter rain: Farmers in Palestine absolutely depended on two rainy seasons, late fall and mid-spring, for their crops.

5:12. Above all things: James is not saying that the pronouncement of oaths involves his greatest teaching in the book. But he connects it with verses 7-11 (possibly also vv. 1-6), as an important instruction concerning the suffering of affliction. He admonishes believers not to curse or invoke God's wrath on those who mistreat them.

5:14. Though God often heals through medicine, the use of oil here is mainly symbolic because (1) it is applied in the name of the Lord; (2) it is the Lord who will raise him up; and (3) Luke 10:34 uses a different Greek word to describe the medicinal anointing of an injured traveler.

5:15. The prayer of faith entails both the prayer of the sick person and the prayer of the elders who in faith meet the requirements of this passage. But it suggests much more, because this faith is effectual. Some sick have had little faith, yet have been healed (Acts 3:4-8); others, like Paul, have had great faith, yet have not been healed (2 Cor. 12:7-10). Further, those who possessed the gift of healing in the early church were at times unable to perform healing as they may have wished (cf. 2 Tim. 4:20). The Greek text might suggest this reading: "The prayer produced by that faith will heal." The prayer that results from true faith is effective. Elijah experienced this prayer of faith (vv. 17, 18). Elijah knew God's Word and will, and so persistently prayed (1 Kin. 18:36, 37, 42-46). Faith is people acting in accordance with God's known purpose (1 John 5:14). The prayer of faith does not include a gift of healing. It does not exert extraordinary spiritual strength (Acts 3:12); otherwise all spiritual Christians would be healthy (but cf. 3 John 2). Nor does it merely involve the ritual of verse 14. The prayer of faith discerns God's will and perseveres until it is accomplished. God's will, however, is not to heal in every case, and true faith can discern and accept that (Rom. 8:26, 27).

5:19, 20. Any of you: Since James is addressing Christian readers, the errors he mentions may be any of those discussed throughout this epistle. Convert does not here mean to save, but to restore, as in Luke 22:32. Death is the physical death by which God sometimes punishes His disobedient people (Acts 5:5-10; 1 Cor. 11:30; 1 John 5:16).

HEALING

5:14, 15. One of the Old Testament names of God is Yahweh-Rapha, meaning "The Lord That Heals You" (Ex. 15:26). Illustration: The healing power of God is evidenced in a number of instances in Scripture. God heals by preserving health (Deut. 8:4), and advising good nutritional habits (Ex. 15:26; Lev. 11) and a healthful life-style (Lev. 12-14); and through the application of medical treatment (5:14), forgiveness of disease-causing sin (Num. 12:13), and the prayer of faith (5:15). Application: Although God does not always choose to heal, He sometimes does. When a Christian is sick, he should confess his known sins, and God may heal him if the sickness is caused by sin. He may also be led to ask his elders to anoint him with oil and pray for his healing. Some diseases experienced by Christians today could be prevented by trusting God as Yahweh-Rapha, and allowing Him to deal with those things in their lives causing stress, anger, and worry. (First Reference, Ex. 15:26; Primary Reference, James 5:14-16; cf. Matt. 19:14.)

PETER

Nothing gives evidence of Peter's "rock-like" character as does this epistle. The boldness introduced on the Day of Pentecost (cf. Acts 2:14 ff.) continues, although, for a time it may have been eclipsed by the brilliant ministry of the apostle Paul.

Historical Setting. The historical setting for 1 Peter is outside of the background of the Book of Acts, early in the period between the close of Acts and John's exile on the Island of Patmos. The author writes to persecuted Christians (cf. 1:6; 2:12, 15; 4:12, 14-16; 5:8, 9), and the identification of the persecutions involved is crucial to the historical setting of the epistle. Three periods of persecution are suggested: (1) under Nero (c. A.D. 65); (2) under Domitian (c. 90-95); and (3) under Trajan (early in the second century). The last two are preferred by those who reject Petrine authorship of the epistle. If Peter is the author, then the only persecutions that could be in view are those under Nero. To determine precisely which persecutions are in view is difficult because the surviving records come from those who were persecuted, and it was unusual for the record of any persecution to survive. Christians were savagely treated in Rome, and this policy was probably reflected throughout the empire. Nothing in the epistle prohibits the hypothesis that Peter may have been anticipating an extension of the persecutions he knew to exist in Rome. Further, the persecutions in 1 Peter are probably not governmental in nature. In the first part of the epistle (1:6, 7; 3:13-17), the sufferings anticipated are general, but in the latter part (4:12ff.) it seems as if these will grow more fierce. There is much to be said for the view that the sufferings are not the martyrdoms under Nero, Domitian, or Trajan, but rather are the reproaches that fall on Christians because they were considered odious in the eyes of their neighbors. The defense of 3:15 is equally well understood as being either a needed Christian testimony or a needed legal defense. The "fiery trial" of 4:12 may indicate some form of incendiarism, which would be strikingly parallel to the Neronian persecutions, or it may be understood metaphorically to refer to any trial that has the effect of a refining fire on the believer's life. While there is no indisputable conclusion, at least nothing in the epistle prevents understanding the references to persecution as being the Neronian persecutions which took place in the lifetime of Peter.

Authorship. In spite of the epistle's claim to have been written by "Peter, an apostle of Jesus Christ" (1:1), the critics object to Petrine authorship on three grounds: (1) its language and polished style, which they consider to be above the capability of a Galilean fisherman whose native tongue was Aramaic (cf. Matt. 26:73; Acts 4:13); (2) the historical situation underlying the epistle; (3) its doctrinal affinities with the Pauline epistles, especially Romans and Ephesians. Some of the critics suggest that 1 Peter is a pseudonymous letter which, they feel, accounts for its excellent literary style and use of Pauline material. The most popular candidates for this pseudonymous author are Silvanus (but he identifies himself as the epistle's amanuensis in 5:12) or some unknown

Roman teacher. Other critics feel that 1 Peter is simply an anonymous letter that came to be attributed to Peter. The alternate theories for Petrine authorship create more problems than they solve. The epistle gives a true reflection of the apostle's experience with Jesus Christ. He did believe, was restored, and made a lasting contribution to the doctrine of the Christian church (cf. John 21). This epistle reflects confirmatory and supplementary agreement with the apostle Paul, which one would expect since they served the same Lord and were inspired by the same Holy Spirit.

^c [John 3:3, 5] ^d 1 Cor. 15:20; 1 Pet. 3:21 ¹ living

1:1. Peter (Gr. Petros) is the Greek form of the Aramaic name Cephas ("Rock") which was given to Peter at his call to discipleship by the Lord Himself (cf. John 1:42) and is the name by which he is usually designated in the New Testament. The addressees are described as strangers (Gr. parepidēmois), sojourners in a strange place, and scattered (Gr. diasporas), the dispersion. Throughout Pontus, and so on, is in the area now known as Asia Minor.

1:2. Elect ones who are chosen of God to salvation according to the foreknowledge of God the Father: Foreknowledge is not simple prescience or advance knowledge. It is God's determination in eternity past to bring certain ones into a special relationship with Himself. The Spirit sets apart for salvation from destruction those whom God has foreknown. Sprinkling is an allusion to Exodus 24:1-11 in which the blood was sprinkled on the altar as a symbol of the people's obedience and also on the people as a symbol of Jehovah's acceptance.

1:3—2:10. The Christian's destiny: salvation. Salvation means "deliverance." Peter's view of salvation is ultimate salvation, that is, when the believer will be rescued from this world into the presence of God.

1:3-12. The plan of salvation: Peter does not look at time from a Western perspective. The Hebrews regarded the present as so fleeting that in their language they have essentially only two tenses: past and future.

1:3-5. The portrayal of salvation looks to the future. The author of salvation is portrayed as the blessed God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. The work of salvation (vv. 3-5) is described as to its effect. Hath begotten us again refers to a new stage of life that begins at salvation. This lively hope has no element of uncertainty, for it is guaranteed by Jesus' resurrection from the dead. The believer's inheritance is described as incorruptible (Gr. aphtharton), imperishable or indestructible, and undefiled (i.e., morally untainted). That fadeth not away (Gr. amaranton) means it is not subject to the ravages of time. Further it is reserved (Gr. tetērēmenēn, perfect tense), that is, it has been preserved in the past and still is in heaven. Kept is a present passive participle—we are secure because we are continually guarded by God, who never relaxes His vigil. Salvation here refers to final salvation, that is, deliverance from the presence of sin and into the presence of God.

13 Wherefore ¹gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and ²hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ;

1:6-9. The problem of salvation looks to the present. Earthly trials constitute a problem of our salvation, but they are only for a season, or temporary. Manifold temptations means diversified trials. True faith cannot be destroyed though God is in the process of refining faith through our trials.

1:10, 11. The prophecy of salvation looks to the past. This section is most important, for it reveals that salvation was the object of prophecy and reveals how much the Old Testament prophets knew of Christ. The prophets, that is, the Old Testament prophets searched diligently: This emphasizes the study involved in their search. They wanted to know when the Messiah was coming and what would be the circumstances of His coming. The Spirit of Christ, that is, the Holy Spirit (cf. Rom. 8:9). Which was in them indicates the prophets were indwelt by the Spirit.

1:12. Angels, who are not themselves objects of redemption, desire to look into (lit., "desire to stoop to look into"): This is the same word used of Peter at the empty tomb of God (cf. Luke 24:12).

1:13-25. The products of salvation: hope, holiness, reverence, and love.

1:13. The exhortation to set one's hope involves an inward resolution. Gird up the loins of your mind: The imagery is that of personal discipline and outward conduct. Be sober (Gr. nēphontes): Be free of every sort of mental and spiritual intoxication. The revelation of Jesus Christ is the Second Advent when Jesus returns to earth to set up His kingdom.

1:17-20. The exhortation to reverence (or, godly fear): The basis for the exhortation is our relationship to the Father. The motivation for living our lives in reverence is doctrinal, forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things. The ones who are exhorted to live their lives in reverence (cf. v. 17) are the ones who are exhorted to be holy (cf. vv. 14-16). They are redeemed (Gr. elutrothēte, i.e., "bought back from sin"). Vain (Gr. mataias): useless, worthless. The price paid for their redemption was the precious blood, which was essential: (1) sacrificially, as a lamb without blemish and without spot: He was perfect; (2) eternally, who verily was foreordained: it was the Father's plan and idea before the foundation of the world, that is, in eternity past; and (3) historically, but was manifest in these last times: a reference to Jesus' incarnation.

21 Who by him do believe in God, ^athat raised him up from the dead, and ^bgave him glory; that your faith and hope might be in God.

The Word of the Lord Endures Forever

22 Seeing ye ^ahave purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto ¹unfeigned ^blove of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently:

An Holy Priesthood

4 To whom coming, ^adisallowed¹ indeed of men, but chosen of God, and precious,

5 Ye also, as ¹lively stones, ²are built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ.

6 Wherefore also it is contained in the scripture, ^aBehold, I lay in Sion a chief corner stone, ¹elect, precious: and he that believeth on him shall not be ²confounded.

7 Unto you therefore which believe he is precious: but unto them which be disobedient, ^athe stone which the builders ¹disallowed, the same is made the ²head of the corner,

8 ^aAnd a stone of stumbling, and a rock of offence, ^beven to them which stumble ¹at the word, being disobedient: ^cwhereunto also they were appointed.

9 But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, ¹a peculiar people; that ye should ²shew forth the praises of him who hath called you out of ^adarkness into his marvellous light:

1:23. Being born again (lit., “having been born again”) refers to all believers having been regenerated by the Holy Spirit through the Word of God, which communicates His offer of salvation to mankind. Thus, our salvation rests, from the human perspective, upon our willing reception of that offer.

2:4-8. Are built up is the main verb in this section. The choice of the word shows that the building is not haphazard, but is according to an intelligent plan brought to reality by a Master Craftsman, which sets forth the fact of our integration into the body of Christ (v. 5). The overall design is a spiritual house, which describes the nature of the body of Christ, that is, a house in which God dwells. The material used to build the house is figuratively presented as lively [living] stones. Christ is also described as a living stone (lit., “a worked stone” or “a precious stone that is living”). Disallowed by Israel but acceptable (Gr. eklekton entimon, lit., “elect and precious”) to God.

2:9, 10. The priesthood of the believer and his unique relationship to God are described by the terms a chosen generation ... a royal priesthood ... an holy nation. Thus, the New Testament church stands in a unique relationship to God as did Old Testament Israel.

REDEMPTION

1:18, 19. The word redeem means “to purchase.” When Christ died for our sins, He paid the price that satisfied the demands of God’s holiness. The price of redemption was the blood of Christ (1 Pet. 1:18, 19). Illustration: In explaining redemption to the Galatians, Paul used three different words that were applied to purchasing servants at the ancient slave markets. The first, agorazō, meaning “to purchase in the market,” is used to explain how Christ paid the redemption price of His blood, which was sufficient to purchase every one “sold under sin” (Gal. 3:10; 2 Pet. 2:1). Ekagorazō, meaning “to purchase and take home,” emphasizes that Christians have been purchased out of the marketplace and are no longer for sale (Gal. 3:13). The third word, lutroō, meaning “to purchase and give freedom,” emphasizes the liberty that belongs to a soul redeemed by God (Gal. 4:5). Application: The Christian is encouraged to “stand fast” in that liberty (Gal. 5:1). (First Reference, Gen. 3:21; Primary Reference, 1 Pet. 1:18; cf. Rom. 5:8.)

10 ^aWhich in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God: which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy.

11 Dearly beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts, ^awhich war against the soul;

12 ^aHaving your ¹conversation ²honest among the Gentiles: that, whereas they speak against you as evildoers, ^bthey may by your good works, which they shall behold, glorify God in the day of visitation.

Submission to Rulers

13 ^aSubmit yourselves to every ¹ordinance of man for the Lord's sake: whether it be to the king, as supreme;

14 Or unto governors, as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evildoers, and for the praise of them that do well.

Subjection in Marriage

3 Likewise, ^aye wives, be in subjection to your own husbands; that, if any obey not the word, ^bthey also may without ¹the word ^cbe won by the ²conversation of the wives;

2 ^aWhile they behold your chaste ¹conversation coupled with fear.

3:3 ^aIs. 3:18; 1 Tim. 2:9 ¹arranging ²fine apparel
3:4 ^aRom. 2:29 ¹gentle ²precious

3:1-6. Peter's teaching on a wife's submission to her husband is similar to Paul's in Ephesians 5:22-24. Disobedient or unsaved husbands are to be won over by the conversation [lit., "behavior"] of the wives. The woman is to emphasize her inner qualities, not just her outer appearance (v. 3). The references to adorning are not prohibitions against jewelry and dress, so much as they are a caution against merely beautifying the external, while neglecting the soul.

PRIESTHOOD OF BELIEVERS

2:9. Every believer has the privilege and responsibility of direct access to God. Illustration: In the Old Testament the family of Aaron was designated as a priesthood to God. In the New Testament that priesthood becomes the birthright of every Christian. Like their Old Testament counterparts, believer-priests have the privilege of access to God. Application: With privilege comes a twofold responsibility—sacrifice and intercessory prayer. The sacrifices of the believer are his body (Rom. 12:1, 2), his praise to God (Heb. 13:15), his substance (Rom. 12:13), and his service (Heb. 13:6). The Christian ought also to pray on behalf of others (Col. 4:12). (First Reference, Job 42:10; Primary Reference, 1 Pet. 2:9; cf. 1 Cor. 9:19.)

5 For after this manner in the old time the holy women also, who trusted in God, adorned themselves, being in subjection unto their own husbands:

6 Even as Sara obeyed Abraham, ^acalling him lord: whose daughters ye are, as long as ye do well, and are not afraid with any ¹amazement.

7 ^aLikewise, ye husbands, dwell with them ¹according to knowledge, giving honour unto the wife, ^bas unto the weaker vessel, and as being heirs together of the grace of life; ^cthat your prayers be not hindered.

17 For it is better, if the will of God be so, that ye suffer for well doing, than for evil doing.

18 For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but ¹quickened by the Spirit:

19 By which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison;

3:15. An answer (Gr. apologian, "a defense of one's beliefs"): The Christian faith is to be defended by a reasonable apologetic with meekness and fear.

3:16. A good conscience refers to a clear conscience, that is, one void of offense.

3:17. In the will of God we are sometimes called on to suffer for well-doing as a testimony to others.

3:18-22. That he might bring us to God means in order that Christ might bring us to, or give us access to, God. Since Christ has opened up the way to God there is no longer the need of a priesthood; rather, each individual believer is himself a priest. Christ's descent into Hades took place when he went and preached unto the spirits, which refers to those lost souls in hell who have rejected God. The immediate mention of Noah would indicate that these spirits be understood as the souls of those who heard and rejected Noah's preaching, since they were the largest group of mankind ever to experience the universal judgment of God at one time. This preaching was the announcement of His triumph on the Cross, which sealed the fate of these doomed souls.

3:21. Baptism doth also now save us does not mean that water baptism is essential to salvation. Since it cannot wash away the filth of the flesh, baptism shows the answer of a good conscience toward God. In other words, baptism is a conscious testimony to one's faith in the resurrection of Jesus Christ because it symbolizes our resurrection with Him.

7 But ^athe end of all things is at hand: be ye therefore sober, and watch unto prayer.

8 And above all things have fervent ¹charity among yourselves: for ^acharity¹ shall cover the multitude of sins.

ping for pastor in some forms of Protestant church government. A crown of glory is promised to faithful pastors. When the chief Shepherd shall appear: The rewards will be realized when Jesus returns for His church.

5:13. The church that is at Babylon may be a cryptic or symbolic name for Rome (cf. Rev. 17); or Peter may have actually been in Babylon, which had a large Jewish population. Marcus my son probably refers to John Mark whom Paul had disqualified (cf. Acts 15:36–41) but whom he later forgave (cf. 2 Tim. 4:11).

PETER

No book of the New Testament has been the object of more destructive criticism than 2 Peter. But after the battles have been waged, it remains as the anvil that has worn out many of the critics' hammers. By its sheer endurance 2 Peter demonstrates the truth of 1 Peter 1:25a, "The word of the Lord endureth for ever."

Historical Setting. Peter's second epistle was written within a year to a year-and-a-half after 1 Peter, just a short while before his martyrdom, which he anticipates in 1:14. This would date it between A.D. 64 and 67. Peter was writing to the same readers he addressed in his first epistle. Because he knew his death was near, Peter felt it necessary to remind his readers (3:1) of their original salvation (1:1-4), and the need to be continually involved in the growth cycle (1:5-7), that they may escape the false teachers about to descend on them (ch. 2). Otherwise, the false teachers may deceive them; they will become like a dog returning to its vomit, or a pig that having washed itself returns to wallow in its mud hole (2:22).

Peter also wanted to remind his readers of the certain coming of the Lord, which the false teachers denied (3:4). Instead of honest doubts, they exhibit a willful ignorance (3:5). The false teachers are unaware that God keeps time by a different clock—with Him one day is like a thousand years, and a thousand years is like one day. In Peter's time not even one "day" had elapsed since Jesus had promised to come again; in our time, not quite two "days" have passed (3:8). Nor do the false teachers realize that the Lord is involved in a different program. He has not forgotten His promise to return, but is currently bringing to repentance every person who will comprise the body of Christ. When that last person is saved, Jesus will return (3:9).

Second Peter contains numerous autobiographical references. Peter mentions his impending martyrdom, revealed to Him by the Lord Jesus (1:13, 14; cf. John 21:18, 19), and that he was an eyewitness to Jesus' transfiguration (1:16-18; cf. Matt. 17:1-13). He indicates that this is his second epistle, thus confirming the existence of the first epistle (3:1). He refers to Paul and to his writings (or "other scriptures," 3:15, 16). In addition, there is a great similarity between the second chapter of this epistle and the epistle of Jude. Peter speaks of the coming of false teachers in the future tense (2:1), whereas Jude speaks of them as being present (Jude 3, 4).

Second Peter is graphically written with many outstanding features. It is a classic for showing that to escape depravity you must become involved in the growth cycle (1:5-7), so you will also be fruitful in your Christian life, demonstrate the certainty of your calling and election, and have an abundant entrance into heaven (1:8-11). The letter also contains a superb passage explaining the infallible inspiration of Scripture (1:20, 21), and vividly describes the destruction of the present heavens and earth, telling the believer what he may ultimately expect (3:11-13). Second Peter also demonstrates the equality of Paul's epistles to "other scriptures" (3:15, 16).

Authorship. Many who deny the Petrine authorship of 1 Peter are willing to affirm the Petrine authorship of 2 Peter. Whereas 1 Peter has a polished literary style, 2 Peter is rough and graphic. In Acts 4:13 the religious leaders observe that Peter and John “were unlearned and ignorant men.” These leaders were not, however, judging Peter or John’s intelligence or writing ability, but merely acknowledged that they lacked the formal education of the rabbinical schools. In Peter’s day, it was not unusual for a common man like Peter to be trilingual, knowing Aramaic (his native language), Greek (the language of culture), and Latin (the language of government). Linguistically, Peter could have written 2 Peter as well as 1 Peter, and the polished style of that epistle could reflect the fact that Silvanus was Peter’s secretary during its writing (1 Pet. 5:12). While the two epistles differ in vocabulary and literary style, such discrepancies are also easily explained by their varied subject matter and purposes. No writer would use the same literary style and vocabulary for both a formal treatise and an informal letter. Ample resemblances between the two epistles and Peter’s sermons recorded by Luke in Acts indicate a common source for all three. Also the author of this epistle identifies himself as “Simon Peter” (1:1), using the Aramaic form Sumeon rather than the more familiar Greek Simon, which occurs in only one other place, Acts 15:14: Sumeon is the name the apostle James calls Peter. This argues against any theory of authorship other than that of Simon Peter because a forger would doubtless have spelled the name as in 1 Peter.

to spiritual maturity. Add to your faith indicates the areas of growth that follow after salvation. Virtue is moral excellence. Knowledge is spiritual truth. Temperance is self-control. Patience is endurance. Godliness is God-likeness. Brotherly kindness (Gr. philadelphian) is brotherly love. Charity (Gr. agapēn) is volitional love. This process is a lifelong cycle of spiritual growth for all believers.

1:10, 11. Ye shall never fall: The author is not referring to falling from salvation but to failure in Christian living. The everlasting kingdom refers to the eternal realm of God where Jesus is the undisputed Ruler. It is synonymous with heaven. Thus, the one who acquires the virtues of verses 5–7 will have a rich inheritance in heaven.

1:14, 15. Shortly I must put off this my tabernacle refers to Peter's impending death, which the Lord had predicted in John 21:18, 19. Thus, Peter urges his readers to remember his testimony after he has died.

1:16–18. Peter claims to have been one of the eyewitnesses of his majesty at the transfiguration of Christ, when He was revealed to Peter, James, and John in all of His glory (cf. Matt. 17:1–8).

TRANSFIGURATION OF CHRIST

1:16. In Matthew 17 Jesus was temporarily glorified in the presence of three disciples. This was a foreshadowing of Christ's coming in power and glory to establish His kingdom. The presence of Moses and Elijah on the mountain represented all those who enter the kingdom by death or translation. The declaration of the Father reinforces Christ's dominion over His kingdom. Application: Since Christians live expectantly looking forward to the return of Christ, they ought to give Him first place in their lives today, just as He will have in the kingdom. (First Reference, Matt. 17:1–9; Primary Reference, 2 Pet. 1:16; cf. Heb. 9:12.)

HOLY SPIRIT IN INSPIRATION

1:21. The Scriptures were written by holy men of God (about 40 in all) "as they were moved by the Holy Spirit." While in no way denying the personalities of the human writers or rejecting the distinctiveness of their particular styles, the Holy Spirit controlled the process of bringing things to the writers' memories (John 16:13) and ensuring what they recorded was the very Word of God. (See "Inspiration," 2 Tim. 3:16.) Illustration: Jeremiah once became so frustrated that he wanted to quit, but God's Spirit compelled him to go on (Jer. 20:9). Likewise, Jonah at first refused to take God's message to Nineveh, but later obeyed God's second call (Jon. 3:1). Application: As Christians read the Bible, they can be confident that it is the very Word of God. (First Reference, Judg. 2:1; Primary Reference, 2 Pet. 1:21; cf. John 10:35.)

Destruction for False Teachers

2 But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be ^afalse teachers among you, who ¹privily shall bring in ²damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction.

2 And many shall follow their ¹pernicious ways; by reason of whom the way of truth shall be ²evil spoken of.

1:19-21. A more sure word of prophecy refers to the infallibility of Scripture as the greatest and clearest revelation of God to man. "Prophecy" may be used here as a general term for divine revelation. Private interpretation means "origination." Thus, true revelation does not originate by the will of man. It comes from God Himself through holy men who were godly human instruments of recording God's message. Moved by the Holy Ghost describes the process of revelation and inspiration. "Moved" means to be "carried along as a sailboat in the wind." Thus, human beings were so moved by the Holy Spirit that what they wrote was God's inerrant Word.

2:1-3. The opposite of true revelation is the message of false prophets and false teachers who deceive God's flock and bring in damnable heresies. These heresies (unorthodox teachings) include an open denial of Christ Himself. Denying the Lord that bought them indicates that Christ's atonement potentially extends to all men, including these false teachers who reject Him. Therefore, they will experience destruction because they themselves will be deceived by their own teaching and continue to reject the way of truth.

2:3-9. Future universal judgment of this world is illustrated by the reference to the flood (Gr. kataklysmos, "cataclysm") of Noah's day which came upon the old world, that is, the antediluvian world. The universal extent of the Flood is assumed by the author as an illustration of coming universal judgment at the end of this age. The deliverance of Lot from Sodom and Gomorrha is used to illustrate the fact that God will deliver His own from the coming universal judgment.

2:10-17. False teachers are polemically described as cursed children, literally, "children of a curse"; wells without water, unable to satisfy the spiritual thirst of men; and clouds that are blown about by every wind of doctrine (see Jude 12).

14 Having eyes full of adultery, and that cannot cease from sin; ¹beguiling unstable souls: ^aan heart they have ²exercised with covetous practices; cursed children:

15 Which have forsaken the right way, and are gone astray, following the way of ^aBalaam the son of ¹Bosor, who loved the wages of unrighteousness;

16 But was rebuked for his iniquity: the dumb ¹ass speaking with man's voice ²forbad the madness of the prophet.

17 ^aThese are wells without water, clouds that are carried with a tempest; to whom the ¹mist of darkness is reserved for ever.

18 For when they speak great swelling words of ¹vanity, they allure through the lusts of the flesh, through much ²wantonness, those that were ³clean escaped from them who live in error.

19 While they promise them liberty, they themselves are the servants of corruption: ^afor of whom a man is overcome, of the same is he brought ¹in bondage.

20 For if after they ^ahave escaped the pollutions of the world through the knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, they are ^bagain entangled therein, and overcome, the latter end is worse with them than the beginning.

21 For ^ait had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than, after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them.

Unwilling for Any to Perish

3 This second epistle, beloved, I now write unto you; in both which ^aI stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance:

2 That ye may be mindful of the words ^awhich were spoken before by the holy prophets, ^band of the commandment of us the apostles of the Lord and Saviour:

3 Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days ¹scoffers, ^awalking ²after their own lusts,

4 And saying, Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers ¹fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the ^acreation.

5 For this they willingly ¹are ignorant of, that ^aby the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth ^bstanding out of the water and in the water:

6 ^aWhereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished:

7 But ^athe heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto ^bfire ¹against the day of judgment and ²perdition of ungodly men.

8 But, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and ^aa thousand years as one day.

9 ^aThe Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but ^bis longsuffering to us-ward, ^cnot willing that any should perish, but ^athat all should come to repentance.

2:18-22. False teachers are further called servants of corruption because, despite their profession of salvation, they have become entangled in the world and overcome by it. Therefore, their latter end is worse than their beginning profession, because they have now embarked on a course of action that denies their profession of Christ. The illustrations of the dog and the sow vividly portray their folly.

3:1, 2. Peter clearly places the holy prophets of the Old Testament on the same level of inspiration and authority as the apostles of Christ in the New Testament, emphasizing the inspiration of all Scripture.

3:3-7. Peter further warns that in the last days of the church age, scoffers (lit., “mockers”) will ridicule the promise of Christ’s second coming. He further states that arguments based on supposedly unchanging processes since creation fail to recall the severity of the flood of water upon the earth. Just as God once destroyed the world by water, so it is now reserved unto fire until the day of judgment. See the description of fiery judgments in Revelation 17—19.

3:9. God is not willing that any should perish clearly expresses desire for the salvation of all who will trust in Him. Salvation is equated here with repentance.

10 But ^athe day of the Lord will come as a ¹thief in the night; in the which ^bthe heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up.

11 Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be ^ain all holy ¹conversation and godliness, 12 ^aLooking for and ¹hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall ^bbe dissolved, and the elements shall ^cmelt with fervent heat?

13 Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for ^anew heavens and a ^bnew earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.

14 Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent ^athat ye may be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless.

15 And ¹account that ^athe long-suffering of our Lord is salvation; even as our beloved brother Paul also according to the wisdom given unto him hath written unto you;

16 As also in all his ^aepistles, speaking in them of these things; in which are some things hard to be understood, which they that are ¹unlearned and unstable ²wrest, as they do also the ^bother scriptures, unto their own destruction.

17 Ye therefore, beloved, ^aseeing ye know these things ¹before, ^bbe-ware lest ye also, being led away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own steadfastness.

18 ^aBut grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. ^bTo him be glory both now and for ever. Amen.

3:18 ^a Eph. 4:15 ^b Rom. 11:36; 2 Tim. 4:18; Rev. 1:6

3:10-13. The day of the Lord here refers to the return of Christ in judgment, not the Rapture, since this day results in final apocalyptic judgment. The heavens that shall pass away with a great noise are the atmospheric heavens. The elements shall melt with fervent heat certainly could refer to a nuclear holocaust. Thus, Peter urges his readers to look beyond this present world to the new heavens and a new earth characterized by righteousness.

3:14-18. Peter's reference to our beloved brother Paul indicates that the rift between Peter and Paul was not permanent (cf. Gal. 2:14). Peter further refers to Paul's epistles in relation to the other scriptures by equating them with all other Scripture, including the Old Testament.

JOHN

Authorship. Study of the three epistles of John suggests that all came from the same hand. Evidence points to John the son of Zebedee (Mark 1:19) as the writer, who also penned the gospel bearing his name. John's gospel seeks to bring the reader to faith (John 20:31); 1 John seeks to confirm the reader in that faith (5:13). Modern theories arguing for multiple authorship of the Johannine letters fail to carry convincing weight, though the author nowhere gives his name, and his identity must be inferred from internal and external evidence.

Date. Many conservative authorities place John's three letters at the end of the first century A.D. This is in keeping with an ancient tradition that John lived to a very old age and exercised pastoral care over a number of churches in Asia Minor. While little solid evidence contradicts this view, there is also little evidence for a precise date of composition. Any time after the A.D. sixties would seem plausible.

Place of Writing. Reliable tradition places John at Ephesus in the later years of his life. As 1 John has no formal greeting or conclusion, it may have been a circular letter for the building up of various churches in the vicinity of Ephesus. Second and 3 John were likely written from the same location, assuming that "the elder" (2 John 1; 3 John 1) is also the author of 1 John.

Purpose. John writes "that ye may know that ye have eternal life" (5:13). In a sense he seeks, therefore, merely to strengthen the faith of his readers. Yet he writes also to combat a specific threat to his readers' faith: gnosticism. This was a deviant form of Christianity. Its adherents' particular views varied, but they tended to value knowledge as the means of salvation (rather than the Cross), to assert that physical matter was evil, and to teach that the Son of God could not, therefore, have come in the flesh. These and other aberrant teachings seem to be the target of many of John's avowals.

Content. First John is distinctive in its emphasis on assurance of salvation. This stress is seen by the numerous references to what the believer knows: 2:3, 5, 29; 3:14, 16, 19, 24; 4:13, 16; 5:15, 18–20. Further, John often speaks in terms of polarities or contrasting elements: light and darkness, love and hate, God's Spirit and the spirit of Antichrist, God's children and the children of the Devil.

Walk in the Light

5 ^aThis then is the message which we have heard of him, and declare unto you, that ^bGod is light, and in him is no darkness at all.

6 ^aIf we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and ¹do not the truth:

7 But if we ^awalk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and ^bthe blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.

1:7 ^aIs. 2:5 ^b[1 Cor. 6:11]

1:1. John here and below alludes to his eyewitness status. That of which he speaks, he has witnessed personally. His witness pertains to the Word of life, which is the proclamation concerning the One in whom was life (John 1:4).

1:2. Was manifested means "appeared." The life John and others saw (cf. John 14:6) is what 1 John seeks to convey to its readers. John says this life, which is summed up and was shown forth in Jesus Christ, was with the Father; this statement echoes John 1:1 and points to Christ's preexistence, His eternal presence and oneness with God the Father.

1:3. John seeks to establish, or perhaps to broaden, the fellowship between himself and his readers. "Fellowship" here means "a close association or relationship"; in Christian terms this means mutual acceptance of and submission to the verities of Christian faith. It means sharing in personal knowledge of and heartfelt obedience to God through Jesus Christ.

1:4. The major purpose of 1 John is stated in 5:13, but another purpose is stated here: for the recipients, and no doubt John as well, to enjoy and share in the deep sense of satisfaction and purpose that knowing Christ and walking with Him brings.

1:5. Again John implies his eyewitness status, having heard of him, that is, Jesus. John passes on to the church teaching he first received from Jesus. Light and darkness here have ethical overtones. John is saying that God is perfect and good; there is thus no sin or evil in Him. This will have implications for followers of this God in the following verses.

1:6. Walk in darkness means walking in sin. John may have had in mind people who claimed to be enjoying a close relationship with God, but whose lives were clearly characterized by sin. Such a state of affairs, John says boldly, is impossible; such persons are lying.

1:7. "God is light" (v. 5): To walk in this light, which is to live free from bondage to sin (cf. Rom. 6:18), is to make true communion between believers possible. Jesus' violent death on the cross, which is what blood signifies, is the initial antidote for and ultimate defense against sin's presence and power.

1:8. Others seem to have been claiming that they had no sin. Jesus had taught that those who owned 9 If we ^aconfess our sins, he is ^bfaithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to ^ccleanse us from all unrighteousness.

10 If we say that we have not sinned, we ^amake him a liar, and his word is not in us.

5 But ^awhoso keepeth his word, ^bin him verily is the love of God perfected: hereby know we that we are in him.

6 ^aHe that saith he abideth in him ^bbought himself also so to walk, even as he walked.

7 Brethren, I write no new commandment unto you, but an old commandment which ye had ^afrom the beginning. The old commandment is the word which ye have heard from the beginning.

8 Again, ^aa new commandment I write unto you, which thing is true in him and in you: ^bbecause the darkness is ¹past, and ^cthe true light now shineth.

2:8 ^aJohn 13:34; 15:12 ^bRom. 13:12; Eph. 5:8; 1 Thess. 5:4 ^c[John 1:9; 8:12; 12:35] ¹passing away up to their sin could find forgiveness, while those who were blind to their sin would be left mired in it (cf. John 9:41).

1:9. This is a restatement of verse 7. We ought not to deny our sins (v. 8), but rather to confess them before God. This opens the door for His forgiving and cleansing light to purify our hearts. Unrighteousness is another way of saying “sin.”

1:10. To deny one’s sinfulness (v. 8) or sins is not just to deceive oneself; it is to make God a liar by denying His Word. Both Old and New Testaments stress the universality of man’s sin (e.g., Job 4:17; Ps. 14:3; Is. 53:6; Rom. 3:10–18, 23).

2:1. My little children indicates John’s deep concern for his readers. In preceding verses he had been concerned with erroneous notions that some may have held and advocated; now he turns directly to his addressees. Advocate is a legal term for “one who intercedes for another.”

2:2. Propitiation is here an atoning sacrifice. Jesus bore in His body the punishment due us for our sin; in so doing He propitiated God, satisfied God’s just demand that sin be punished. Thus Jesus is both the advocate for sinners (v. 1) and the sacrifice for their sins.

2:3. John writes so that his readers may not sin (v. 1). Now he sets forth a characteristic of genuine knowledge of God: obedience to His commandments. This is a major teaching of Jesus. See the note on 2 John 6.

2:5. Perfected is in the perfect tense. John refers to the decisive and enduring effect of the indwelling love of God. But the test of knowing God’s love is keeping His Word.

2:6. Even as he walked refers to Jesus’ earthly days. While no one can or need duplicate Jesus’ atoning ministry, His disciples are called on to imitate His devotion to God and compassion for others. See John 13:15; 1 Peter 2:21.

2:7, 8. John’s commandment is both old and new. This commandment, as is clear below, is to love one another. Jesus called it “new” in John 13:34, though it appears in similar form in Leviticus 19:18. By late in John’s life it is no longer so new; yet in the sense that it continually transforms and renews the lives of Christians, it is and ever shall be new indeed.

SIMPLICITY OF GOD

1:5. Simplicity means that God is not complex, compounded, or divisible in His nature. Simplicity does not deny the three distinct persons of the Trinity. The three distinct persons all share in the same “essence” of God. Neither does this mean that it is easy to understand all that is to be known of God because (1) sin has a limiting effect upon human understanding, and (2) man’s understanding is finite, whereas God is infinite. Application: Jesus taught that one must approach God as a little child to be converted (Matt. 18:3). (First Reference, Gen. 1:1; Primary Reference, 1 John 1:5; cf. 1 Kin. 8:27.)

ADVOCACY OF CHRIST

2:1. The term advocate denotes a lawyer who represents his client before a court of law. When applied to the present ministry of Christ, it speaks of His work for sinning believers to restore them to fellowship. Christ’s work as an advocate is based on the sufficiency of His blood for all sin, past and present. Illustration: In the Old Testament, when David confessed his sin, he was forgiven and restored to a place of service. Application: Although the Christian has an Advocate with the Father, his goal in life ought to be overcoming sin (1 John 5:4), rather than merely confessing it. (First Reference, 1 John 2:1; Primary Reference, 1 John 2:1; cf. Heb. 7:25.)

9 ^aHe that saith he is in the light, and hateth his brother, is in darkness even until now.

10 ^aHe that loveth his brother abideth in the light, and ^bthere is ¹none occasion of stumbling in him.

¹anointing

2:9. Doctrinal truth about spiritual matters means nothing without compassion for others. For John, hateth seems to mean simply "fails to love."

2:10. He who truly loves (not "he that saith," v. 9) abideth in the light, that is, the presence of God. He does not stumble, nor does he cause others to stumble. John stresses actions, not mere words (cf. 3:18).

2:11. Walketh means "lives." He habitually spends his life in darkness, or sin. See 2 Corinthians 4:4 for the blinding effect of Satan and sin.

2:12-14. John addresses different groups and assures them of their steadfastness in the true faith, contrary to many of those with whom his letter must deal. Little children, fathers, young men, and so on, may refer to actual age groups. Or it may have reference to spiritual maturity or level of responsibility in the fellowship, for example, to new Christians being "children."

2:15. Love not the world is a command implying that action now in progress must cease: "Stop loving the world!" There is, of course, one sense in which Christians should love the world, since God Himself did and does (John 3:16). But in the sense of pledging personal loyalty and devotion of one's whole being and means, Christians are to "love" God first and foremost (Deut. 6:5; Mark 12:30).

2:16. World for John signifies the evil desire and sin so much a part of human existence.

2:18. In verse 17 John has stated that the present evil order of things is passing away. This leads to his affirmation that it is the last time. Antichrist appears in the whole New Testament only here and in verse 22, 4:3, and 2 John 2:7. He is the ultimate opponent of God, God's plans, and God's people. (See also 2 Thess. 2:1-12; Mark 13:14.) The presence of so much false teaching, John implies, reminds believers of the constant threat posed by evil to believers. Yet they need not fear; they need only be diligent and not slack.

2:19. Some in the church, but now departed, were never really part of it. Here is a clear distinction between those who merely appear to be Christians, based on outward affiliation, and those who really are, whom the Lord knows and claims as His own (1 Cor. 8:3; Gal. 4:9; 2 Tim. 2:19).

2:20. Unction means anointing. John refers to the

TEMPTATION

2:16. Though all people are tempted differently according to their individual weaknesses, temptations follow patterns. They appeal to three fundamental areas of life: (1) the lust of the flesh (physical desires); (2) the lust of the eyes (personal desires); and (3) the pride of life (self-interests).

Illustration: When Satan caused the fall of the race, he appealed to each of these areas of weakness (Gen. 3:6). He also appealed to them when he tempted Christ (Matt. 4:1-11), who defied Satan's temptations by relying on the authority of the Scriptures. Application: The Christian today should also depend on the Scriptures to defeat temptation. (First Reference, Gen. 3:1-6; Primary Reference, 1 John 2:15-17; cf. Rom. 5:12.)

indwelling presence of the Holy Spirit (cf. John 14-16.) Yet Scripture does not suggest that God's Spirit works in hearts apart from God's Word (e.g., James 1:18, 21). This unction, then, predisposes John's readers to recognize and respond to God's truth, but not to arrive at it independently of the biblical and apostolic Word. Had the readers been capable of knowing all things apart from written and spoken instruction, 1 John would not need to have been written.

2:22. Literally, the liar. He is the epitome of a lying deceiver who claims to represent Christianity (as John's opponents, probably Gnostics, were doing), but who accords Jesus Christ less than His full due as Savior and coequal partner with the Father. These should be sobering words for modern understandings of religion and Christianity which deny Christ His scriptural status by making Him less than fully divine.

2:23. Because God has chosen to reveal Himself definitively in Christ, it is not possible to know God personally and truly without fully acknowledging Christ in the fullness of His power and being.

2:24. John exhorts his readers to persevere in the face of false teaching and belief. The Greek text emphasizes the readers, in contrast to those who have gone out (v. 19): "You, therefore, let what you have heard from the beginning abide in you."

2:26. John makes it clear that much of his treatise has been called forth by opponents of orthodox teaching.

2:27. Ephesians 4:11-16 indicates that the Spirit often uses human instruments to fulfill His role of enabling believers to distinguish between truth and error. In any case it is the Word of God that furnishes the believer with knowledge, and which the Spirit then makes relevant and applicable in the believer's life. See Romans 10:17.

2:28. Wishing to please the Lord, and not be ashamed before him at his coming, ought to motivate believers to stand firm, to abide in him.

ANTICHRIST

2:22. The term antichrist refers to anyone usurping the place of Christ or opposing Christ. But the title of the Antichrist identifies a person who emerges during the Great Tribulation to lead Satan's strategy on earth. The term is used five times in the New Testament and only by John, although the Antichrist of the Great Tribulation is identified by many other names and titles in Scripture: "that Wicked" (2 Thess. 2:8); "the son of perdition" (2 Thess. 2:3); the willful king (Dan. 11:36). He is chiefly depicted in the Scriptures as an immensely powerful political leader. He apparently heads the revived Roman Empire, but will not be revealed until after the Rapture (2 Thess. 2:3). Illustration: In the past, overzealous teachers of prophecy have identified several principal world leaders with the Antichrist. Application: Christians should not only be aware of this tendency and avoid it, they should also recognize that the spirit of antichrist is already at work in this world. (First Reference, Ps. 5:6; Primary Reference, 1 John 2:22; cf. Rev. 13:11.)

ANOINTING OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

2:27. The law regarding the cleansing of lepers and the consecration of priests required an application of blood and oil to the right ear, thumb, and big toe of the one cleansed or consecrated (Lev. 8:30). Typologically, this twofold anointing stressed the need for salvation (blood) and the anointing of the Holy Spirit (oil), that the believer might hear the Word of God (ear), do the work of God (thumb), and walk in the way of God (toe). Illustration: The disciples, who were saved by the blood, were instructed to tarry in Jerusalem until they were given power from on high (Luke 24:49). Only then were they able to do the work of God as recorded in the Acts. Application: Just as David was anointed with oil, so the believer needs a fresh anointing for each task he undertakes for God. Christians should act on the anointing they have received from the Lord (1 John 2:27). (First Reference, Lev. 8:30; Primary Reference, 1 John 2:27; cf. Joel 2:28.)

2:29. The idea seems to be that he who practices what is right, being born of God (3:9), need not fear Christ's coming (v. 28). Spiritual rebirth is stressed in John. See 4:7; 5:1, 4, 18; also John 1:13; 3:3-8.

3:1. Bestowed is in the perfect tense, suggesting the enduring effect of the love God has given. Believers are children of God by virtue of being born of Him (2:29). Jesus stressed a connection between how the world related to God and how it would in turn relate to Christ's true followers (John 15:18). After God the phrase "And we are" should be added, according to many ancient manuscripts.

3:2. At Jesus' coming (2:28) we shall be somehow transformed into His likeness. This process has already begun in the believer's life (2 Cor. 3:18).

3:3. At Christ's coming His followers will be transformed, but in the meantime they need to be diligent in growth in holiness—he is pure, and it is the "pure in heart" who shall see God (Matt. 5:8).

3:4. John turns from stress on Christ's and Christian purity to the need for believers to abstain from sin. The verse means: "Everyone who sins is indulging in unlawful behavior; sin is in fact lawlessness."

3:5. He was manifested: Christ came to take away sin; this is another reason why Christians should not practice sin.

3:6. To abide in Christ is to be dead to sin (cf. Rom. 6). The one who habitually lives in sin has never been transformed by Christ's life-changing power and purity.

3:7, 8. There could well be a temptation to water down God's Word at this point. John resists such a move. Sin is of the Devil. Christ came to destroy the Devil's deeds. To do the Devil's deeds is to declare allegiance to him, not to Christ. Thus sin and being a Christian are mutually exclusive.

3:9. John is not teaching sinless perfection (see 1:8, 10; 2:2). He speaks here of habitual practice of known sinful acts. The true believer's actions will conform to the character of his true father, either God or Satan. The person born of God will reflect this in his behavior.

3:10. For John a mere "profession of faith" in Christ was insufficient if not accompanied by the outward marks of divine parentage. Further, he links love for other Christians closely with righteous living (see John 13:35).

3:12. See Genesis 4:8. Of that wicked one refers to a child of the Devil (v. 10). Cain killed Abel because their conflicting allegiances (Cain's to Satan, Abel's to God) were plain to see by their respective actions. John seems to be saying: "If even wicked Cain could see that a man's character is revealed ultimately, not in what he says he believes, but in what he does, should not Christians be able to see this as well?"

3:13. Jesus warned His followers that they would be despised (John 15:18-25).

14 We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. He that loveth not his brother abideth in death.

15 ^aWhosoever hateth his brother is a murderer: and ye know that ^bno murderer hath eternal life abiding in him.

16 ^aHereby perceive we the love of God, ^bbecause he laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren.

17 But ^awhoso hath this world's ¹good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his ²bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?

18 My little children, ^alet us not love in word, neither in tongue; but in deed and in truth.

3:14, 15. Death and life here symbolize unbelief and saving faith, respectively. A murderer (one whose heart is full of hate or even destructive apathy) can, of course, be forgiven of such sin—but one who is truly forgiven will no longer abide in his murderous nature.

3:16, 17. The standard for our love is God's love in Christ, who died for us. Love that observes need, and does not act to minister to it, is no love at all. Bowels of compassion in modern English would be "heart," proceeding from our inward core of awareness and action.

3:18. In tongue refers to mere talk.

3:19. Cain (v. 12) was "of that wicked one"; believers are of the truth. And hereby: John seems to be saying that assurance of salvation comes in part as one reaches out actively in caring for others (preceding verses).

3:20. In light of John's strict teaching above, he may have felt that some readers might begin to despair. He assures them that, although our feeble attempts to honor God may leave us feeling defeated inside, God is greater than our self-awareness (cf. 1 Cor. 4:4) and can justify us even when we would condemn ourselves. He sees not only our actions, which at times are thwarted or misguided, but also the motives and intentions behind them.

3:21, 22. If our heart condemn us not: We have confidence toward God if our lives are in line with the standard of Christian living set forth above. John is not saying that whether a person is right or wrong is simply a matter of how he subjectively feels about himself. That is why John has given so many indicators and commands for Christians to take note of and assess themselves by. And one of the great results of a life lived in purity before God is a life where there is effective prayer. Right living is an important part of successful praying.

3:23. John has already set forth the importance of true faith in Christ and true love for others. Now he combines the two.

3:24. Dwelleth in him: See Christ's words about "abiding" in John 15. He in him refers to Christ in the believer. The Spirit gives internal assurance to corroborate the external testimony of true faith, active love, and consistent obedience.

4:1. The Spirit gives assurance (3:24). But how do believers know it is God's Spirit, and not a lying one, who is assuring them? John acknowledges the presence of numerous spirits. Christians must be wary that they not be misled. The Greek grammar here may indicate that John is calling for a halt to a belief in spirits that was already in progress. This could have been a residual effect of those who had already left (2:19).

4:2. John's opponents may have claimed to follow Christ, but without accepting that the Son who came in flesh was also one with the Father. This position was held by many Gnostics. John says that the Spirit will enlighten true believers to confess that Christ did come in the flesh. This is a particular doctrinal test for a particular time. Jesus himself speaks of those who call Him "Lord" but are false followers (Matt. 7:21–23; Luke 6:46).

4:3. John attributes the work of the false prophets (v. 1) to the spirit of antichrist. See the note on 2:18.

4:4. Christ indwells believers; Satan is likewise the lord of his own followers. But Christ is greater than he who wreaks havoc in the world. Have overcome is in the perfect tense, stressing the abiding nature of their victory. Their strength lies in the fact that they are [born] of God.

4:5. They refers to all who are ruled by the spirit of antichrist. The world finds their teaching more appealing than the truth of God.

4:6. Those who acknowledge the truth of the apostolic (New Testament) witness to Christ will recognize and conform to the teaching John is presenting. Those who do not are animated by a common and unifying spirit of error. John warns his readers against this spirit by contrasting their false views of Christ with the views that he, a personal follower and witness of Christ, proclaims.

4:7. John returns to the theme of mutual love. Perhaps the false teaching he felt compelled to combat had contributed to suspicion and contention in the fellowship. In context, John is not saying that everyone who loves is somehow a Christian, whether they trust in Christ or not. He makes it clear elsewhere that true knowledge of God entails right belief about Christ, as well as right response to God, including love of others. Mere human love apart from Christ's redeeming presence and motivation falls short of love in its fullest dimension as a human response to God's perfect and infinite compassion (cf. 1 Cor. 13).

4:8. John has also recorded that "God is light" (1:5) and "Spirit" (John 4:24). Love is one of many attributes of God and is to be understood in relation to the others, such as holiness and justice.

4:9. To grasp God's love aright, one must look to how God has demonstrated it. Here John is in total harmony with Paul (Rom. 5:8).

4:10. No human love is the standard for understanding God's great compassion, but God's own action on man's behalf. For propitiation, see the note on 2:2.

4:11-13. God's character, through His Spirit, is to shape and progressively dominate the character of the believer. The Spirit of God imparts the will to love.

4:15. This helps provide the context for rightly understanding verse 7. Trust in Christ as the incarnate Son of God makes genuine, God-wrought love possible.

4:16. John, like Paul (1 Cor. 13:13), stresses the supremacy of love as a characteristic of God and therefore as a dominant characteristic of the true believer.

NATURE OF GOD

4:8. The nature of God is His "essence" or His "substance." God's nature includes all that He is that makes Him uniquely God. Any complete definition of God's nature should include the following seven aspects: Spirit, person, life, self-existence, unchangeableness, infinitude, and unity. (See John 4:24 for a definition of God.) Without these things, God would not be God. Illustration: Because God is so difficult to comprehend, Jesus became a Man revealing the essence of the Father and proclaiming truth concerning God (John 1:14, 18). As we read the gospel accounts of the ministry of Christ, it becomes easier for us to understand what God is like. Application: The first commandment of the law requires that we love and worship God as He truly is, implying we should study the nature of God (Ex. 20:3; Matt. 22:37, 38). (First Reference, Gen. 1:2; Primary Reference, 1 John 4:8; cf. John 4:24.)

the day of judgment: because as he is, so are we in this world.

18 There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear: because fear ¹hath torment. He that feareth is not made perfect in love.

19 ^aWe love him, because he first loved us.

20 ^aIf a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar: for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God ^bwhom he hath not seen?

21 And ^athis commandment have we from him, That he who loveth God love his brother also.

overcometh the world: and this is the victory that ^bovercometh the world, even our faith.

5 Who is he that overcometh the world, but ^ahe that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?

6 This is he that came ^aby water and blood, even Jesus Christ; not by water only, but by water and blood. ^bAnd it is the Spirit that beareth witness, because the Spirit is truth.

7 For there are three that bear ¹record in heaven, the Father, ^athe Word, and the Holy Ghost: ^band these three are one.

8 And there are three that bear witness in earth, ^athe Spirit, and the water, and the blood: and these three agree ¹in one.

9 If we receive ^athe witness of men, the witness of God is greater: ^bfor this is the witness of God which he hath testified of his Son.

10 He that believeth on the Son of God ^ahath the witness in himself: he that believeth not God ^bhath made him a liar; because he believeth not the ¹record that God gave of his Son.

11 And this is the ¹record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son.

4:17. Herein points back to verse 16. By dwelling in love, and thus having God dwelling in him, the believer gains the priceless assurance that he need not fear the coming judgment. This is our assurance, if we love in this world as He does.

4:18. Fear hath torment: Abject fear of God is based on dread of punishment. But God's love for us renders such dread obsolete. Fear is still part of the Christian walk in the sense of profound reverence, the unwillingness to violate God's trust in us (see Acts 10:35; 13:26; 2 Cor. 7:1; Eph. 5:21; Phil. 2:12; 1 Pet. 1:17). Believers need not fear eternal rejection as a result of God's judgment (John 5:24), but this does not mean a Christian's approach to God is to be casual and flippant.

4:19-21. Our love, if it exists and mirrors God's love at all, is not our own but God's doing. The epitome of hypocrisy is the claim to love God while withholding love from others. For Jesus Himself commanded that he who loves God is to demonstrate this through loving others.

5:1. Him that begat means a father, in this case, God. That is begotten of him means a son, in this case, Jesus. John makes the general, illustrative point that one who cares for a father customarily cares also for that father's child. Thus the person who truly loves God will also give the Son His due. "That is begotten of him" could also refer to individual believers. In this case John would be stressing that he who loves God in truth will also love other children of God.

5:2, 3. Once again relationship to God and obedience to His commandments are inseparably linked. See the note on 2:3.

5:4. Whatsoever refers to every believer born of God.

5:5. There is conquering power through this confession because God is sovereign over the world, and only through the Son does man have access to and find favor with God.

5:6. Water and blood: This is the water of Jesus' baptism, the blood of His atoning death. The Spirit gives assurance that the biblical message about Jesus is true.

5:7, 8. Greek manuscripts are unanimous in showing that verse 7 should end with "record." (Literally it says: "There are three who bear witness.") Likewise, verse 8 should read simply: "The Spirit, the water, and the blood; and the three are in agreement." The longer versions of these verses made their way into the traditional printed Greek Testament (TR) and thus into the King James Version due to influence of the Latin Bible and only four late Greek manuscripts. The point of John's original version was that the witnesses of verse 6 comprise one unified testimony to the veracity of the gospel. This insight in turn paves the way for verse 9.

5:10. To deny the biblical witness of Christ is to reject God Himself.

12 ^aHe that hath the Son hath ¹life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not ¹life.

We Know God Hears Us

13 These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God; that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God.

14 And this is the confidence that we have in him, that, ^aif we ask any thing according to his will, he heareth us:

15 And if we know that he hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we ¹desired of him.

21 Little children, keep yourselves from idols. Amen.

5:13. John sums up the message of his epistle. Many authorities end the verse at the word life. Unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God is stressed in the original; eternal life is contingent on personal trust in Christ.

5:14, 15. Assurance of salvation (v. 13) leads to confidence in petition. Effectual prayer is according to his will.

5:16, 17. Brother means “fellow Christian.” Every Christian is liable to sin (1:8, 10; 2:1). Believers are to intercede for one another when stumbling occurs (see Gal. 6:1–2). Sin unto death: John may be thinking of the sins he has urged against throughout the epistle: refusal to accept Christ as God’s incarnate Son, habitual disobedience to God’s commands, and consistent failure to love others. These are marks of an unregenerate person; John is not commanding (though he is also not forbidding) that prayer be offered for such people. Sin not unto death: These would be sins that do not mark deliberate and persistent rebellion against God. These are the sins every Christian finds himself subject to and must struggle against. In themselves, unlike “sin unto death,” they do not constitute apostasy from biblical truth or failure to trust obediently in Christ. Forgiveness and reconciliation with God is, therefore, a possibility. Persistent prayer can make it a reality.

5:18. See 3:6, 9. Toucheth means “to lay hold of with intent to harm.” That wicked one is the Devil. Some Greek texts read, “but he that is begotten of God [Jesus] keep him [the believer].”

5:19, 20. A final note of assurance. Believers are in God, despite the majority of humanity lying in the power of Satan. Christ has come. He has imparted spiritual insight. Thus we know Him, because He has made Himself known, and are in Him, because He has claimed us. This is the true God: “This” can be translated “He,” meaning Jesus Christ. John concludes with a ringing affirmation of the full deity of the Son, a notable theme of John’s gospel.

5:21. Idols here may well have the sense of erroneous conceptions of God. John addressed such false notions throughout the letter. However fervent our love for others and our adherence to God’s commands, such human efforts will come to nothing apart from true understanding of God as revealed in Christ. To know Him as He is causes love and obedience to be the redeeming, worshipful responses to God that He intends them to be.

ASSURANCE

5:13. The Scriptures clearly teach that it is possible to know whether you are saved or unsaved. The assurance of the believer is not based on feeling, (though the Christian may “feel” saved), but on the principles of God’s Word. We can know we are saved because Christ is in our hearts (Col. 1:27; 1 John 5:12), because of the witness of the Word of God (v. 10, 11), because of answered prayer (John 14:14; 1 John 5:14, 15), because of our understanding of the Scriptures (v. 20), because we keep His commandments (2 Cor. 5:17; 1 John 5:18), because we love the brethren (3:14), and because we have the inner witness of the Holy Spirit (Rom. 8:16). Illustration: Paul claimed to have this inner confidence and was fully persuaded concerning the keeping power of God in salvation (2 Tim. 1:12). Application: Because of this assurance, the believer need not be ashamed of Christ, even when he finds himself in difficult circumstances (2 Tim. 1:12). (First Reference, Gen. 15:13; Primary Reference, 1 John 5; cf. John 10:28.)

Authorship. Although the author does not give his name, evidently the same hand that penned 1 John wrote 2 John as well. This conclusion follows from study of literary style, vocabulary, and basic outlook in each of the two letters. Ancient tradition also supports this conclusion. The tone of the letter suggests that the author knew himself to possess acknowledged spiritual authority. This would also be in keeping with the calling, responsibility, and ministry of John as implied by the fourth gospel and expressed in the pungent admonitions of 1 John.

Date. Second John is traditionally dated near the end of the first century A.D., when John would have been near the end of his life. Nothing in 2 John gives clear indication of a particular year or even decade of composition. A reasonable date is about the same time as 1 John, or any time in the final third of the first century. Many conservative authorities would be more specific and opt for a date in the A.D. nineties.

Place of Writing. The ancient church historian Eusebius records that the aged apostle John ministered in Asia Minor and died in the city of Ephesus. For the same reasons that 1 John may be linked with John's years in Asia Minor and Ephesus, 2 John may also be thought of as having its origin in that locale.

Recipients. Some believe that the "elect lady" (v. 1) was an individual acquaintance of John. John would then be penning these words to her and to her family. Others hold that the "elect lady" refers metaphorically to some particular local church. In this case John would be representing one local fellowship (v. 13) as he writes to another. The letter lends itself to being interpreted according to both understandings, and evidence is lacking to settle the question with certainty.

Message. John intends to visit his readers soon (v. 12). He takes pleasure in their spiritual progress thus far (v. 4), but feels that special words of admonition are necessary to assure continued progress (vv. 5-11).

Abide in the Doctrine of Christ

9 ^aWhosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son.

10 If there come any unto you, and bring ^anot this doctrine, receive him not into ¹your house, neither ¹bid him God speed:

13 ^aThe children of thy elect sister greet thee. Amen.

1. The elder is the aged apostle John, who according to ancient tradition lived into his nineties. Whom is plural. To love in the truth means (1) truly, really to love, and (2) to love in a fashion consonant with the Christian meaning of that word. The truth which John and others have known is a combination of factual knowledge regarding the Word of God and personal knowledge of Jesus Christ.

2. John loves his readers for the truth's sake or "because of the truth," which likely has reference to the personal presence of Christ (John 14:6). The cardinal fruit of the Spirit of Christ is love (Gal. 5:22).

3. Grace, mercy, and peace are not common words in John's writings. In this greeting he is likely reflecting common usage in Christian circles of the time and area. God and Jesus Christ are placed on virtually the same level here, since Son of the Father is a title that implies equality with the Father (John 5:18).

4. Of thy children means "some of your children," that is, some believers in the fellowship or family John is addressing. Walking is a Jewish idiom for "living." John is saying we should "live by the truth," or in accordance with God's revealed word and will.

5. See 1 John 2:7; 3:11. Emphasis on love is a hallmark of John's writings. In Luke, for instance, the noun or verb form of the word occurs about a dozen times. But in John's gospel alone it occurs more than 40 times.

6. For some, love has little to do with obedience. Yet John, following Jesus, stresses that to love is to obey. (See John 14:15, 21, 23, 24; 15:10, 14.) As one of Jesus' closest disciples, John would have heard the Master raise the question, "And why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" (Luke 6:46).

7. The deceivers seem to have been Gnostics, pseudo-Christian individuals who denied that the Son of God had really taken on human flesh (see 1 John 2:18–27, 4:1–6). John realizes that to attack the doctrine of the Incarnation (Christ's taking on human flesh) is to strike at the very root of Christianity.

8. The first and third we should probably be "you" (plural) according to many ancient manuscripts. It is dangerous for any person, including a believer, to follow teachings contrary to Scripture.

9. John makes Christology the central doctrine of the faith.

10, 11. In the early decades of Christianity, local churches were planted and sustained by itinerant preachers and teachers. For these workers to survive, it was necessary for believers to show hospitality. However, one had to be sure that he was not aiding and abetting false teachers, that is, those with unorthodox views of the person and work of Christ. To take such people in, John says, is to endorse their teaching. John's command forbids true Christians to actively support the ministry of false teachers. It is not a prohibition against having non-Christians (e.g., unsaved family members or neighbors) into one's home—unless, of course, they are spreading anti-Christian doctrine, and seeking to use one's home as a base of operations!

12, 13. The paper was papyrus, writing material made from reeds. One of the reasons for the brevity of this epistle is that John intends to speak to his readers in person very soon.

The Third Epistle of
JOHN

Authorship. This brief epistle is attributed to the apostle John, though he does not give his name. He calls himself “the elder” (see 2 John 1), which seems to have been John’s self-designation in the final years of his ministry. The same stylistic and theological similarities apparent in the fourth gospel, 1 John, and 2 John are a distinct feature of 3 John as well.

Date. Third John, perhaps the only extant letter of John to an individual, reflects a time when church organization was loose and when churches were united by authoritative letters from leaders. Such letters were circulated by representatives of these leaders, in the case of 3 John probably Demetrius (v. 12). On the basis of this evidence, however, a specific date for 3 John can hardly be inferred. It is normally dated in the same period as 1 and 2 John, or in the latter part of the first century A.D.

Place of Writing. Evidence that places the aged apostle John in the Asia Minor city of Ephesus suggests that 3 John, like 1 and 2 John, had its origin in that city. John tells Gaius (v. 1) that he hopes to see him soon (v. 14). This implies that the two men were not separated by any great distance. Certainly it is safe to surmise that John writes from one city of Asia Minor to Gaius in another one not too distant.

Recipient. The letter is addressed to Gaius (v. 1). This was a common name of the time; his precise identity is unknown. He may have received this letter by the hand of Demetrius (v. 12). He was perhaps a member of a fellowship over which “the elder” (v. 1) exercised oversight.

Message. John commends and exhorts Gaius for his steadfastness and for his care of Christian missionaries (vv. 3–8). He uses Diotrephes as an example of how not to live as a Christian (vv. 9–11). John’s words seem designed to encourage Gaius until John can see him personally, which he hopes will not be too far in the future (v. 14).

14 But I trust I shall shortly see thee, and we shall speak face to face. Peace be to thee. Our friends ¹salute thee. Greet the friends by name.

1. See the note on 2 John 1.

2. Above all things is better translated "in all respects." Gaius was clearly a dear friend of John. His physical health is as important to John as his spiritual health.

3. John looks back to a time prior to writing this letter when he heard of Gaius's steadfastness and rejoiced as a result.

4. Children here refers to those whom John has in some way helped lead to Christ.

5. In 2 John, mention is made of hospitality to traveling Christian workers. This was of crucial importance in the early church. See Romans 12:13; 1 Timothy 3:2; 5:10; Titus 1:8; Hebrews 13:2; 1 Peter 4:9.

6. Some of those whom Gaius had helped along had evidently brought word back to John of Gaius's exemplary labors. To bring forward would entail the full range of financial, travel, and other assistance necessary to host and then send along a visiting Christian leader whose only support was the generosity of other believers.

7. Literally, "for the name they went out," that is, the name of Jesus. They took nothing from the Gentiles (i.e., the unconverted), lest they appear to be hawking the gospel for personal gain. See Jesus' command, Matthew 10:8, and Paul's example, 1 Corinthians 9:6-15.

8. To help missionaries and similar workers to continue in their calling is to share in their work. Christians are obligated (we ... ought) to bear their share of the burden of such work.

9. The letter of which John speaks is lost, as it does not seem to have been 1 or 2 John. The church is probably the fellowship of which Gaius was a member. What the elder has written up to this point seems to serve as a prologue for his major concern, which he takes up now.

10. To prate is to indulge in idle or trivial chatter. John characterizes Diotrephes' talk as meaningless gossip. Diotrephes opposes John's teaching, either John's stress on Christ's nature or the need for Christians to demonstrate love at all times. He also opposes the exercise of hospitality such as earned high praise for Gaius from the elder.

11. This is John's way of saying that faith which does not result in works is no faith at all. Salvation is not by works, but it does produce them. See Ephesians 2:8-10.

12. Demetrius probably delivered the letter to Gaius. He was known to the elder; perhaps he was one of the brethren whom Diotrephes had cast out (v. 10). The elder's warm remarks would reassure Gaius that he could take Demetrius in and show him the favor he usually accorded visitors who were serving the truth.

13, 14. John excuses the brevity of his remarks. He expects to visit Gaius soon. Friends are Christian brethren. Some texts and translations make the words beginning with peace into a fifteenth verse.

JUDE

Authorship. The writer gives his name (v. 1) and identifies himself as James's brother. Although there are some four men in the New Testament who go by the name James, Jude likely refers to the half brother of Jesus (Matt. 13:55; Gal. 1:19). Thus Jude, like James, grew up alongside the boy and young man Jesus (Matt. 13:55; Mark 6:3). Care must be taken not to confuse this Jude with several others bearing the same name. (See Mark 3:19; Luke 3:30; 6:16 ["the brother of" should read "the son of"], Acts 5:37; 9:11; 15:22-32).

Like most if not all of Jesus' immediate family, Jude did not respond favorably to Jesus' ministry during His earthly days (John 7:5). Yet later he may have been among Jesus' brothers who had preaching ministries (1 Cor. 9:5). As a close relative of Jesus and a brother of James, himself a renowned Jewish Christian leader in Jerusalem, Jude wrote with authority and the assurance that his earliest readers would give him a careful hearing.

Date. Over the years scholars have proposed dates from A.D. 40 to 140 for this treatise. Yet if Jude was Jesus' brother he must have written well before the end of the first century. Since Jude may make use of parts of the Book of 2 Peter (some, however, think the reverse is the case), which probably dates from the A.D. sixties, Jude may be placed somewhere about A.D. 65-80.

Readers. Jude writes to Christians whose ranks have been infiltrated by false teachers. Many are being misled by shadowy figures peddling a message that promotes moral laxity, theological error, destructive pride, and divisiveness.

Message. In the face of pressure to dilute pure Christian doctrine, Jude's readers are to stand firm and "earnestly contend for the faith" (v. 3).

Earnest Contention for the Faith

3 Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you ^aof the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ^bye should earnestly contend for the faith which was ¹once delivered unto the saints.

4 For there are certain men crept in ¹unawares, who were ²before of old ordained to this condemnation, ungodly men, turning the grace of our God into ³lasciviousness, and denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ.

7 Even as ^aSodom and Gomorrah, and the cities about them in like manner, giving themselves over to ¹fornication, and going after strange flesh, are set forth for an example, suffering the ²vengeance of eternal fire.

8 ^aLikewise also these filthy dreamers defile the flesh, ¹despise dominion, and ^bspeak evil of ²dignities.

9 Yet Michael the archangel, when ¹contending with the devil he ²disputed about the body of Moses, ³durst not bring against him a ⁴railing accusation, but said, ^aThe Lord rebuke thee.

10 ^aBut these speak evil of those things which they know not: but what they know naturally, as brute beasts, in those things they corrupt themselves.

11 Woe unto them! for they have gone in the way ^aof Cain, and ^bran greedily after the error of Balaam for ¹reward, and perished ^cin the ²gain-saying of Core.

1. Sanctified and preserved are in the perfect tense: Christians are once and continually “set apart” and “kept.” They are kept for the return of Christ (see v. 21).

2. Believers who have sought God’s mercy also receive peace (“inner assurance” and “stability”) and love.

3. Beloved indicates the close relationship between Jude and his readers. Jude was evidently planning to write a less urgent doctrinal letter but was forced by developments to pen this earnest exhortation. Jude conceives of Christian faith as having a definite, unchanging, and unchangeable content.

4. Before of old ordained is probably not speaking of predestination in the sense of God deciding in advance that He would condemn these men and so seeing to it that they sinned. Rather Jude recognizes that Scripture often predicts the demise and judgment of any who flaunt God’s will. The men in question are wrongly assuming that grace means “no moral laws.” They thus effectively deny the sovereignty and eternal moral lordship of both the Father and the Son.

5. I will: Jude expresses the burden of wanting desperately to warn his readers. Jude sees Old Testament examples as extremely important for Christians (see Rom. 15:4; 1 Cor. 10:11). The writer of Hebrews expands greatly on a similar insight regarding Israel’s demise in the wilderness (Num. 14:28-35).

6. See Genesis 6:1-4. Jude here as below seems to make use of 2 Peter 2:4. The non-canonical Book of Enoch, chapters 6—10, may also be quoted here, or an oral tradition that is also in that book. His apparent use of non-canonical writings does not mean he considered them to be on the same level as Scripture itself. See Paul’s references to secular writers, in order to make a point, in Acts 17:28; 1 Corinthians 15:33; Titus 1:12.

7. See 2 Peter 2:6 and Genesis 19:1-29. Sodom and Gomorrah are mentioned often in Scripture as examples of God’s severe judgment on sexual sin, in particular sexual perversion. From this verse and verse 6 immorality has clearly entered the ranks of believers to whom Jude writes.

8. Jude describes the false teachers against whom he writes. Instead of God’s revealed Word they pay attention to their own visions or dreams. In doing so they lapse into immorality and insubordination, refusing to obey authorities (whether angelic or perhaps apostolic) and even criticizing them openly.

9. Jude evidently refers to a Jewish tradition (preserved, according to ancient authorities, in a work called the Assumption of Moses), according to which Michael the archangel refused to be provoked by Satan, who charged that Moses was a murderer (Ex. 2:11, 12) and therefore undeserving of a proper burial.

10. See Philippians 3:19 and 2 Peter 2:12.

11. Cain’s heart was not right before God (Gen. 4:1-12). Balaam led Israel to sin (Num. 22-24; 31:8-16; 2 Pet. 2:15; Rev. 2:14). Core (Korah) led a rebellion against Moses and thus against God (Num. 16).

12 These are ¹spots in your ²feasts of charity, when they feast ³with you, feeding themselves without fear: clouds they are without water, carried about of winds; ⁴trees whose fruit withereth, without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots;

13 ^aRaging waves of the sea, ^bfoaming ¹out their own shame; wandering stars, ^cto whom is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever.

14 And Enoch also, the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these, saying, Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousands of his saints, 15 To execute judgment upon all, and to ¹convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds which they have ²ungodly committed, and of all their ^ahard³ speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against him.

Keep Yourselves in God's Love

17 ^aBut, beloved, remember ye the words which were spoken before ¹of the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ;

18 How that they told you ^athere should be mockers in the last time, who should walk after their own ungodly lusts.

19 These be they who ¹separate themselves, ²sensual, having not the Spirit.

20 But ye, beloved, ^abuilding up yourselves on your most holy faith, ^bpraying in the Holy Ghost, 21 Keep yourselves in the love of God, ^alooking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life.

22 And of some have compassion, making a ¹difference:

23 And others ^asave with fear, ^bpulling them out of the fire; hating even ^cthe garment ¹spotted by the flesh.

24 ^aNow unto him that is able to keep you from ¹falling, and ^bto present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy,

25 To the only wise God our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen.

12. The feasts were probably the Lord's Supper gatherings. The same selfishness is seen in 1 Corinthians 11:20, 21.

12, 13. Both verses use vivid, picturesque language to depict the degeneracy of those who have crept into the church (v. 4).

14, 15. Enoch: See Genesis 5:19–24; also Hebrews 11:5, 6. The prophecy Jude cites is preserved in the non-canonical Book of Enoch 1:9. (See note on verse 6.) Ungodly repeatedly describes the actions and attitudes of those whom Jude denounces.

16. Great swelling words means bombastic, arrogant language. In admiration means that they flatter others in order to get what they are after.

17. Jude calls on his readers to recall apostolic teaching. Today this would mean especially the New Testament.

18. Examples of such apostolic warnings are found in Acts 20:29, 30; 2 Timothy 3:1–9; 2 Peter 3:3.

19. They who separate themselves: Jude seems to have in mind their tendency to be schismatic or divisive, to set forth heretical notions and then separate themselves and their followers from those who hold to apostolic doctrine. But note that they get their start in the church itself (v. 4).

20. The antidote for error is not simply to pull back from wrong but also to be built up in what is right, especially through clinging to God in prayer.

21. Here Jude stresses our role in being kept. In verse 1 he has already used a form of the same word, preserved, most likely to denote God's own role and ability in "keeping" His children in His grasp. Jude expects a literal return of Jesus.

22, 23. An important factor in keeping one's own faith active and vibrant is exercising it serving others. Even where there is danger or extreme immorality involved, God calls on believers to mediate His love for the fallen and share the gospel with the lost.

24, 25. Falling is literally a word meaning "stumbling." Saviour here refers to God the Father but is often applied to Christ (Titus 1:4; 2 Pet. 3:18). In Old Testament thought there is only one Savior (Is. 43:10, 11). Thus early church application of the term to Jesus implies His unity with God the Father. Many ancient manuscripts have "through Jesus Christ our Lord" following "Saviour." If those were indeed Jude's original words, it is a moving tribute to the figure with whom he once shared childhood, and in whom he now places personal trust.

THE REVELATION

of Jesus Christ

The English title “Revelation” comes from the first word of the book in Greek. That word is apokalypsis, which means “the unveiling of something previously unrevealed.” In Revelation Christ and His eternal program are fully revealed, so that the book provides a fitting capstone to the New Testament revelation.

Revelation is apocalyptic in form; that is, it is principally prophetic. Written during a time of persecution, the book abounds with visions (similar to Daniel and Zechariah), and the style is generally figurative and symbolic. The book contains many symbols and signs, such as numbers, colors, animals, stones, persons, groups, and places. Some symbols are interpreted in the text itself (e.g., 1:20); others have to be interpreted in the light of the Old Testament (e.g., 11:4). Still others may have no previous biblical connection.

Authorship. The author of Revelation identifies himself as John at least four times (1:1, 4, 9; 22:8; perhaps 21:2 also). He calls himself a servant of Christ (1:1), and a brother and companion in tribulation (1:9). He was on the island of Patmos because of the testimony of Jesus (1:9). Several early church fathers (Clement of Alexandria, Eusebius, and Irenaeus) wrote that the apostle John was exiled to Patmos by the Roman emperor Domitian about A.D. 95. Such church fathers as Justin Martyr, Irenaeus, Tertullian, Hippolytus, Clement of Alexandria, and Origen recognized the authenticity and Johannine authorship of Revelation. It was included in the Muratorian Canon (c. A.D. 170), and was accepted by Papias (early second century).

Though the style and vocabulary of Revelation differ somewhat from the other writings of John, there are many similarities, particularly with John’s gospel. A focus on the deity and the work of Christ are found in both books. The fact that the seven letters of chapters 2 and 3 focus on churches in the province of Asia and begin with the letter to Ephesus indicates that the John of Revelation is the same as the apostle John who spent the latter years of his life at Ephesus.

Historical Background. John reports that he saw his visions and was told to write them down while he was on the island of Patmos (1:9, 11; 19:9; 22:9, 10, 18, 19). Patmos is a small, barren, rocky island in the Aegean Sea about 60 miles from Ephesus.

John was told to write down what he saw in a book and to send it to seven churches in the province of Asia (western Asia Minor): Ephesus, Smyrna, Pergamos, Thyatira, Sardis, Philadelphia, and Laodicea (1:11). The original recipients of Revelation were the believers in these seven churches. Tradition reports that the apostle John exercised spiritual oversight over these churches while he resided at Ephesus during the final decades of the first century. The order of the listing of the seven churches forms a semicircle beginning in the west at Ephesus, then extending northward to Pergamos, and subsequently southeastward to Laodicea. Revelation was probably sent initially as a circular letter beginning at Ephesus and thence throughout the province.

The Book of Revelation was probably written near the end of the reign of the Roman emperor Domitian—A.D. 95–96. John had been exiled to Patmos for preaching the gospel of Christ (1:9). Several early writers report that John was exiled to Patmos by Domitian during Domitian’s persecution of Christians (A.D. 95–96). They also report that John was released from exile and returned to Ephesus following Domitian’s death in A.D. 96.

The Book of Revelation was designed to close the New Testament revelation and to be the final inspired statement from God until the return of Christ Himself. John may have distributed copies of the book upon his return from exile. The book appears to be directed primarily toward believers, in order to encourage and exhort them. But a message for unbelievers can be detected as well.

Revelation 1:3 promises a blessing to those who read, understand, and obey the contents of the book. Revelation 22:18, 19 promises a curse to anyone who adds to or takes away from the book. The book strongly assumes the perseverance and final salvation of true believers (13:10; 14:12). The promises made to those who overcome (2:7, 11, 17, 26, 28; 3:5, 12, 21) appear to be promises to all true saints that they will indeed inherit the promises of God and experience eternal life and fellowship with God. On the other hand, the judgments described in the book are for “them that dwell upon the earth” (e.g., 3:10), that is, for “earth-dwellers,” not for the saints of God. This presents a definite warning and threat to unbelievers.

Theme and Purpose. The theme of Revelation is the revelation of the person and the prophetic program of Jesus Christ. A number of purposes can be detected in the book. First, it was written to encourage believers to endure persecution and to persevere through suffering, knowing that the victory of Christ over the world and the Devil is guaranteed and certain. Second, the book was written to show how all of prophecy focuses on Jesus Christ—His person and His program for the world. Third, the book seeks to unite all the various lines of biblical prophecy (both Old Testament and New Testament) and to show how they converge upon the second coming of Christ to rule the earth in His messianic kingdom. Fourth, the book seeks to correct some moral and doctrinal problems that existed (and still exist) in the churches, and to instruct Christians in such things as salvation, prophecy, the person of Christ, and Christian living. And finally, the book may be an attack on the paganism and emperor worship of the Roman Empire, particularly against the emperor Domitian and his persecution of Christians. (There are a number of possible veiled references to the anti-Christian nature and activities of Rome in the book.)

Interpretation. There are four basic interpretational approaches to the Book of Revelation. The idealist or allegorical approach views the book as a symbolic presentation of the eternal struggle between good and evil, or between Christianity and anti-Christian paganism. No specific historical or prophetic events or persons are in view. The preterist approach sees Revelation as describing simply the historical or contemporary events of John’s day in symbolic form. The book presents the conflict between Christianity and Judaism, or between Christianity and paganism, as they were experienced by John. This view is taken by most liberals, who refuse to see any valid prophecy in the Bible. The historical approach arose during the days of the Protestant Reformation, and understands the book to be presenting in symbolic form the course of world history from New Testament days through the return of Christ. For example, in this view, the strong angel of chapter 10 symbolizes the Reformation, and the harlot of chapter 17 represents the Roman Catholic church. The futurist approach views most of the book (chs. 4–22) as still future, presenting the judgments of the Tribulation Period, the return of Christ, the millennial kingdom, and the eternal state. Only chapters 1–3 are in any sense historical. The rapture of the church, according to many premillennialists, will occur before the scene described in chapter 4 begins. Premillennialists believe that the Bible teaches that Christ will return to earth to establish a literal, messianic kingdom on the earth in fulfillment of literal promises to Abraham, David, and the prophets.

A major concern of the Book of Revelation is the judgment of God on the world (the beginning of the day of the Lord). The various judgments are symbolized in the book by a scroll with seven “seals,” by blasts from seven “trumpets,” and by the wrath of God poured out from seven “bowls” or “vials.” The relationship of these three series of judgments has been debated by interpreters. The parallel view understands the three series of judgments as occurring during the same time period, with repetition of the judgments merely showing emphasis on the intensity of the judgment. The consecutive view sees the judgments as occurring one at a time throughout the Tribulation Period—that is, 21 individual judgments from God in consecutive order. The telescopic view understands the seventh seal to include all seven trumpets, and likewise that the seventh trumpet includes the seven bowls or vials. Each individual judgment may end when the next begins, or each may continue until the end of the Tribulation and the return of Christ. The telescopic view seems best, since the seventh seal seems simply to introduce the seven trumpets (8:1, 2), and the seventh trumpet brings the chronology all the way to the return of Christ (11:15). The seven bowls are called the seven last plagues (15:1) and will apparently occur in rapid succession at the end of the Tribulation (see 16:13–17).

The Book of Revelation builds heavily upon the Book of Daniel in the Old Testament. Many symbols introduced in Daniel are repeated and further clarified in Revelation. A full understanding of Revelation is impossible without an accurate understanding of the prophecy of Daniel. Although there are very few quotations, allusions to Old Testament images and prophecy appear throughout Revelation. Of the 404 verses in the book, 265 verses contain lines that allude to some 550 Old Testament references.

The number seven is very prominent in Revelation. There are seven churches (1:11), seven candlesticks (1:13), seven stars (1:16), seven letters (2:1–3:22), seven Spirits (4:5), seven seals (5:1), seven trumpets (8:2), seven thunders (10:3), seven heads (12:3; 13:1), seven angels (15:6), seven bowls or vials (15:7), seven mountains (17:9), and seven blessings (1:3; 14:13; 16:15; 19:9; 20:6; 22:7, 14). Many interpreters believe that the number seven, when given symbolic significance, represents completeness and perfection. The numbers four (4:6; 6:1–8; 9:14) and twelve (7:4–8; 21:12, 14; 22:2) also appear to have special significance in Revelation.

The book was anticipated by Jesus before His death when He declared that the Holy Spirit would show the apostles “things to come” (John 16:13). This was begun through the eschatological teachings of Paul and Peter, but most completely fulfilled through the apostle John on Patmos. The phrase “and I saw” occurs more than 40 times in Revelation, and the statement “I was in the Spirit” is common. Twelve times throughout the book John reports that he was told to write down what he saw.

Greeting to the Seven Churches

1 The Revelation of Jesus Christ, ^awhich God gave unto him, to shew unto his servants things which must ¹shortly come to pass; and ^bhe sent and signified it by his angel unto his servant John:

2 ¹Who bare record of the word of God, and of the testimony of Jesus Christ, and of all things ^bthat he saw.

1:1. The Revelation of Jesus Christ is the title of the book. The revelation is both from Christ and about Christ. Since Christ is the revelation of God Himself (John 1:18), God gave the revelation to Christ to be shown to John by means of an angel (messenger). The word “revelation” (Gr. apokalypsis) refers to an unveiling or exposure of God’s program for the world through Christ. The prophecies of the book will occur shortly in the sense that the day of the Lord (the end of the age) may begin at any time (following the Rapture). The statement must be understood in accordance with God’s perspective on time (cf. 2 Pet. 3:4, 8). The word signified (Gr. esēmanen) refers to the conveyance of truth by means of signs and symbols, and refers to the visions described throughout the book. Symbols must be interpreted either from something in the context or from other Scriptures.

1:2, 3. Bare record: John was a witness of what he wrote. He saw the revelation and wrote what he saw. The blessing of verse 3 has a threefold condition: (1) read the book, (2) hear (understand) it, and (3) keep (obey) it. The essential nature of prophecy was the communication of new truth (divine revelation). God has given it to be obeyed, not simply to be discussed and debated. The time is at hand in the sense that nothing else now has to occur before the Rapture and the beginning of the Tribulation Period.

1:4-6. John became the apostolic leader of the church at Ephesus following the death of Paul and the destruction of Jerusalem by Rome (A.D. 70). The Ephesian church had established a number of daughter churches throughout the province of Asia (western Asia Minor), and John exercised pastoral and apostolic care of them. The blessing of verse 4 comes from the triune Godhead: God the Father, the Holy Spirit, and Jesus Christ. Him which is is a paraphrase of the name Jehovah or Yahweh (Ex. 3:14): “I AM.” The description of the Father shows eternal existence in the past (was), present (is), and future (is to come). The seven Spirits is apparently a symbolic reference to the Holy Spirit (cf. Is. 11:2; Zech. 3:9; 4:10). Jesus Christ is the faithful witness in that He has finished His work of revealing the Father (cf. John 17), the first begotten of the dead in that He is the firstfruits of the first resurrection (cf. 20:6), and the prince of the kings of the earth as the future worldwide Ruler of the millennial kingdom (cf. 19:16). Three works of Christ for believers are then listed. Loved us: Christ showed His supreme love for mankind in dying for them (cf. Rom. 5:8; 1 John 3:16). Washed us: Believers have been redeemed from their sins through the blood and death of Christ. Made us kings and priests: In the true church, no one is called “priest” (singular) except Christ. Believers are part of a “royal priesthood” in Christ (cf. 1 Pet. 2:9; Rev. 5:10). The glory and dominion (authority) of Christ are emphasized throughout the book.

1:7, 8. Four aspects of Christ’s return are mentioned, each of which alludes to another passage of Scripture. He will come with the clouds (Dan. 7:13) in the sky. Every person will see him (Matt. 24:30). Those who pierced him (Zech. 12:10), that is, those who rejected Him and wanted Him to die will repent and mourn (wail) over Him (Zech. 12:10, 11). This refers to Christ’s return to the earth to establish His kingdom, not to the Rapture. Alpha and Omega, the first and last letters of the Greek alphabet, refer here to God’s eternity and sovereignty, and possibly to the fullness of God’s self-revelation.

1:9-11. John was exiled to Patmos for preaching the word of God and testifying as a witness of Jesus Christ. Patmos is located about 60 miles from Ephesus and about 35 miles off the coast of Asia Minor. Tribulation refers to present afflictions, not to the future Tribulation period. Believers live in a present form of God's kingdom (the church) though not yet in the promised messianic kingdom. Patience is perseverance or endurance (Gr. hupomonē). True believers in Christ will persevere through all their present afflictions, with John as their example. In the Spirit: John was in a state of receiving prophetic revelation from God. The Lord's day refers to Sunday, the first day of the week, as the new day of worship for Christians. The word kuriakos occurs elsewhere in the New Testament only in 1 Corinthians 11:20. Alpha and Omega: The description that was applied to God the "Almighty" in verse 8 is here applied to Christ, showing that Christ is God, the first and the last (cf. v. 17; 22:13). The seven churches introduced here are described further in chapters 2 and 3. Ephesus was the largest and most important city in the province of Asia.

1:12-16. This is a description of Jesus Christ as a Judge (cf. John 5:22, 27). Christ has authority over both the church and the world. The seven candlesticks (lampstands) are identified in verse 20 as the seven churches mentioned in verse 11. The Son of man is a messianic title from Daniel 7:13, and was Jesus' favorite designation for Himself. The garment described in verse 13 is a judge's robe. His white hair symbolizes justice, purity, and glory. Fire is also a symbol of judgment. The brass and the sound of the voice show Christ's authority and power. The seven stars are identified in verse 20 as the angels of the seven churches. The sword also represents Christ's judgment (cf. 19:15) of the church and the world through His Word. His countenance or face was like the sun as the glory of God shone forth.

1:17, 18. John's initial reaction to this vision was fear. He was overwhelmed by the glory of God as seen in Christ (cf. Dan. 8:17, 18; 10:8, 9; Zech. 4:1). As Jesus did many times with the apostles (cf. Matt. 14:27; Mark 4:40; Luke 5:10), so now He tells John to fear not. The first and the last (cf. v. 11; 22:13) is equivalent to the language of verse 8, and is a title of the almighty and eternal God. As God in the Old Testament is called the "living God," so Christ is he that liveth. He became dead when He humbled Himself to die on the cross (cf. Phil. 2:6-8), but then rose to live for evermore. Three tenses of Christ's existence are emphasized: (1) His ever-abiding life; (2) His death as God-man; and (3) His resurrection to everlasting and authoritative life. He has authority over death and judgment, and therefore has the keys of hell [Hades] and of death (cf. 20:14).

1:19. This is the key verse of the book. Revelation has three major sections: (1) the things which thou hast seen—chapter 1, especially the vision of Christ (cf. v. 11—"what thou seest"); (2) the things which are—chapters 2 and 3, the conditions in the churches; and (3) the things which shall be hereafter—chapters 4-22, beginning with the judgments of the Tribulation period (cf. 7:1—"after these things").

1:20. The seven candlesticks in the midst of which Christ stood in the vision are identified as the seven churches listed in verse 11. The seven stars in His hand represent the angels of the seven churches. The angels may be either literal angels, each of which has a special guardian ministry toward one specific church (cf. Heb. 1:14), or the human leaders or pastors of these churches. Angel literally means "messenger."

The seven stars are ^athe ³angels of the seven churches; and ^bthe seven ²candlesticks which thou sawest are the seven churches.

The Church in Smyrna

8 And unto the angel of the church in Smyrna write; These things saith ^athe first and the last, which was dead, and is alive;

9 I know thy works, and tribulation, and poverty, (but thou art ^arich) and I know the blasphemy of ^bthem which say they are Jews, and are not, ^cbut are ¹the synagogue of Satan.

2:1—3:22. The seven letters of chapters 2 and 3 may be interpreted in various ways: (1) historical—the letters should be understood historically, with no prophetic significance; (2) historico-prophetic—the letters are addressed to seven historical churches, but each church also represents a successive phase or period in the history of professing Christendom; (3) representative—each church contains characteristics that can be found to some degree in most churches throughout church history. These letters represent the “things which are” of 1:19. Thus, they are historical and representative, rather than prophetic. Most of the letters follow a fivefold outline: (1) address, (2) commendation, (3) condemnation, (4) counsel or warning, and (5) promise. Each address makes some reference to the vision of chapter 1.

2:1. The city of Ephesus was one of the most important commercial and religious cities in Asia Minor. The most famous temple of the goddess Artemis (Diana) was located there. It was also John’s headquarters before his exile. Ephesus served as the “mother” church to the others, all of which were connected by the same Roman road.

2:2–4. The church is commended because of its soundness of faith and its perseverance through persecution. However, its people have come under Christ’s discipline for having left (not lost) their first love or former devotion to Christ.

2:5. The solution to this condition is threefold: (1) remember your former devotion to Christ; (2) repent of the present lack of love and devotion; and (3) return—that is, do the things that were characteristic of the devotion of the church in its earlier years. Christ threatens to discipline the church by removing its light (candlestick). Today, Ephesus is in ruins, and its church is gone.

2:6, 7. The Nicolaitanes were probably a libertine, antinomian sect who attempted to use Christian liberty as an excuse for self-indulgence and immorality (cf. vv. 14, 15). The promise to him that overcometh probably applies to all Christians with genuine faith (cf. 1 John 5:4, 5), and will be fulfilled as believers enjoy the blessings of the New Jerusalem (22:2, 14), the paradise of God.

2:8. Smyrna was located about 40 miles north of Ephesus. Its name meant “Myrrh,” which was often used as a fragrant spice for the anointing of dead bodies (cf. John 19:39). This church represents the church under persecution.

2:9–11. The believers of Smyrna were undergoing persecution and had been reduced to poverty. They were being reviled by unbelieving Jews. They received no condemnation from Christ, but were encouraged to endure suffering faithfully. Their persecution would be of short duration (ten days). Some relate this to 10 edicts of anti-Christian persecution from the time of Nero (A.D. 64) until Diocletian (A.D. 312). Faithful perseverance through trials will bring a crown of life (cf. James 1:12). The second death is eternal destruction in the lake of fire (20:14, 15), reserved for all unbelievers.

2:8 Smyrna was a prosperous and beautiful city in the Roman province of Asia, 50 miles north of Ephesus on the Aegean shore. For political reasons, and because of political favors, Rome granted Smyrna’s request to build a temple to the Roman Emperor Tiberius. Accordingly, like Pergamos, Smyrna became a “temple-warden” of the imperial cult. This pagan practice of emperor worship resulted in much persecution for the church. In A.D. 155/156 Polycarp, disciple of the apostle John and bishop at Smyrna, became its twelfth martyr. Smyrna is mentioned only in Revelation (1:11 and 2:8). Its ruins now lie under the present Turkish city of Izmir (pop. c. 265,000).

2:12. Pergamos, or Pergamum, was located about 50 miles north of Smyrna. The name may mean "Thoroughly Married," and may represent the state church which is "married" to a political system. The reference to the sharp sword shows that Christ will judge the false teachers at Pergamos.

2:13. Satan's seat or throne may be a reference to the religious paganism centered in Pergamos. The city had a throne-like altar to the god Zeus, a temple to Asklepios (symbolized by a serpent), and various temples dedicated to the worship of the Roman emperor. Christ here commends the church at Pergamos for remaining faithful in the midst of such satanic influence.

2:14-16. The doctrine of Balaam was a compromise of Christianity with paganism, resulting in idolatry and immorality. Balaam had once succeeded in leading many Israelites into these sins (cf. Num. 31:16; 2 Pet. 2:15; Jude 11). The entire church is urged to repent of the toleration and sins of these false teachers, before Christ has to judge them Himself. The church should discipline itself and not tolerate false teaching and immorality within.

2:17. Manna in the Old Testament represents sustenance and life (cf. John 6:48-51). Christ is sufficient for all the believer's needs. The white stone with its new name symbolizes acceptance and approval by God.

2:18. Thyatira was located about 20 miles southeast of Pergamos, and was the hometown of Lydia, Paul's first convert in Macedonia (Acts 16:14). The name may mean "Continual Sacrifice." The fire and brass in the description of Christ emphasize Christ's promise to judge the false teachers of this church. Since the city was controlled by a female-dominated dye and cloth industry, it is possible that the church here suffered from female false teachers.

2:19-23. There was a self-proclaimed prophetess at Thyatira whom Christ calls Jezebel. She was leading the church into false doctrine, idolatry, and immorality just as the Old Testament Jezebel had done to Israel

2:12 Pergamos, more commonly known as Pergamum, was situated about 50 miles due north of Smyrna, 15 miles from the Aegean Sea. It was the official capital of the Roman province of Asia, even though Ephesus and Smyrna were more important commercially. The first temple of the imperial cult was built here in 29 B.C., in honor of Rome and Caesar Augustus. It became the center for the imperial religion with its blasphemous emperor worship. Because of its many other altars and cults, it could aptly be called "Satan's Seat." Of the seven Asian cities of Revelation 2 and 3, this one has provided the most archaeological remains. Today the Turkish town of Bergama (pop. 25,000) occupies the site.

The Church in Sardis

3 And unto the ¹angel of the church in Sardis write; These things saith he that ^ahath the seven Spirits of God, and the seven stars; I know thy works, that thou hast a name that thou livest, ²and art dead.

(cf. 1 Kin. 16; 2 Kin. 9). She refused to repent, and therefore would be judged along with her followers and her children (or disciples).

2:24, 25. There was a godly remnant of believers at Thyatira who had not accepted these “deep teachings” or depths of Satan. The exhortation is to hold fast what is good, and to reject evil.

2:26-29. The obedient believer will be given a reward of power or authority in the millennial kingdom as he reigns with Christ (12:5; 19:15; 20:4). The morning star is probably a reference to the eternal presence of Christ Himself.

3:1. Sardis, the ancient capital of the rich and powerful kingdom of Lydia, was located about 30 miles south of Thyatira. The name may mean “Escaping.” As the glory of the city of Sardis was mostly in the past, so the church there was now virtually dead in spirit and works, and is representative of dead orthodoxy.

3:2-4. The exhortation is both positive and negative. The godly, believing remnant who are worthy should strengthen the things which remain. The rest should remember the sound teaching that had been received from the apostles, hold it fast, and repent of their deadness and faithlessness. Christ’s coming in judgment may occur at any time, just as one never knows when a thief may come to steal. White garments represent righteousness, which the faithless ones have defiled.

3:5, 6. The one who has genuine faith in Christ has the righteousness of Christ accounted to him through

3:1 Sardis was one of the seven cities within the Roman province of Asia in western Asia Minor (modern Turkey). It was situated at the crossroads of the highways leading from the coastal cities (Ephesus, Smyrna, and Pergamum) to the high country of inner Asia Minor. Sardis had been the capital of the ancient kingdom of Lydia, which withstood the Greeks during their early colonization of Asia Minor. It was renowned for its gold and wealth during the reign of Croesus. In the sixth century B.C. his kingdom was destroyed by the Persian army under Cyrus, as told by the Greek historian Herodotus. Under Roman rule, in the New Testament era, it never regained its earlier prominence. It only possessed its former name of greatness, not those great works. The city was destroyed by an earthquake during the rule of Tiberius Caesar (A.D. 17) and rebuilt by him. This indebtedness promoted emperor worship in Sardis and evidently prompted compromise by the church. Today a small Turkish village named Sart lies near the site.

The Church in Laodicea

14 And unto the ¹angel of the church of the Laodiceans write;

the redeeming blood of the Lamb. This is the white raiment (cf. 7:14). The book of life is a list of the saved of all ages (cf. Phil. 4:3; Rev. 20:12, 15). The promise not to blot out his name out of the book of life is an emphatic assurance of the eternal security of the true believer. The statement in Greek contains a double negative, which may be translated, “I will by no means blot out his name.” Christ will confess the name only of genuine believers (cf. Matt. 10:32, 33).

3:7. Philadelphia was located about 30 miles southeast of Sardis. Its name means “Brotherly Love,” and represents the faithful church in all ages. Founded in A.D. 17, it was the newest of the seven cities. The reference to the key of David is taken from Isaiah 22:22, where it relates to messianic authority.

3:8, 9. The open door, which no man can shut, refers to an opportunity for testimony and service. The city sat on a mountain pass which served as a doorway to the Anatolian hill country. Those who are of the synagogue of Satan are probably unbelieving Jews or Judaizers.

3:10. This verse presents a promise that Christ will rapture genuine believers out of the world before the Tribulation period begins. The hour of temptation is the period of worldwide testing (Gr. peirasmos) which has not yet occurred (cf. Dan. 12:1; Matt. 24:21, 29). Christ promises to keep them from (Gr. ek, “out of”) the period of the Tribulation. That is, they will not even enter into this period of history. The Tribulation is for the purpose of trying or judging them that dwell upon the earth, those who are connected to the earth and its system. Believers are not even included in this term (cf. Phil. 3:18–20; 1 Pet. 2:11; Rev. 6:10; 11:10; 13:8, 12, 14; 17:8).

3:11–13. I come quickly: The time of the deliverance mentioned in verse 10 is here identified with the return of Christ for His church (the Rapture). The temple may relate either to the millennial kingdom or to the New Jerusalem. The genuine believer will be given a place of service and honor before God. The threefold reference to the name gives a guarantee of eternal security in Christ. The name of my God shows ownership. The name of the city shows heavenly citizenship. And my new name indicates co-heirship with Christ.

3:7 Philadelphia, like Sardis, had been part of the ancient kingdom of Lydia and was part of the Roman province of Asia during the New Testament era. It was located about 30 miles southeast of Sardis and about 70 miles east of Smyrna, and lay at the upper end of a broad valley that passed through Sardis and near Smyrna. Like Sardis, Philadelphia was almost destroyed by the massive earthquakes in southwest Asia Minor in A.D. 17. The tremors continued for years. When the Moslems overran Asia Minor in the fourteenth century A.D., Philadelphia resisted far longer than other cities and became an island for Christianity. The city exists today as the Turkish town of Alasehir (pop. 16,000) and contains the ruins of many ancient churches.

3:14. Laodicea was located about 50 miles southeast of Philadelphia, in the Lycus River valley near Colossae and Hierapolis (cf. Col. 4:13–16). Its name means “People Ruling,” and represents the unbelieving, materialistic church of all ages. The city was founded in c. 260 B.C. by Antiochus II and named for his wife, Laodice, whom he later divorced. The city was almost entirely destroyed by an earthquake in the A.D. 60s but was later rebuilt and became a popular place for wealthy Romans to retire.

3:15, 16. The church is likened to lukewarm water, or as being virtually worthless. Christ says He will “spew them out,” or eject them from His company. The hot waters of nearby Hierapolis were known for their medicinal qualities, whereas Colossae was known for its cold, pure water. But Laodicea was forced to receive water by aqueduct from other areas. By the time it arrived at Laodicea it was lukewarm and provoked nausea. The works of the Laodicean church were as worthless as the city’s lukewarm water. The description does not refer to a backslidden condition, but rather to their lack of genuine faith.

3:17–19. Laodicea was famous for its wealth, its bankers, its medical school, its popular eyesalve, and its textile industry. Christ says that spiritually the people of the church are poor, blind, and naked. True wealth is found only in God’s grace. This church had no spiritual value (gold), virtue (white raiment), or vision (eyesalve). He urges the Laodiceans to repent of their lack of genuine faith and of spiritual understanding.

3:20–22. In light of the spiritual condition of the Laodiceans described in verses 17, 18, the invitation of verse 20 seems to be evangelistically addressed to individual members of an apostate church, so they might receive Christ genuinely as Savior and Lord (cf. John 1:12; 10:27). To sup (dine) means to have fellowship (cf. Luke 22:30; John 14:23) and to enjoy Christ’s blessings. The promise to sit with Christ in His throne refers to reigning with Christ in His kingdom (cf. Matt. 19:28; Rev. 20:4; 22:1). Verse 22 contains the last reference to the church before chapter 22, implying that the Rapture will occur before the events of chapters 4—19 and thus that the church will not be present on earth during the Great Tribulation.

4:1—5:14. The third major section of Revelation begins here: “the things which shall be hereafter” (1:19). Chapters 4 and 5 establish Christ’s right and authority to act as the Judge of the earth. God on His throne invests the Lion of the tribe of Judah with the authority to establish His dominion and kingdom on earth because of His redeeming work as the Lamb.

4:1. The phrases after this and things which must be hereafter move to the future—beyond the age of the church. The door signifies entrance by way of revelation into heaven. Chapters 4 and 5 picture a heavenly scene. The command Come up hither probably does not refer specifically to the Rapture, but rather to the change in scene for John. The trumpet signifies an authoritative voice.

4:2–5. In the spirit John sees God the Father sitting on His throne in heaven (cf. v. 8). The gems and the rainbow show the glory of God (cf. Ezek. 1:22–28). The 24 elders probably represent the raptured church lamps of fire burning before the throne, which are ^cthe seven Spirits of God.

6 And before the throne there was ^aa sea of glass like unto crystal: ^band in the midst of the throne, and round about the throne, were four ¹beasts full of eyes ²before and behind.

The Book Sealed with Seven Seals

5 And I saw in the right hand of him that sat on the throne ^aa ¹book written within and on the backside, ^bsealed with seven seals.

2 And I saw a strong angel proclaiming with a loud voice, ^a“Who is worthy to open the book, and to loose the seals thereof?

3 And no man in heaven, nor in earth, neither under the earth, was able to open the ¹book, neither to look thereon.

4 And I wept much, because no man was found worthy to open and to read the book, neither to look thereon.

5 And one of the elders saith unto me, Weep not: behold, ^a“the Lion of the tribe of ^bJuda, ^c“the Root of David, hath ^dprevailed¹ to open the book, ^eand to loose the seven seals thereof.

6 And I beheld, and, lo, in the midst of the throne and of the four beasts, and in the midst of the elders, stood ^aa Lamb as it had been slain, having seven horns and ^bseven eyes, which are ^cthe seven Spirits of God sent forth into all the earth.

in heaven. Their seats or thrones show a reward of authority in the millennial kingdom (cf. 20:4), and their crowns (Gr. stephanos) are crowns of reward from the judgment seat of Christ (cf. Rom. 14:10; 1 Cor. 3:12–15; 2 Cor. 5:10). The white raiment shows their righteousness, which has now been judged and purified. The number four and twenty represents the church as priests before God. David divided the Levitical priesthood into 24 sections (1 Chr. 24:7–19). Believers are seen here as a kingdom of priests (cf. 1:6). Old Testament saints are not yet included, since they will not be resurrected and rewarded until after the Tribulation period (cf. Dan. 12:1–3). The seven lamps or seven Spirits again symbolize the Holy Spirit of God (cf. 1:4).

4:6–8. The four beasts or living creatures (lit., “living ones”) are probably angels (cf. Ezek. 10:15–22) who guard the throne of God. The eyes symbolize wisdom, and the wings depict movement. They worship God as did the seraphim in Isaiah’s vision (cf. Is. 6:1–3). The lion represents strength (cf. Ps. 103:20), the calf service (cf. Heb. 1:14), the face of a man intelligence (cf. Luke 2:52), and the eagle swiftness (cf. Dan. 9:21). The angelic vision has a strong allusion to Ezekiel 1:4–14.

4:9–11. All of heaven worship the Father. The angels extol His character, and the elders (church) extol His creative powers. God has the right to rule and the sovereign authority to judge the earth, because He is both holy and the Creator of all.

5:1. Chapter 5 continues the vision of chapter 4. The book is a scroll with seven messages, each of which has been sealed with the authority of God. The breaking of the seals would reveal the message inside each part of the scroll. Scrolls normally had writing on only one side. This scroll contains the Tribulation judgments of God (cf. ch. 6; Ezek. 2:9, 10; Dan. 8:26; 12:4).

5:2–4. Only one with the proper authority could open the book by loosing or removing its seals (cf. Is. 29:11). The question is, “Who has the right to judge the world?”—that is, to reveal what is hidden in the scroll and to execute what is written. No man, literally, “No one,” could be found among mankind or angels who had the authority to remove the “seals” and read the scroll.

5:5–7. Christ is presented both as a Lion (Ruler) from the tribe of Juda (Judah; cf. Gen. 49:10) and as a Lamb (Redeemer; cf. Is. 53:7; John 1:29). The Root of David shows a messianic connection with the Davidic covenant (cf. 2 Sam. 7:16; Is. 11:1) and Christ’s right to the throne of Israel. The vision of Christ here brings together the twofold aspect of His first and second comings—His work as Savior and as Sovereign. Christ has the right to judge, possess, and rule the earth because of His submission to the death of the Cross (cf. Phil. 2:8–11).

7 And he came and took the ¹book out of the right hand ^aof him that sat upon the throne.

8 And when he had taken the book, ^athe four ¹beasts and four and twenty elders fell down before the Lamb, having every one of them harps, and golden ²vials full of ³odours, which are the ^bprayers of saints.

9 And ^athey sung a new song, saying, ^bThou art worthy to take the ¹book, and to open the seals thereof: for thou wast slain, and ^chast redeemed us to God ^dby thy blood out of every ²kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation;

10 And hast made us unto our God ^akings and ^bpriests: and we shall reign on the earth.

Worthy Is the Lamb

11 And I beheld, and I heard the voice of many angels round about the throne and the ¹beasts and the elders: and the number of them was ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands;

12 Saying with a loud voice, Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing.

5:8-14. Three outbursts of praise and worship are directed toward Christ and the Father: (1) the beasts and the elders praise the Lamb for having redeemed them through His blood (vv. 8, 9) and for giving them authority (in the future) to reign on the earth (v. 10); (2) myriads of angels also praise the Lamb for His glory and wisdom (vv. 11, 12); and (3) every area of creation worships both the Father and the Lamb (vv. 13, 14). The prayers of saints (v. 8) may be prayers for the fulfillment of the messianic kingdom (cf. 6:9, 10; 8:3).

6:1. The seals represent the beginning of Christ's judgment of unbelievers on the earth during the Tribulation period. There is a close similarity between these judgments and the events predicted by Christ in Matthew 24:4-31. The purpose of the Tribulation period is to punish unbelievers for their sin and rejection of Christ and to bring the remnant to faith in Christ. For the chronology of the seal, trumpet, and bowl judgments, see the Introduction.

6:2. The first seal initiates the worldwide conquest by the false messiah, the Antichrist (cf. Matt. 24:5). He will be the final Gentile world ruler (see 13:1-7). This horseman is not the same as the one described in 19:11, which is Christ at His second coming.

6:3, 4. The second seal brings war and a lack of peace (cf. Matt. 24:6, 7). The sword represents armed conflict. Perhaps the attacks on Israel mentioned in Ezekiel 38 and 39 and Daniel 11:40-44 are also in view.

6:5, 6. The third seal represents inflation and famine (cf. Matt. 24:7). The balances or scales are related to commerce and trade. The word penny, better transliterated "denarius," represented about one day's wages. Wheat and barley were considered necessities of life. A measure (Gr. choinix) was about one quart. The price given is about 10 times what was normal. The command hurt not the oil and the wine may indicate a restriction on the effects of the famine in this early part of the Tribulation.

measures of barley for a ³penny; and ^asee thou hurt not the oil and the wine.

The Fourth Seal Opened

7 And when he had opened the fourth seal, ^aI heard the voice of the fourth beast say, Come and see.

8 ^aAnd I looked, and behold a pale horse: and his name that sat on him was Death, and ¹Hell followed with him. And ²power was given unto them over the fourth part of the earth, ^bto kill with sword, and with hunger, and with death, ^cand with the ³beasts of the earth.

The Fifth Seal Opened

9 And when he had opened the fifth seal, I saw under ^athe altar ^bthe souls of them that were slain ^cfor the word of God, and for ^dthe testimony which they held:

10 And they cried with a loud voice, saying, ^aHow long, O Lord, ^bholy and true, ^cdost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?

11 And ^awhite robes were given unto every one of them; and it was said unto them, ^bthat they should rest yet for a little ¹season, until their fellowservants also and their brethren, that should be killed as they were, should be fulfilled.

Twelve Thousand Sealed from Each Tribe

7 And after these things I saw four angels standing on the four corners of the earth, ^aholding the four winds of the earth, ^bthat the wind should not blow on the earth, nor on the sea, nor on any tree.

2 And I saw another angel ascending from the east, having the seal of the living God: and he cried with a loud voice to the four angels, to whom it was given to hurt the earth and the sea,

6:7, 8. The fourth seal brings death to a fourth of the population of the earth, through war, famine, and pestilence (cf. Matt. 24:7; Luke 21:11). Death takes lives, and Hell (Hades) holds them for judgment.

6:9-11. The fifth seal presents the martyrdom of Tribulation saints throughout the world. They will come to faith in Christ following the Rapture (cf. 7:9-17), and many will be killed by satanic opposition to their testimony of Christ. They plead for God's judgment on their unbelieving oppressors (Antichrist and his followers). The white robes depict their righteous standing before God. More saints will be martyred, since there is much more of the Tribulation to come.

6:12-14. The sixth seal brings natural disasters of various kinds (cf. Matt. 24:7, 29). The earth and the heavenly bodies will go into convulsions. Joel 2:30, 31 predicts many of these judgments in nature as signs of the day of the Lord.

6:15-17. As a result of these first six seal judgments, many unbelievers will want to die and to hide from God, but will be unable to. The great day of his wrath is the day of the Lord, the predicted time of God's judgment of the earth and its inhabitants (cf. Joel 1:15; 2:1, 11, 31). The day of wrath is contrasted to the present "day of grace." Is come means God's day of judgment "is here"—it has finally arrived, having begun with the first six seals.

7:1-3. Chapter 7 is a parenthesis in the chronology of Revelation, showing God's program of grace and salvation during the period of judgment. The winds depict God's judgment of the earth, and the four angels are restraining agents who hold back the judgment until God's special servants can be sealed. The parenthesis probably looks back to the same time period as that covered by the six seals, so that the 144,000 must be "sealed" before the Tribulation judgments begin.

The Seventh Seal Opened

8 And ^awhen he had opened the seventh seal, there was silence in heaven about the space of half an hour.

7:4-8. The seal shows ownership and security, as a king's signet ring was used to authenticate and protect official documents. The 144,000 are all Israelites from the 12 tribes (12 times 12,000). This number may be taken literally, or figuratively of a national conversion. All 12 tribes returned from exile, and there was always a remnant from the entire nation in Israel (cf. 2 Chr. 30:1-10, 25, 26; Matt. 10:5, 6; Acts 26:7). The promise of future restoration is given to all 12 tribes (cf. Is. 11:11-13; Ezek. 37:15-28). There are no "lost tribes." In the list of tribes, Joseph stands for Ephraim, and Dan is missing, possibly because it was the first tribe to go into idolatry and apostasy (cf. Judg. 18). The 144,000 will apparently be converted and commissioned to be a light to the Gentiles during the Tribulation.

7:9-12. Many Gentiles will be saved during the Tribulation, apparently through the evangelistic ministry of the sealed Jews. The white robes portray a standing of righteousness, and the multitude praises God especially for their salvation. Note the sevenfold praise of verse 12.

7:13-17. The redeemed Gentiles of this vision are either saints who will be martyred during the tribulation, or believers who will survive the Tribulation and enter the Millennium in their natural bodies, or both. The temple may be either the earthly, millennial temple, or the throne and presence of God in heaven. Earthly sorrows will be over (cf. 21:3, 4). Christ will give them spiritual sustenance. There will be absolutely no crying or sorrow in the presence of God, for He will have wiped away all tears from their eyes. The principal activity of the redeemed for eternity will be to serve God (v. 15).

8:1, 2. Chapter 8 begins where chapter 6 ended. The seventh seal probably contains the seven trumpets.

2 ^aAnd I saw the seven angels which stood before God; ^band to them were given seven trumpets.

An Angel Offers Incense

3 And another angel came and stood at the altar, having a golden censer; and there was given unto him much incense, that he should offer it with ^athe prayers of all saints upon ^bthe golden altar which was before the throne.

4 And ^athe smoke of the incense, which came with the prayers of the saints, ascended up before God out of the angel's hand.

5 And the angel took the censer, and filled it with fire of the altar, and cast it ¹into the earth: and ^athere were ²voices, and thunderings, ^band lightnings, ^cand an earthquake.

6 And the seven angels which had the seven trumpets prepared themselves to sound.

The Third Trumpet

10 And the third angel sounded, ^aand there fell a great star from heaven, burning as it were a ¹lamp, ^band it fell upon the third part of the rivers, and upon the ²fountains of waters;

11 ^aAnd the name of the star is called Wormwood: ^band the third part of the waters became wormwood; and many men died of the waters, because they were made bitter.

The Fourth Trumpet

12 ^aAnd the fourth angel sounded, and the third part of the sun was ¹smitten, and the third part of the moon, and the third part of the stars; so as the third part of them was darkened, and the day ²shone not for a third part of it, and the night likewise.

13 And I beheld, ^aand heard an angel flying through the midst of heaven, saying with a loud voice, ^bWoe, woe, woe, to the inhabitants of the earth by reason of the ¹other voices of the trumpet of the three angels, which are ²yet to sound!

The Fifth Trumpet

9 And the fifth angel sounded, ^aand I saw a star ¹fall from heaven unto the earth: and to him was given the key of ^bthe ²bottomless pit.

The silence indicates the beginning of a further series of judgments.

8:3-6. Incense is often an illustration of prayer (cf. 5:8). The trumpet judgments may be God's response to the prayers of the saints in 6:10—a cry for revenge against the enemies of Christ (cf. Ps. 94:1; Rom. 12:19). The throwing of the censer to the earth represents the coming judgment of the earth. Christ will use angels to administer the trumpets. The blast of each "trumpet" symbolizes the execution of God's judgment.

8:7. The first trumpet brings literal fire and hail, and causes the destruction of most of the vegetation on the earth. Famine and a lack of oxygen production will result.

8:8, 9. The second trumpet turns a third of the sea into blood, and a third of the sea creatures and ships are destroyed. This will produce a reduction of evaporation and thus a shortage of rain and fresh water on land. International commerce and distribution of food and resources will be severely hampered.

8:10, 11. The third trumpet makes a third of all fresh water bitter, resulting in widespread thirst and death. Wormwood (Gr. apsinthos, lit., "undrinkable") was a bitter herb (cf. Deut. 29:18; Prov. 5:4) that would make the water of the earth unfit for human consumption.

8:12. The fourth trumpet takes away a third of the light from the heavens during both day and night. The light arriving from the sun, stars, and moon is reduced, leading probably to fear, lack of crop production, and a much lower quality of life (cf. Matt. 24:29; Luke 21:25).

8:13. The last three trumpets will be especially severe, as announced by the threefold repetition of Woe, woe, woe. They will be directed toward the inhabitants of the earth, that is, the unbelievers still alive on earth. Both the oldest and the majority of Greek manuscripts read "eagle" instead of angel in the first part of the verse.

2 And he opened the ¹bottomless pit; and there arose a smoke out of the pit, as the smoke of a great furnace; and the ^asun and the air were darkened by reason of the smoke of the pit.

3 And there came out of the smoke locusts upon the earth: and unto them was given power, ^aas the scorpions of the earth have power.

4 And it was commanded them ^athat they should not hurt ^bthe grass of the earth, neither any green thing, neither any tree; but only those men which have not ^cthe seal of God in their foreheads.

5 And to them it was given that ¹they should not kill them, ^abut that they should be tormented five months: and their torment was as the torment of a scorpion, when he striketh a man.

11 And they had a king over them, which is ^athe angel of the bottomless pit, whose name in the Hebrew tongue is ¹Abaddon, but in the Greek tongue hath his name ²Apollyon.

12 ^aOne woe is past; and, behold, there come two woes more hereafter.

The Sixth Trumpet

13 And the sixth angel sounded, and I heard a voice from the four

9:1-3. Chapter 9 describes the first two woes—trumpets five and six. The fifth trumpet brings a five-month period of torment on the unbelievers of the earth. The star is either an angel of God (cf. 1:20; 20:1) or Satan, the one who has authority over the pit (cf. v. 11; Is. 14:12; Luke 10:18). The bottomless pit is the Abyss, the abode of evil spirits or demons (cf. Luke 8:31). The key represents authority. Smoke from the “pit” indicates fires below. Locust-like creatures come out of the smoke. That they are not literal locusts is indicated by their description which follows. In the Old Testament, locusts are symbols of destruction (cf. Ex. 10:1-20; Deut. 28:42; 1 Kin. 8:37; Ps. 78:46; Joel 1:2-2:11). Considering the identity of their king (v. 11) and the Abyss from which they come, these locusts probably represent demons. Like scorpions, they can hurt people.

9:4-6. They do not harm the vegetation, as ordinary locusts would, but only men who do not belong to God. They are not allowed to kill anyone at this point. They only torment unbelievers for five months. The pain will be like that of a scorpion. The “torment” will be so great that they will desire to die. But part of the judgment will be that men cannot die to escape it.

9:7-10. The description of the locusts indicates that they are demons who are given physical forms in order to manifest their destruction and torment. Horses show their warlike character. Their crowns depict them as conquerors. Human faces show intelligence. Their feminine hair perhaps makes them seductive and attractive. The teeth... of lions shows them to be destructive and hurtful. Breastplates of iron make them indestructible. Wings symbolize swiftness. The stings in their tails give them the power to hurt. Fortunately for mankind, their period of torment is limited to five months. But the next judgment is even worse.

9:11, 12. The king over these demons is apparently Satan, who is given temporary authority over the Abyss. The name Abaddon is Hebrew for “Destruction” (cf. Job 28:22; Prov. 15:11; 27:20). Its Greek equivalent is Apollyon, meaning “Destroyer.” Since the Roman emperor Domitian called himself Apollo incarnate, the mention of Satan as “Apollyon” (from the same root as Apollo) may be an intentional play on words. Two more woes are still coming. As the end approaches, the intensity and severity of the trumpet judgments increase dramatically.

BOTTOMLESS PIT

9:1-12. John employs the image of a pit seven times in Revelation to describe hell (vv. 1, 2, 11; 11:7; 17:8; 20:1, 3). Each time, the pit is closely associated with demons; it is also associated with the unsaved (Rom. 10:7). This image of hell may also imply darkness and imprisonment since pits were often used as prisons in ancient cultures. Obviously, the pit appears as a place of suffering. Illustration: If you have trouble believing God could ever make a hell, remember it was prepared for the Devil and his angels (Matt. 25:41). Application: Those who go to hell are in essence choosing to spend eternity with Satan rather than with Christ. (First Reference, Gen. 2:17; Primary Reference, Rev. 9:1-12; cf. Luke 16:23-25.)

An Angel and Seven Thunders

10 And I saw another mighty angel come down from heaven, clothed with a cloud: ^aand a rainbow was upon ^bhis head, and his face was as it were the sun, and ^chis feet as pillars of fire:

2 And he had in his hand a little book open: ^aand he set his right foot upon the sea, and his left foot on the ¹earth,

3 And cried with a loud voice, as when a lion roareth: and when he had cried, ^aseven thunders uttered their voices.

4 And when the seven thunders

9:13-15. The sixth trumpet results in the death of a third of the surviving unbelievers on the earth. The four bound angels are fallen angels or demons who have been temporarily bound by God. They are loosed for the purpose of killing a “third” of the population of the world. They appear to be in charge of the horde of demonic horsemen who will actually accomplish the massacre (vv. 16-19). The river Euphrates was the northeastern boundary of both the Roman Empire and the promised kingdom of Israel (cf. Gen. 15:18; Deut. 11:24; Josh. 1:4; Is. 8:5-8).

9:16-19. John heard the number of the horsemen: 200,000,000—literally, “two myriads of myriads”—although the majority of manuscripts reads “a myriad of myriads” or 100,000,000 (cf. 5:11; Ps. 68:17; Dan. 7:10). John had no time to count such a large army. The riders (and perhaps the horses) wore breastplates. An armored cavalry was always a most formidable opponent. Brimstone is yellow sulphur. The heads of lions symbolize cruelty and destruction. The fire, smoke, and brimstone are three separate plagues, which together kill a third of mankind. In light of their description, and the fact that they are ruled by four fallen angels, these horses and riders are probably demons as well. The demons of the fifth trumpet do not kill, but these demon riders do kill. Their power to kill is in their mouth, from which come the “fire,” “smoke,” and “brimstone.” Their tails have heads like serpents, with the power to hurt people. This sixth trumpet, combined with the fourth seal (6:8), reduces the population of the earth to one-half its pre-Tribulation level.

9:20, 21. By this point in the Tribulation period, most surviving unbelievers will have permanently made up their minds concerning Christ. They will refuse to repent, even under this terrible judgment. Their religious activities will involve worship of idols and demons (devils), and sorceries or witchcraft, with the use of magic potions (Gr. pharmakon, from which English pharmacy derives). Idolatry is in fact the worship of demons (cf. 1 Cor. 10:20). Three of the four sins in verse 21 are specifically prohibited in the Ten Commandments (cf. Ex. 20:3-17). For “sorceries,” compare 18:23; 21:8; 22:15; and Galatians 5:20.

10:1. Chapter 10 begins another parenthesis in the chronology of Revelation (10:1—11:14). These visions apparently relate to the time period covered by the first six trumpets, and thus to the latter half of the Tribulation. The mighty angel may be a strong angel, or even Christ Himself (the Angel of the Lord). The description is similar to that of Christ in 1:13-16 (cf. Ezek. 1). The cloud (cf. Ps. 104:3), the rainbow (cf. Rev. 4:3), the sun (cf. 1:16), and the pillars of fire (cf. Ex. 13:21) may refer to deity, but a parallel may also be drawn with the angel Gabriel (cf. Dan. 8:16; 12:7).

10:2-4. The little book is probably a title deed to the earth (cf. Jer. 32:10, 11). It symbolizes Christ’s right to possess and rule the earth (cf. Ps. 2:6-9). The planting of the feet on the sea and the earth (dry land) shows Christ’s authority over the earth in its entirety, and the

The Prophecy of the Two Witnesses

11 And there was given me ^aa ¹reed like unto a ²rod: and the angel stood, saying, ^bRise, and measure the temple of God, and the altar, and them that worship therein.

2 But ^athe court which is ¹without the temple leave out, and measure it not; ^bfor it is given unto the Gentiles: and the holy city shall they ^ctread under foot ^dforty and two months.

appropriation of His promised inheritance as Messiah. The loud voice shows authority as well. The little book may also contain more judgments (cf. Ezek. 2:8—3:3). The seven thunders or peals of thunder may be further messages of judgment, such as the seven bowl judgments still to come (ch. 16). He is here told to seal them up, since they will be described in detail later.

10:5-7. Lifting the hand signifies taking an oath (cf. Gen. 14:22, 23; Dan. 12:7). The announcement of the angel is that there will be no more delay in the establishment of the millennial kingdom of Christ. This presumes a present delay or postponement of the promised kingdom (between Christ's two advents). With the sounding of the seventh trumpet (11:15), the present mystery form of the kingdom will be over (cf. Rom. 11:25) and what God promised to the prophets (e.g., Is. 11; Jer. 31; Ezek. 36, 37; Dan. 7; Zech. 14; cf. Matt. 6:10) will finally be completed.

10:8-10. John is told to eat the little book, and when he does, it becomes sweet in his mouth (cf. Ps. 119:103; Jer. 15:16) but bitter in his belly. The act of eating represents the understanding and appropriation of prophetic revelation. The message is "sweet" because at last the kingdom promises are about to be fulfilled. It is bitter because it can only be accomplished through more judgment and tribulation.

10:11. This verse is a key to the chronology of the Book of Revelation. John is told to prophesy again concerning (Gr. epi, "about" or "concerning," not before) many peoples, and nations, and tongues, and kings. The seal and trumpet judgments have brought the chronology close to the end of the Tribulation period and to the return of Christ to the earth (cf. 11:15). Now John must prophesy through the period a second time, concentrating this time on the major personages and movements of the Tribulation (e.g., Satan, the beasts, the harlot or Babylon system). This duplicated prophecy begins in chapter 12 and culminates in the vial (bowl) judgments, the destruction of the beast, and the return of Christ (chs. 16—19).

11:1, 2. Chapter 11 continues the parenthesis that began with chapter 10. John is told to measure the temple of God, which may be a rebuilt temple in Jerusalem during the Tribulation period or (more likely) the prophesied millennial temple (cf. Ezek. 40—42). The rod is a surveyor's instrument (cf. Zech. 2:1-5). The measuring anticipates the building of a new temple on earth during the Millennium. The outer court represents the control of Jerusalem and Israel by Gentiles during the last half of the Tribulation period. The holy city is the earthly Jerusalem (cf. Dan. 9:24; 11:45; Zech. 13:8, 9; 14:2). The forty and two months show that Jerusalem will be under Gentile control for three-and-a-half years, probably the last half of the seven-year Tribulation period (cf. Dan. 9:24-27, where the period of the Great Tribulation is seen as the Seventieth Week—or seven-year period—in God's postexilic program for Israel).

11:3, 4. God's two witnesses will prophesy or preach in Israel for 1,260 days (three-and-a-half years, based on prophetic years of 360 days each). Again, this will probably occur during the last half of the Tribulation period, while invading Gentile forces are in control of Jerusalem. The sackcloth symbolizes mourning, confession, and repentance. The “witnesses” will proclaim a message of judgment and the need for repentance. They bear similarities to John the Baptist, and will be the ultimate fulfillment of the promised return of Elijah (cf. Mal. 4:5, 6; John 1:21). They are also identified as the two olive trees and the two candlesticks. These symbols relate to Zechariah 4:2-6, where Zerubbabel and Joshua the priest are pictured as two olive trees furnishing oil for a lampstand (Israel). They provided help and power for Israel in a time of need. These two witnesses will be for Israel in the future what Zerubbabel and Joshua were in the past: the channels of God’s power and message to Israel during the Tribulation period.

11:5, 6. They will perform miracles similar to those performed by Moses (cf. Ex. 7:14-20; 8:12) and Elijah (1 Kin. 17:1; 2 Kin 1:10-12; Luke 4:25; James 5:17). They are protected from harm for three-and-a-half years. Their miraculous powers are apparently for the purpose of authenticating their divine message (as in the case of Jesus and His apostles). Their message will be twofold: (1) Jesus is the Lamb of God (Savior); and (2) Jesus is the King (Ruler). The miracles show that the King is coming again to set up His kingdom, and therefore Israel must repent.

11:7-10. The beast from the bottomless pit is apparently the same as the “beast” from the sea in 13:1, the Antichrist or false messiah. His place of origin shows his demonic character and the control of Satan. At the end of the three-and-a-half years of preaching, the witnesses will finally be killed by the beast in the great city, identified as the place where also our Lord was crucified. This must be a reference to Jerusalem, at this time under Antichrist’s control. As such it is called Sodom, referring to uncleanness and immorality, and Egypt, depicting oppression and bondage. Not allowing their dead bodies to be buried is the ultimate indignity. The unbelievers of the earth, having submitted to the authority of the Beast, will rejoice, because they hate the plagues and the message of the two prophets (cf. 1 Kin. 18:17; John 16:20).

11:11-14. The two witnesses are brought back to life, and then taken up into heaven. Their enemies react in fear, since their resurrection is incontrovertible proof that their message was true and that Jesus is God and Messiah. An earthquake kills seven thousand men. (Compare the earthquake that opened tombs and allowed many to be raised at the time of Christ’s death—Matt. 27:51-53.) The remnant are the “rest,” those who are not killed by the earthquake. Many of them repent and give glory to God. The parenthesis begun with chapter 10 ends here. The third woe is the seventh trumpet, which cometh next (v. 15).

11:15. The seventh trumpet results in the establishment of the millennial kingdom of Christ. The seven vials or bowls (16:1) are probably contained in the voices in heaven, saying, ^cThe kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; ^dand he shall reign for ever and ever.

16 And ^athe four and twenty elders, which sat before God on their ¹seats, fell upon their faces, and ^bworshipped God, judgment of the seventh trumpet. They will occur in a very brief period of time at the end of the Great Tribulation. The second coming of Christ, while a great blessing for believers, will be God's most severe judgment of the earth. The kingdoms of this world will be completely overthrown by the coming kingdom of Christ (cf. 19:11-21; Dan. 2:34, 35, 44), who will reign for ever and ever (cf. Dan. 7:13, 14, 27).

11:16-19. God is worshipped by the elders because what He promised is now accomplished. Their gratitude is for the establishment of the millennial kingdom (cf. 1 Cor. 15:24). The Gentile nations will be subjugated (cf. Ps. 2:1, 2). The wrath of God will take vengeance on His enemies (cf. Ps. 2:5; 2 Thess. 1:7, 8). The dead of all ages will be judged at the future Great White Throne (20:11-15). Old Testament and Tribulation saints who have died will be raised and rewarded (cf. Is. 26:19, 20; Dan. 12:2; Matt. 25). Those who have tried to destroy the earth will themselves be destroyed by God (cf. 19:20, 21). The ark of his testament (covenant) is a symbol of the presence of God and of His faithfulness in fulfilling His covenant promises.

12:1, 2. Chapters 12-14 are explanatory prophecies that describe some of the major personages and movements of the latter half of the Tribulation period. The woman represents Israel, and her child is Christ, the Messiah (cf. 12:5; Is. 7:14; 9:6; 66:7, 8; Mic. 5:2; Rom. 9:4, 5). The woman is not the church, since the church did not bring forth Christ, but rather He brought forth the church. Her identification as the persecuted Jewish saints clearly proves that the church is not on earth during the Tribulation period. The sun depicts her as God's chosen nation. The moon under her feet alludes to God's promise of dominion, and the crown of twelve stars pictures royalty and relates to the 12 tribes of Israel. The birth pains refer to the period before the birth of Christ when Israel was waiting for redemption by the Messiah (cf. Rom. 8:22, 23).

12:3, 4. The dragon is identified as Satan in verse 9. His red color shows his murderous character (cf. John 8:44). His seven heads and seven crowns depict the completeness and universality of his power and influence (but cf. Ps. 74:14). His ten horns show Satan's connection with the fourth beast of Daniel 7 (vv. 7, 24) and with the Beast from the sea in chapter 13 of Revelation. The third part of the stars of heaven are probably the fallen angels who followed Satan in his original rebellion against God (cf. Is. 14:12-15; Ezek. 28:12-16; 2 Pet. 2:4; Jude 6). At the time of the birth of Christ, Satan was ready to kill Him (cf. Matt. 2:13-18).

12:5, 6. The man child is Christ, destined to rule all nations as the Messiah (cf. 19:15; Ps. 2:7-9). He was caught up unto God, and to his throne at His ascension into heaven (cf. Acts 1:9; 7:55). The wilderness represents anywhere outside Palestine. During the last half of the Tribulation period (1,260 days = three-and-a-half years), Israel will take refuge among the Gentile nations, where God will care for her (perhaps through Gentile believers—cf. Matt. 25:40). Chronologically, verse 6 occurs after verses 7-12, and is equivalent to verse 14.

The Dragon's Persecution of the Woman

13 And when the dragon saw that he was cast unto the earth, he persecuted ^athe woman which brought forth the ¹man child.

14 ^aAnd to the woman were given two wings of a great eagle, ^bthat she might fly ^cinto the wilderness, into her place, where she is nourished ^dfor a time, and times, and half a time, from the face of the serpent.

15 And the serpent ^acast ¹out of his mouth ²water as a flood after the woman, that he might cause her to be carried away of the flood.

16 And the earth helped the woman, and the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed up the flood which the dragon cast out of his mouth.

17 And the dragon was ¹wroth with the woman, and went to make war with the ²remnant of her seed, which keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ.

12:7-9. The vision of war in heaven anticipates Satan's exclusion from "heaven" and his restriction to the earth during the last half of the Tribulation. Michael the archangel is the leader of God's holy angels (cf. Dan. 10:13, 21; 12:1; Jude 9). Satan is the chief of the fallen angels. At the middle of the Tribulation period, God will empower Michael and his forces to cast Satan and his forces out of access to heaven, so that Satan must thereafter confine his activities to the earthly sphere. He is given four designations: (1) dragon pictures his monstrous character as the enemy of God; (2) serpent connects him with the clever deception of Eve in Genesis 3; (3) Devil means "slanderer" (cf. v. 10); (4) Satan means "Adversary" (cf. 1 Pet. 5:8). He also deceiveth the whole world (cf. 20:8).

12:10-12. The words salvation, strength (Gr. dunamis, "power"), kingdom, and power (Gr. exousia, "authority") all refer to the coming of the millennial kingdom of Christ. With reference to believers, Satan is most commonly a tempter and the accuser of the brethren before God (cf. Job 1:6-12; 2:1-5; Rom. 8:33, 34). Believers can and will overcome him through the blood of Christ and their witness (testimony) about Christ. The last half of the Tribulation will be a time of terrible trouble on earth (cf. Jer. 30:7; Dan. 9:27; 12:1; Zeph. 1:15; Matt. 24:15-22). It will be Satan's final attempt to prevent the return and the reign of Christ. He has only a short time to try to prevent the establishment of Christ's kingdom. Therefore he has great wrath and intensifies his persecution of Israel, God's chosen nation (vv. 13-17), while setting up his own counterfeit kingdom through the Beast, the false messiah (13:1-17).

12:13, 14. Satan's persecution of Israel is apparently an attempt to exterminate God's chosen people, thereby preventing the fulfillment of God's promises to Abraham and David in the messianic kingdom. But God protects Israel (cf. v. 6). The wings of a great eagle represent swift escape from persecution. The wilderness symbolizes the Gentile nations of the world (cf. Matt. 24:16-20, 31), where believers will help to hide Jews from the Antichrist's persecution. According to Zechariah 13:7-9, however, two-thirds of the Israelites will die first. The time, and times, and half a time equals three-and-a-half times, which refers to the last three-and-a-half years of the Tribulation period (cf. Dan. 7:25; 12:7), the time of "great tribulation" (Matt. 24:21).

12:15-17. The flood symbolizes overwhelming evil and persecution (cf. Ps. 18:4; Is. 43:2). Satan, through the Antichrist and his forces, will persecute the Jews throughout the earth, but the Gentile believers of the earth will receive them and hide them. The remnant may be a reference either to (1) Jewish believers, who have refused to worship Satan and his Beast (cf. 13:4, 7, 15); or to (2) Gentile believers, who are the seed of Abraham through Christ (cf. Gal. 3:26, 29). The last half of the Tribulation period will see a worldwide persecution of those who genuinely believe in Jesus Christ (13:7).

The Beast of the Earth

11 And I beheld another beast ^acoming up out of the earth; and he had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon.

12 And he exerciseth all the ¹power of the first beast ²before him, and causeth the earth and them which dwell therein to worship the first beast, ^awhose deadly wound was healed.

13:1, 2. The sea here represents the Gentile nations of the world, from which this beast comes. The Beast is the Antichrist, the false messiah (cf. Matt. 24:5, 24; 1 John 2:18). He is the final Gentile world ruler, also known as the “little horn” (Dan. 7:8, 20, 21, 24, 25), the willful king (Dan. 11:36), the coming prince (Dan. 9:26), and the man of sin (2 Thess. 2:3). In Revelation, he is both a person and an empire. The description of the Beast connects it closely both to the dragon (Satan, 12:3) and to the fourth beast of Daniel 7 (the Roman Empire, Dan. 7:7, 23), though his actions show him to be somewhat distinct from both. (The horns and heads are identified in ch. 17.) He speaks blasphemy against God (cf. vv. 5, 6). His resemblances to a leopard, a bear, and a lion refer to the first three beasts in the vision of Daniel 7 (representing the empires of Babylon, Medo-Persia, and Greece). This Beast includes the people and cultures of the three previous empires, and is an outgrowth of the Roman Empire itself. The power and authority of the Beast come from Satan himself. Satan has his own false “trinity”: Satan acts as the Father, the Antichrist as the Son, and the False Prophet as the Spirit who attempts to bring glory to the Antichrist (cf. vv. 11, 12).

13:3-5. The wound may refer either to the apparent death of the Antichrist himself or to the decline and apparent disappearance of the Roman Empire. The healing of the “wound” may be either the apparent resurrection of the Antichrist or the revival of the Roman Empire. One of his heads is apparently the Roman Empire (cf. 17:10, 11). This revival causes amazement throughout the world. The mouth depicts the blasphemy of the Antichrist against God (cf. 2 Thess. 2:4). He will gain some type of worldwide authority for forty and two months (three-and-a-half years—the last half of the Tribulation—cf. v. 7).

13:6-8. The unbelievers of the world will be deceived into believing that the Beast is a god (cf. 2 Thess. 2:4, 11). Only those whose names are written in the book of life will refuse to worship the Beast. The Beast will persecute the saints of God, and exercise power throughout the world. The Lamb was slain from the foundation of the world in the sense that Christ’s redemptive death for mankind was part of God’s plan from eternity past.

13:9, 10. God will punish those who do evil. The Beast and his followers will be overthrown and judged. Patience (Gr. hupomonē) is perseverance or endurance. Those who have genuine saving faith will endure all the persecution of the Beast (cf. 14:12), because they are God’s saints (Gr. hagiōn, “holy ones”).

13:11, 12. The second beast is the False Prophet (cf. 16:13; 19:20; 20:10), whose role is to bring people to worship the first beast. He is a deceiver (cf. v. 14). His two horns like a lamb represent an attempt to give the impression of gentle harmlessness (cf. Matt. 7:15). His dragon speech depicts his empowerment by Satan. He is given full exercise of the power of the first beast, who is the political ruler. His priestly role identifies him as a religious power or leader. He promotes global worship of the Antichrist.

13 And ^ahe doeth great ¹wonders, ^bso that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men, 14 ^aAnd deceiveth them that dwell on the earth ^bby the means of those miracles which he ¹had power to do in the sight of the beast; saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast, which had the wound by a sword, ^cand did live.

15 And he had power to give ¹life unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak, ^aand cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed.

13:13–15. The False Prophet deceiveth the unbelievers of the earth by means of wonders and miracles (cf. Deut. 13:1–13; Mark 13:22; 2 Thess. 2:9–11), accomplished through satanic power. He will produce the miracles of Elijah (cf. 1 Kin. 18:38; 2 Kin. 1:10), and as a false Elijah he will lead people to worship a false messiah (cf. Matt. 24:24). The image of the beast will apparently be set up in Jerusalem for the worship of the Beast (cf. 2 Thess. 2:4, 9, 11). Jesus called it the “abomination of desolation” (cf. Matt. 24:15; Dan. 9:27). The ability of the “image” to speak is a satanic miracle. The people of the earth must either worship the image of the beast or be killed. There will be no room in the Beast’s empire for religious freedom.

13:16–18. Only unbelievers will receive the mark of the beast. The “mark” will be placed either on the right hand or on the forehead, both very visible places. No one will be able to buy or sell anything without having thus submitted to the political and religious system of the Beast. The word mark (Gr. charagma) is often used to describe an image, stamp, brand, or other mark (cf. Acts 17:29). According to verse 17, the mark of the beast may be (1) the name of the beast (either the person or the empire); (2) the number of the Beast’s name (666); or (3) an image or other representation of the Beast (cf. 3 Maccabees 2:29). The number of the beast is 666, the number of a man (Gr. anthrōpos, “man” or “mankind”). This number may be (1) the number of imperfection or humanity (666, the evil trinity, rather than 777, the holy Trinity—also 888 is the numerical value of Iêsous, i.e., Jesus); (2) a number representing the Antichrist’s name, which will be recognized by believers during the Tribulation period; or (3) a number derived from the Hebrew spelling of Caesar Nero (Kaisar Neron), who prefigured the Antichrist in his evil actions (cf. Antiochus Epiphanes in Daniel 8).

14:1. The Lamb is Christ, and mount Sion (Zion) is the location of Jerusalem. It may refer either to the New Jerusalem (cf. Heb. 12:22–24) or to the earthly Jerusalem during the Millennium. The 144,000 are the same as in chapter 7. Chapter 14 is designed to give encouragement concerning the certainty of Christ’s victory over the Beast.

14:2–5. The 144,000 sing a new song of worship and redemption. The four beasts and elders are the same as in chapter 4. That the 144,000 were virgins and not defiled with women may indicate either (literally) celibacy and sexual purity (cf. 1 Cor. 7:25–38) or (figuratively) moral and religious purity (refusal to submit to the false religious system of the False

FALSE PROPHET

13:11. The chief religious figure in the world during the Tribulation years is identified in Scripture as the False Prophet or the second beast. He will apparently be a Jew, influential in religious affairs, motivated by Satan, having authority delegated to him promoting the worship of the Antichrist, authenticating his ministry with signs and wonders, successfully deceiving the unbelieving world, promoting idolatrous worship, having the power of death, having authority over commerce, and having an identifying physical mark. Illustration: As the Father sent the Son, so will Satan send the Antichrist. As the Son sends the Holy Spirit to accomplish His purpose, so will the False Prophet carry out the program of the Antichrist. Application: Christians should recognize Satan’s attempts to minimize the plans and people of the Godhead, and therefore should guard themselves with biblical doctrine. (First Reference, 2 Thess. 2:9; Primary Reference, Rev. 13:11–18; cf. Matt. 17:11.)

14 And I looked, and behold a white cloud, and upon the cloud one sat like unto the Son of man, having on his head a golden crown, and in his hand a sharp sickle.

15 And another angel ^acame out Prophet). They follow the Lamb and reign with Him. As the firstfruits of the redeemed, they are the first to be saved during the tribulation period (following the Rapture of the church—cf. 7:1-4). A characteristic of the redeemed is that they are without guile or falsehood (cf. 21:27; 22:15; Zeph. 3:13; John 1:47). This may refer to their rejection of the false claims of the Antichrist concerning himself (cf. Rom. 1:25; 2 Thess. 2:4, 11). That they are without fault or blemish means that they are ethically blameless (cf. Eph. 1:4; 5:27; Phil. 2:15; Col. 1:22; 1 Pet. 1:19; Jude 24).

14:6-8. The everlasting gospel is the “Good News” that Christ will win and the Beast will be judged. Positively, it focuses on redemption through Christ and the coming of His kingdom. Negatively, it has three parts: (1) the hour of ... judgment is come (v. 7); (2) Babylon is fallen (v. 8); and (3) those who “worship the beast” will be punished “for ever” (vv. 9-11). The whole world is commanded to fear and worship God and to give glory to him. The identity and destruction of “Babylon” is described in chapters 17 and 18. The announcement here anticipates later events.

14:9-11. Unbelievers during the Tribulation will receive the mark of the beast and worship him. They will all receive God’s eternal punishment in the lake of fire (cf. Matt. 25:41; Rev. 20:15). The wine of the wrath of God is God’s righteous anger (cf. Job 21:20; Ps. 75:8; Is. 51:17; Jer. 25:15-38) poured out in full strength (without mixture or undiluted) on those who reject Him. The cup of his indignation symbolizes the place of God’s punishment of sinners. The fact that this torment will take place in the presence of Christ and His angels makes the punishment even more intense and shameful. They will pay the eternal price of having chosen Satan and evil over God and righteousness.

14:12, 13. Patience here is perseverance or endurance. The assurance of the judgment of God’s enemies is a basis for the perseverance of the Tribulation believers to continue following Christ. The perseverance of genuine believers in the faith and in the commandments of God is assumed and guaranteed. The dead which die in the Lord from henceforth are Tribulation martyrs; they will be blessed through rest, resurrection, and reigning with Christ during the Millennium (cf. 20:4-6). They will receive a reward for their works of obedience.

14:14-16. The Son of man is Christ, the Messiah (cf. 1:13; Dan. 7:13; Matt. 26:63, 64). The cloud relates to Christ’s second coming (cf. Dan. 7:13; Matt. 24:30; Acts 1:9-11). The crown pictures Him as the ruler of of the temple, crying with a loud voice to him that sat on the cloud, ^bThrust in thy sickle, and reap: for the time is come for thee to reap; for the harvest ^cof the earth is ripe.

16 And he that sat on the cloud thrust in his sickle on the earth; and the earth was reaped.

17 And another angel came out of the temple which is in heaven, he also having a sharp sickle.

18 And another angel came out from the altar, ^awhich had power over fire; and cried with a loud cry to him that had the sharp sickle, saying, ^bThrust in thy sharp sickle, and gather the clusters of the vine of the earth; for her grapes are fully ripe.

19 And the angel thrust in his sickle into the earth, and gathered the vine of the earth, and cast it into ^athe great winepress of the wrath of God.

20 And the ^awinepress was ¹trodden ^bwithout² the city, and blood came out of the winepress, ^ceven unto the horse bridles, by the space of a thousand and six hundred ³furlongs.

2 And I saw as it were ^aa sea of glass ^bmingled with fire: and them that had gotten the victory over the beast, ^cand over his image, and over his mark, and over the ^dnumber of his name, stand on the sea of glass, ^ehaving the harps of God.

3 And they sing ^athe song of Moses the servant of God, and the song of the ^bLamb, saying, ^cGreat and marvellous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; ^djust and true are thy ways, thou King of saints.

4 ^aWho shall not fear thee, O Lord, and glorify thy name? for thou only art ^bholy: for ^call nations shall come and worship before thee; for thy judgments are made manifest.

The Tabernacle of the Testimony

5 And after that I looked, and, behold, ^athe ¹temple of the tabernacle of the testimony in heaven was opened:

6 And the seven angels came out of the ¹temple, having the seven plagues, ^aclothed in pure and white linen, and having their ²breasts girded with golden ³girdles.

7 ^aAnd one of the four ¹beasts gave unto the seven angels seven golden ²vials full of the wrath of God, ^bwho liveth for ever and ever.

8 And ^athe temple was filled with the earth, and the sickle symbolizes judgment as an instrument of the harvest (cf. John 5:27). The time is come to finish the judgment of the earth. The second coming of Christ includes more judgment. To reap and harvest the earth is to judge and punish its people (cf. Jer. 51:33; Hos. 6:11; Matt. 13:30, 40–42).

15:8 ^a Ex. 19:18; 40:34; Lev. 16:2; 1 Kin. 8:10; 2 Chr. 5:13; Is. 6:4

14:17–20. Whereas verses 14–16 picture Christ's judgment as a grain harvest, verses 17–20 symbolize the wrath of God as a grape harvest with the treading of the grape clusters in an immense winepress. Again the sickle depicts judgment. The clusters of the vine of the earth represent the unbelievers of the earth, those who have followed and worshiped the Beast (vv. 8–11). Her grapes are fully ripe (Gr. akmazō, "at the prime") in that the time for God's judgment of the earth is now! The great winepress of the wrath of God pictures the violence and intensity of God's coming judgment on the earth (cf. 19:15; Is. 63:2–6; Lam. 1:15; Joel 3:12–14). The city is probably Jerusalem (cf. Joel 3:12–14; Zech. 14:1–4; John 19:20; Heb. 13:12), and if so, the greatest intensity of the judgment may be centered in Palestine. Perhaps the reference is to the coming Battle of Armageddon (16:14–16). The blood may be either the red juice of the grapes (cf. Gen. 49:11; Deut. 32:14) or literal human blood resulting from the final battle. The amount of "blood" that results from the winepress emphasizes the severity of the judgment. A thousand and six hundred furlongs are approximately 184 miles, the full length of Palestine. The height of the horse bridles may be about four feet. The winepress may be an anticipation of the vial or bowl judgments of chapter 16.

15:1. The wrath of God began with the seven seals (ch. 6), and will be finished with the seven last plagues, which are the seven vials (v. 7). Chapter 15 is an introduction to these "last plagues."

15:2–4. The sea of glass was before God's throne in 4:6. The victory over the beast is won through faith in Christ (2:7, 11, 17, 26; 3:5, 12, 21; 1 John 5:4, 5) and refusal to submit to the Antichrist. The song of Moses may refer either to Exodus 15 or Deuteronomy 32. The deliverance of Israel from Egypt prefigured the deliverance of the Tribulation saints from the Antichrist. They praise and worship God for His power and His righteousness. All nations will come and worship God in the millennial kingdom.

15:5–8. The seven angels prepare to administer the last seven Tribulation judgments of Christ: the seven vials (cf. 16:1–17; 17:1; 21:9). The vials are actually shallow bowls (Gr. phialē), used for pouring smoke ^bfrom the glory of God, and from his power; and no man was able to enter into the temple, till the seven plagues of the seven angels were fulfilled.

The Fourth Vial

9 And men were scorched with great heat, and ^ablasphemed the name of God, which hath power over these plagues: ^band they repented not ^cto give him glory.

10 And the fifth angel poured out his ¹vial ^aupon the ²seat of the beast; ^band his kingdom was full of darkness; ^cand they gnawed their tongues for pain, libations (cf. 5:8; 1 Chr. 28:17; Jer. 52:18; Zech. 9:15; 14:20). The bowls are full of the wrath of God (cf. 2 Thess. 1:7-9). God has the right to judge, because He is the Eternal One, the Almighty. The temple represents the presence of God Himself. The smoke is like the incense that filled the Holy of Holies in the tabernacle. Until the seven plagues are finished, no one is able to enter into the temple. The time for intercession is past; God's judgment will now be completed.

16:1. The vials of the wrath of God represent the climax of God's punishment of sinners during the Tribulation period. No repentance is invited or shown. The emptying of the bowls takes place very rapidly in a short period of time. The judgments are somewhat parallel both to the 10 plagues on Egypt (cf. Ex. 7-12) and to the trumpets (chs. 8, 9). The bowls are more total and universal in their effects than were the trumpets, and generally affect people more directly.

16:2. The first vial produces a painful sore on all the followers of the beast, wherever they are. This parallels the boils of the sixth plague on Egypt (Ex. 9:9-11; cf. Deut. 28:27; Job 2:7-13).

16:3. The second vial turns the entire sea to blood, and produces the death of all sea life. The blood of a dead man is coagulated and rotting. No evaporation for rain would be possible. This judgment parallels both the first plague on Egypt (Ex. 7:20, 21) and the second trumpet (8:8, 9).

16:4-7. The third vial turns all fresh waters to blood, so that no pure water for drinking is left on earth. This again parallels the first Egyptian plague, but also the third trumpet (8:10, 11). That it is righteous for God to judge the earth thus is shown by the fact that the Beast and his followers have shed the blood of saints and prophets. Those who shed the blood of God's people must now drink blood (cf. Is. 49:26).

16:8, 9. The fourth vial scorches the earth with fire from the sun. This is the opposite of the fourth trumpet (8:12). The followers of the Beast are scorched as well (contrast 7:16). Since they have by now made a permanent decision to reject God and follow the Beast, they blaspheme the name of God and refuse to repent. Like Pharaoh, their hearts have become hardened (cf. Ex. 7:13, 22; 8:15, 19, 32; 9:7, 34, 35).

16:10, 11. The fifth vial produces darkness on the seat and kingdom of the beast. His seat is his throne or headquarters—probably either Rome or Jerusalem. His followers suffer pain, agony, and fear. There are parallels with both the ninth plague on Egypt (Ex. 10:21-29) and the fourth trumpet (8:12). The sores of the first vial continue, and the Beast's followers continue to blaspheme God and refuse to repent of their sins.

The Sixth Vial

12 And the sixth angel poured out his ¹vial ^aupon the great river Euphrates; ^band the water thereof was dried up, ^cthat the way of the kings of the east might be prepared.

13 And I saw three unclean ^aspirits like frogs come out of the mouth of ^bthe dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of ^cthe false prophet.

14 For they are the spirits of ¹devils, ^aworking² miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth ^band of the whole world, to gather them to ^cthe battle of that great day of God Almighty.

15 Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame.

16 ^aAnd he gathered them together into a place called in the Hebrew tongue ¹Armageddon.

The Seventh Vial

17 And the seventh angel poured out his ¹vial into the air; and there came a great voice out of the temple of heaven, from the throne, saying, ^aIt is done.

21 And there fell upon men a great hail out of heaven, every stone about the weight of a talent: and men blasphemed God because of the plague of the hail; for the plague thereof was exceeding great.

The Woman and the Scarlet Beast

17 And there came ^aone of the seven ¹angels which had the seven ¹vials, and talked with me, saying unto me, Come hither; ^bI will show unto thee the judgment of ^cthe great ²whore ^dthat sitteth upon many waters:

16:12–16. The sixth vial results in the gathering of the armies of the whole world together in Palestine for the battle of Armageddon. The river Euphrates, at the northeastern boundary of the promised kingdom of Israel, is dried up, so that the kings of the east may come into Palestine. These kings are unidentified (perhaps they are from China, India, or other Oriental nations), but there may be a parallel with the sixth trumpet (9:13–21) and its 200,000,000 horsemen (9:14, 16). The three unclean spirits are demons who support the activities of Satan, the beast, and the false prophet. By means of miracles, they will convince the eastern “kings” and all the armies and kings of the earth and of the whole world to gather in Palestine to fight against the second coming of Christ (cf. 19:19). This is Satan’s final attempt to prevent Christ’s return. Verse 15 is an exhortation to the surviving believers to be watchful and alert (cf. Matt. 24:32–25:13), and to remain faithful and loyal to Christ during a time of intense persecution. To have garments, rather than be naked, relates to spiritual preparedness. Verse 16 identifies the place of the final battle as Armageddon, from the Hebrew Har Megiddon (the Hill of Megiddo). The hill country of Megiddo and the adjacent valley of Esdraelon have been the site of many important battles (cf. Judg. 5:19; 2 Kin. 9:27; 23:29).

16:17–21. The seventh vial produces the destruction of Babylon, the great city. Babylon is further described and identified in chapters 17 and 18. The statement It is done shows that with this vial and the return of Christ Himself, the judgments are now finished. A tremendous earthquake destroys the great city and the cities of the nations. The cup symbolizes the wrath of God (cf. 14:10). The large hail (a talent weighs about 60 to 100 pounds) may help to destroy the “cities” (cf. Josh. 10:11; Ezek. 38:18–22). But unbelieving mankind still blasphemes God and has no opportunity for repentance. The seventh vial is the last of the seven plagues (15:6–8), and also completes both the seventh trumpet (11:15) and the seventh seal (8:1).

17:1–3. Chapters 17 and 18 picture the judgment of God on a system, empire, or city called Babylon the Great (17:5); it is a more detailed description of the seventh vial (16:17). The great whore (v. 1) is named “BABYLON THE GREAT” in verse 5. Chapters 17 and 18 show her judgment. The waters represent the various peoples and nations of the earth (v. 15). She sitteth upon them in the sense that she has worldwide influence. Her harlotry and fornication refer either to physical immorality or (more likely) spiritual adultery (idolatry and religious apostasy—cf. Is. 1:21; 23:16, 17; Jer. 2:20–37; 13:27; Ezek. 16:15–43; Hos. 2:5; Nah. 3:4). The kings and inhabitants of the earth have opened their arms to her influence. The beast is the first Beast of chapter 13—the Antichrist and his empire. Her sitting upon the Beast represents the intimate association between the Antichrist and the harlot (an association of support, influence, or control).

2 ^aWith whom the kings of the earth have committed fornication, and ^bthe inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication.

3 So he carried me away in the ¹spirit ^ainto the wilderness: and I saw a woman sit ^bupon a scarlet coloured beast, full of ^cnames of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns.

4 And the woman ^awas arrayed in purple and scarlet colour, ^band ¹decked with gold and precious stones and pearls, ^chaving a golden cup in her hand ^dfull of abominations and filthiness of her fornication:

5 And upon her forehead was a name written, ^aMYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH.

The Mystery of the Woman and the Beast

7 And the angel said unto me, Wherefore didst thou marvel? I will tell thee the mystery of the woman, and of the beast that carrieth her, which hath the seven heads and ten horns.

8 The beast that thou sawest was, and is not; and ^ashall ascend out of the bottomless pit, and ^bgo into ¹perdition: and they that ^cdwell on the earth ^dshall ²wonder, ^ewhose names were not written in the book of life from the foundation of the world, when they behold the beast that was, and is not, and yet is.

9 And ^ahere is the mind which hath wisdom. ^bThe seven heads are seven mountains, on which the woman sitteth.

10 And there are seven kings: five ¹are fallen, and one is, and the other is not yet come; and when he cometh, he must ^acontinue a short ²space.

11 And the ^abeast that was, and is 17:4-6. The elegant clothing and jewelry of the woman show her wealth and attractiveness, but her activities are filthy and abominable to God. Her mystery name is BABYLON THE GREAT. Ancient Babylon is a type or prefigurement of this future Babylon. The harlot will do what literal Babylon did in the past: (1) oppress God's people, and (2) propagate a false religious system. Much of the world's idolatry can be traced back to historical Babylon (cf. Gen. 11:1-9), including the mother-child cult of Semiramis-Tammuz (cf. Jer. 44:16-19; Ezek. 8:9, 14), which entered other cultures as Ashtaroth-Baal, Aphrodite-Eros, Venus-Cupid, and even Madonna-Child. As the fountainhead of idolatry, Babylon the harlot is the MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH. The harlot has killed many of God's saints and Christian martyrs throughout the ages, and will do so again during the Tribulation period. Admiration (Gr. thauma) here means "amazement" (cf. 13:3; 17:7).

17:7, 8. Verses 7-18 contain a more detailed explanation of the entities depicted symbolically as a woman and a beast. The Beast as an empire goes through four stages, from the viewpoint of the beginning of the Tribulation period: (1) It was, that is, it existed in the form of the ancient Roman Empire. (2) It is not, that is, it has not existed as an empire since the fifth century and will not exist again until the Antichrist gains worldwide authority during the Tribulation period. (3) It shall ascend out of the bottomless pit, that is, Satan will raise up the Antichrist as his false messiah and give him worldwide rule (cf. 11:7; 13:3, 4). And (4) the Antichrist will be cast into perdition, the lake of fire (cf. 19:20). Unbelievers will wonder in amazement at this revival of the power and glory of the Roman Empire (cf. 13:3).

17:9. The seven heads of the Beast represent seven mountains, on which the woman sitteth. The city of Rome was known throughout the ancient world as a city built on seven hills or mountains. John notes that the wise mind will make the proper identification. The woman apparently represents idolatrous, anti-God civilization, centered at Rome but with worldwide influence (cf. v. 15). The identification of the seven heads as Rome shows that the Beast will have his major base of operations at Rome also (cf. Dan. 9:26—the "people of the prince that shall come" are the Romans in A.D. 70).

17:10. The seven kings may represent: (1) seven rulers in the Roman Empire (from Augustus to Domitian and Antichrist); or (2) the seven horns left on the fourth beast of Daniel 7 after three horns are pulled up by the roots (cf. Dan. 7:8, 20); or most likely, (3) the seven kingdoms or empires that throughout history have ruled over Israel and much of the known world: Egypt, Assyria, Babylonia, Medo-Persia, Greece, Rome, and the revived Roman Empire (of the early Tribulation period). Five are fallen (are past); one is the Roman Empire existing at the time of John; and the seventh (revived Rome) is not yet come. This revived Roman Empire is represented in Daniel by the 10 toes in the image of Daniel 2:41-44 and by the 10 horns on the fourth beast of Daniel 7:7, 20, 24, and in Revelation by the 10 horns on the first Beast (13:1; 17:3, 12, 13). It will exist as a major power only a short while, since it will then give its authority to the Beast (vv. 11-13).

17:11. The beast, the final world kingdom ruled by the Antichrist, is the eighth king or kingdom. He not, even he is the eighth, and is of the seven, and goeth into ¹perdition.

12 And ^athe ten horns which thou sawest are ^aten kings, which have received no kingdom as yet; but receive ¹power as kings one hour with the beast.

13 These have one mind, and shall give their power and ¹strength unto the beast.

14 ^aThese shall make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall ^bovercome them: ^cfor he is Lord of lords, and King of kings: ^aand they that are with him are called, and chosen, and faithful.

15 And he saith unto me, ^aThe waters which thou sawest, where the ¹whore sitteth, ^bare peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues.

16 And the ten horns which thou sawest upon the beast, ^athese shall hate the whore, and shall make her ^bdesolate ^cand naked, and shall eat her flesh, and ^aburn her with fire.

17 ^aFor God hath put in their hearts to fulfil his will, and to ¹agree, and give their kingdom unto the beast, ^buntil the words of God shall be fulfilled.

is of the seven in that he is the culmination of all the previous, pagan, idolatrous empires. But he will go into perdition, the lake of fire (cf. v. 8; 19:20).

17:12-14. The ten horns on the Beast represent ten kings of the future revived Roman Empire (cf. Dan. 2:41-44; 7:24). Their worldwide power will come in association with the beast. One hour indicates a relatively short time (cf. 18:10, 17, 19). These rulers of a 10-nation federation will unitedly give their political authority and military power to the beast to conquer the earth and make war against Christ (cf. 16:14; 19:19). The purpose of Satan through the Beast and fellow kings is to establish an invincible kingdom that Christ cannot overcome when He returns. But Christ is King of all kings, and will overcome the Beast and his kingdom when He returns (cf. 19:11-21). Those who follow Christ are called and chosen by Him, and faithful to Him (cf. 19:7, 8, 14).

17:15-18. The whore has been described as sitting (1) on many waters (v. 1), (2) on the Beast (v. 3), and (3) on seven mountains (v. 9). Here the waters are identified as peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues, indicating the worldwide influence and authority of the harlot. In verse 18, she is identified as that great city, which reigneth over the kings of the earth, referring probably to a worldwide, idolatrous, pagan system centered at Rome. Toward the end of the Tribulation period, however, the 10 kings (cf. v. 12) will destroy the harlot system (cf. 18:6-24). They will do this as God's will, and will turn their total devotion and worship to the beast himself (cf. 13:12; 17:13; Dan. 11:36-39). The 10 kings will be God's instrument to destroy the harlot Babylon (cf. 16:19; 18:5, 6; 19:2). The destruction of the woman or harlot is pictured as the destruction of a great city in chapter 18.

18:1-3. That the city Babylon in chapter 18 is the same as the whore or harlot in chapter 17 is shown by: (1) the parallels between the two (cf. 17:1-6, 15-18 with 18:2, 3, 6-8, 12, 18-24); (2) the identification of the harlot as the "great city" in 17:18; (3) the summary of Babylon's judgment in 19:2, 3; and (4) the fact that the imagery in both chapters comes from Old Testament references to Tyre, Nineveh, and Babylon (cf. Is. 13, 14, 23; Ezek. 26-28; Jer. 50, 51). The language of chapter 18 is highly figurative. The phrase after these things shows that chapter 18 is a further revelation concerning Babylon: the results of her destruction. In verse 2 her doom is announced: Babylon the great is fallen (cf. Is. 21:9). The reference to devils (demons) and every foul spirit shows the total destruction and utter desolation of the harlot system. All nations: The system had worldwide influence and control. For the wine and fornication, see 17:2. Rich: The merchants of the earth have become wealthy through the apostate, idolatrous system centered at Rome.

18:4-8. Believers must be separate from the harlot system, or else they may be found to share in her sins and thereby receive part of her judgment. God hath remembered her iniquities: The day of judgment for sin has arrived. The double judgment emphasizes full punishment for her sins (cf. Jer. 16:18; 17:18; 50:29). That she calls herself a queen and no widow shows her arrogant self-confidence (cf. Is. 47:7, 8). She sees herself as beyond any possibility of personal sorrow. But the humbling of the harlot (cf. Luke 14:11) will involve torment and sorrow. One day may be a literal day or a symbol for the suddenness of the destruction. The fire may also be either literal fire or a symbol of the judgment of God (cf. Jer. 51:25-58). It is reminiscent of the burning of Rome in A.D. 64.

18:9-20. These verses consist of three laments over the fallen city of Babylon—from the perspective of kings (vv. 9, 10), merchants (vv. 11-16), and seamen (vv. 17-19; cf. Ezek. 27)—followed by a call for rejoicing on the part of God's people and His angels (v. 20). The kings of verse 9 are not the kings (represented by horns) of 17:16, but rather various earthly kings who have participated in the Babylonian system. The laments picture utter chaos on the earth at the end of the Tribulation period. The merchants will find nothing to buy or sell. In one hour: The destruction will come suddenly and quickly (v. 17). The world's pagan economic system will collapse. They cast dust on their heads as a sign of mourning and sorrow (v. 19; cf. Job 2:12; Lam. 2:10; Ezek. 27:30). God hath avenged you on her: God at last judges the Babylonian system for its treatment of God's people—particularly those who are martyred during the Tribulation (cf. 6:9-11). Verse 20 shows heaven's perspective on the judgment.

Babylon Will Be Thrown Down

18:21-24. These verses picture from within the results of the collapse of the Babylonian system. The finality of its destruction is shown by the sixfold repetition of the phrase no more at all. The stone cast into the sea depicts the violence and permanence of the destruction. The Babylonian system began in Genesis 10, and has continued uninterrupted in one form or another to the present day. But one day it will suddenly "sink," never to return. In verses 23b, 24, three reasons are given for the destruction of Babylon: (1) its arrogance, (2) its deception of the nations, and (3) its persecution and martyrdom of God's people.

19:1-5. Chapters 19 and 20 bring the climax of the Book of Revelation: the return of Christ to establish His millennial kingdom. But first, these five verses show heaven's response to the judgment of the harlot. The multitude in heaven praises God for judging the great whore (Babylon, the harlot) and avenging the blood of the martyrs (cf. 7:9-17). The word alleluia is the Greek equivalent of hallelujah, and means "Praise Yahweh" or "Praise the Lord" (cf. Pss. 106; 111-113; 117; 135; 146-150). The eternal smoke symbolizes the permanence of Babylon's destruction (cf. Is. 34:8-10). Amen derives from a Hebrew word meaning "to be firm," and may be translated "truly" or "so be it"

19:6-10. Omnipotent: God is all-powerful, and reigneth over His universe. The marriage of the Lamb: The wife or bride of Christ is the church (cf. Matt. 22:2-14; John 3:29; 2 Cor. 11:2; Eph. 5:25-32), and the marriage is the eternal union of the church with Christ following the Rapture (cf. 1 Thess. 4:17). The fine linen, clean and white, represents the righteousness of the church, which has now been judged and purified at the judgment seat of Christ (cf. 1 Cor. 3:12-15; 2 Cor. 5:10). The marriage supper of the Lamb represents the millennial kingdom of Christ, which will take place on earth following the return of Christ (20:4; cf. Matt. 25:1-13; Luke 14:15-24). The Jewish marriage consisted of three major elements: (1) the betrothal; (2) the presentation; and (3) the marriage feast (supper). Figuratively, with reference to the church, (1) the betrothal takes place on earth during the church age; (2) the presentation will take place in heaven following the Rapture (cf. v. 7); and (3) the marriage feast will take place on earth following Christ's return with the church (cf. vv. 11-14). Called: Those who are invited to the marriage supper are Israel, who will turn to Christ in faith during the Tribulation (cf. Jer. 31:31-34; Zech. 12:10; 13:9; Rom. 11:25-27). Worship: Only God is to be worshiped (cf. 22:8, 9; Acts 10:25, 26). Spirit of prophecy: The person and message of Jesus is the essence of all true prophecy.

19:11-13. This white horse is not that of 6:2. Here the True Messiah returns in victorious conquest. He is Faithful to His Word and promises. He will fulfill the twofold role of judge and warrior. His judgment of the earth will be totally righteous (cf. 16:5-7; 19:2; Ps. 96:13). The fire depicts glory and judgment. The crowns indicate total sovereignty and authority (contrast 12:3; 13:1). The secret name expresses the mystery and greatness of the person of Christ (cf. 2:17; 3:12; 19:13, 16; Phil. 2:9-11). The blood represents the judgment of Christ’s enemies (cf. 14:14-20; Is. 63:1-6). The name Word of God presents Christ as the revelation of God Himself (cf. John 1:1, 14; 1 John 1:1). In His first advent, Jesus especially revealed the love and grace of God (cf. John 1:17; Rom. 5:8). But in His second advent, He will reveal the holiness, justice, and judgment of God (cf. Heb. 4:12).

19:14-16. The armies may be (1) angels (cf. Zech. 14:5; Matt. 26:53); (2) the raptured church; or (3) all the inhabitants of the heavenly Jerusalem: angels, the church, and spirits of Old Testament and Tribulation saints (cf. Heb. 12:22-24). They will share in Christ’s victory and glory (cf. Rom. 8:18, 19). The linen symbolizes righteousness (cf. v. 8). The sword from His mouth depicts judgment through His spoken Word (cf. 1:16; 2:12, 16; Is. 11:4; 2 Thess. 2:8). Smite the nations: Christ will destroy all unbelievers (cf. 19:21; Matt. 25:41, 46; 2 Thess. 1:8, 9). Rod of iron: Christ will subject all nations to Himself, and destroy all His enemies (cf. Ps. 2:8, 9; 1 Cor. 15:24, 25). Winepress: See 14:17-20. Words relating to wrath and anger are found 15 times in Revelation. KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS: Christ has universal sovereignty. He is King over all who call themselves kings, and Lord over all who call themselves lords (cf. 17:14; Deut. 10:17; Dan. 2:47; 1 Tim. 6:15).

19:17, 18. The supper of the great God is different from the marriage supper of the Lamb (v. 9). Here, God calls the fowls or birds of the sky to gather to eat the flesh of those who have died in the Battle of Armageddon (cf. 16:14, 16; 19:21; Ezek. 39:17-20). All men indicates “all kinds of men”; not everyone at Armageddon will be an unbeliever (cf. Matt. 25:31-46).

SECOND COMING OF CHRIST

19:11-16. Throughout both Old and New Testaments, the Scriptures teach a literal, physical (bodily), and visible return of Christ to this earth to establish His kingdom and rule for a thousand years. The greatest theme of all Bible prophecy is the second coming of Christ. This was the theme of mankind’s first prophecy (Jude 14, 15), and of the last message of the Bible (22:20). Illustration: While certain events and experiences may occur in the lives of individuals (Christ appearing to those who are saved, or to those who die), these are of course not the ultimate return of Christ. The term Second Coming should be reserved for His final revelation at the end of the age. Application: In anticipation of the Second Coming, Christians should live soberly, righteously, and godly (Titus 2:12). (First Reference, Jude 14; Primary Reference, Rev. 19:11-16; cf. Rom. 2:1-16.)

The rest of the kings and armies will be killed by the Word of Christ, and will be eaten by the birds (vv. 17, 18). The unbelieving survivors of the Tribulation will be judged by Christ and also sentenced to everlasting fire (cf. Matt. 25:41, 46).

20:1–3. The bottomless pit is simply the Abyss (Gr. abussos), the abode of evil spirits (cf. 9:1–11; Luke 8:31). The key shows authority, and the chain depicts imprisonment and binding. Before the millennial kingdom begins, Satan (cf. 12:9) is bound in the Abyss. The seal indicates God's authority and guarantee that Satan will not be released until a thousand years have passed. During the Millennium (Latin for "one thousand years") Satan will not be able to tempt or deceive the nations. Any temptation to sin during the Millennium must come from within those people who are born after the kingdom begins. It must be assumed that all of Satan's demons or fallen angels are also imprisoned at this time (cf. Is. 24:21–23). Christ will reign on earth without opposition, and His kingdom will be characterized by righteousness, peace, and love (cf. Is. 2:3, 4; 11:3–5; 35:1, 2; Dan. 7:14; Zech. 14:9). However, after the thousand years Satan will be released for a short while (vv. 7–9).

20:4. The thrones represent the administration of the messianic kingdom. Those whom John sees come to life are the Tribulation martyrs, who refused to worship the beast. They will rule the earth with Christ for a thousand years. Christ will rule through three classes of kingdom administrators: (1) Old Testament saints (cf. Is. 26:19; Dan. 12:2), who will be resurrected at this time; (2) the apostles and the church (cf. Matt. 19:28, 29); and (3) Tribulation saints (cf. Luke 19:12–27). Only believers will enter the Millennium at its beginning (cf. John 3:3, 5). God's promises to Abraham (Gen. 12:2, 3) and David (2 Sam. 7:16) will be fulfilled (cf. Luke 1:31–33; Rom. 11:15, 29). After the Millennium, Christ will deliver the kingdom to God the Father and will then be appointed Ruler forever (cf. 1 Cor. 15:24–28).

20:5, 6. The first part of verse 5 is a parenthesis, and comes chronologically after verse 11. The first resurrection is the resurrection included in verse 4. It has three principal phases: (1) the resurrection of Christ (the firstfruits—1 Cor. 15:23; cf. Rev. 1:5); (2) the resurrection of the church (the dead in Christ—1 Cor. 15:23; 1 Thess. 4:16); and (3) the resurrection of Old Testament and Tribulation saints (v. 4; Is. 26:19; Dan. 12:2). The rest of the dead (unbelievers) will be raised in the second resurrection, described in verses 12 and 13. The first resurrection is a resurrection to life (cf. John 5:28, 29), whereas the second resurrection is a resurrection to death. The second death is eternal punishment in the lake of fire (20:14).

The Book of Life

11 And I saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it, from whose face ^athe earth and the heaven fled away; ^band there was found no place for them.

12 And I saw the dead, ^asmall and great, stand before God; ^band the books were opened: and another ^cbook was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, ^daccording to their works.

13 And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; ^aand death and ¹hell delivered up the dead which were in them: ^band they were judged every man according to their works.

14 And ^adeath and ¹hell were cast into the lake of fire. ^bThis is the second death.

15 And whosoever was not found written in the book of life ^awas cast into the lake of fire.

20:7–10. Many of the believers who enter the Millennium in unresurrected, natural bodies as survivors of the Tribulation (cf. Matt. 25:34) will have children, who will also reproduce throughout the thousand years. Many of the descendants will remain unsaved and unregenerate, and will therefore be able to sin. At the end of the Millennium, Satan will be released from prison to make one last attempt to defeat Christ. He will deceive the nations into rebellion against God. The reference to Gog and Magog shows that this final battle will be similar to the invasion described in Ezekiel 38. The beloved city is the earthly Jerusalem, headquarters of Christ’s millennial kingdom (cf. Is. 60:1–22; Zech. 14:1–20). The rebels will be quickly destroyed by fire ... from God. Satan will then be cast into the lake of fire with his henchmen, the Antichrist and the False Prophet (cf. 19:20). Their torment will be eternal.

20:11. The throne depicts divine government and judgment (cf. Dan. 7:9, 10, 26, 27). The judge may be Christ Himself (cf. John 5:22). The throne is great or huge (contrast v. 4) and is white or shining in appearance (signifying glory, purity, and holiness). The judgment will take place neither on earth nor in the atmospheric heaven (contrast Matt. 25:31–46), since the present universe will be dissolved (cf. 21:1; Is. 51:6; Matt. 24:35; 2 Pet. 3:10–12).

20:12, 13. The dead are the unbelieving dead of all the ages—the “rest of the dead” mentioned in verse 5. They are judged from two sets of books. The books contain the record of every unsaved person’s life. Each unsaved person is judged in accordance with his works (cf. Rom. 2:6, 16), which clearly show that each one is a guilty sinner (cf. Rom. 3:9–19) deserving of eternal death (cf. Rom. 3:23; 6:23). The book of life contains the name of every person who has received eternal life through faith alone (cf. John 20:31; 1 John 5:11–13). These unsaved people are shown that they did not take advantage of the offer of eternal life through faith (cf. Rom. 9:32; 10:3). Death and hell (Hades) are the temporary holding places of unsaved men’s bodies and souls, respectively (cf. Luke 16:19–31).

20:14, 15. The second death is eternal punishment in the lake of fire, experienced only by the unsaved. Once this final judgment occurs, there is no further need for either death or hell (Hades) (cf. 1:18; 6:8; Is. 25:8; 1 Cor. 15:26, 55). An eternal separation is now made between those who have life and those who have “death” (cf. Dan. 12:2; John 5:29).

DEATH

20:15. The Scriptures never refer to death as the mere cessation of life, but instead as the unnatural separation of something from that to which it belongs. Therefore, a body without the spirit suffers physical death (Gen. 35:18). The expression second death defines the separation of a man from God. Illustration: Human consciousness is conveyed in the biblical description of second death, suggesting that the beast and the False Prophet will both remain alive for a thousand years after being cast into the lake of fire (19:20; 20:10). Application: When a person is saved, he has passed from death to life, and can be assured he will never come into condemnation (John 5:24). (First Reference, Gen. 2:17; Primary Reference, Rev. 20:15; cf. Mark 9:43.)

21:1, 2. Chapters 21 and 22 are a description of the eternal state (following the Millennium and the final judgment), centering in the new Jerusalem as the eternal habitation of the saved (cf. Heb. 11:10; 12:22-24). The first heaven and a new earth are replaced by a new heaven and a new earth, predicted by Isaiah (cf. Is. 65:17; 66:22). The present universe will thus be cleansed from all the effects of sin (cf. 2 Pet. 3:7, 10-13). Since there will be no more sea, the increased land space will be fully capable of handling large numbers of redeemed people from all ages. The New Jerusalem is fully described in 21:10-22:5. It is a holy city, totally separate from sin (cf. vv. 8, 27; 22:15). It is being prepared (Gr. hetoimazō, cf. John 14:3) as the habitation of the bride of Christ (cf. v. 9). From God shows its divine purpose, and out of heaven its divine origin.

21:3-5. Tabernacle of God: The presence of God will be with His people, and He will forever dwell with them. A primary purpose of redemption will be accomplished: the complete fellowship of God with His redeemed people. In the eternal state, there will be no tears, death, sorrow, crying, or pain. Everything will become new. God's promises are true, and He is always faithful to His Word (cf. 19:11).

21:6-8. It is done: The eternal purpose of God to gather a holy, devoted people for Himself has now been accomplished. Alpha and Omega: See 1:8; 22:13. Beginning: God is the origin and source of all things (cf. Is. 41:4; 44:6; 48:12). End: He is also the goal or aim of all things (cf. Rom. 10:4). The water of life represents eternal sustenance and provision (cf. 22:1; Ps. 36:9; Is. 55:1; Jer. 2:13; John 4:14), available freely by faith (22:17). He that overcometh is the one who has genuine, saving, persevering faith (cf. 2:11; 3:5; 1 John 5:4, 5). He will inherit all that belongs to him as a son of God (cf. John 1:12; Rom. 8:16, 17; Gal. 3:29; 4:7). But sinners, who have shown their rebellion against God by their life-style of sin, have already been cast into the lake of fire (20:12-15; cf. 22:15). The second death is eternal death (cf. 20:14).

21:9-21. These verses describe the beauty and glory of the holy Jerusalem. It is called Christ's bride (cf. v. 2), a reference perhaps to the church as the city's principal inhabitant. It is an expression of the glory of God. The wall shows its security and protection. Its gates show accessibility. Saved Israel is also present. It has dimensions of approximately 1,500 miles cubed. The gold and precious stones may be earthly materials glorified (cf. 1 Cor. 15:50-54). They depict the glory, beauty, and eternal quality of the city. Jasper is green, sapphire is blue, chalcidony is green, emerald is green, sardonyx is red and white, sardius is bloodred, chrysolite is yellow or gold, beryl is green, topaz is greenish gold or yellow, chrysoprasus is green, jacinth is bluish purple, and amethyst is purple quartz. The effect is a magnificent city of brilliant gold adorned with gems of every color. There appears to be only one street (cf. 22:2), also made of pure, radiant gold.

21:22, 23. There is no temple in the city, since both the Father and the Son will be present in their fullest manifestations. Its light will be provided by the Shekinah glory of God and of Christ (cf. Ex. 3:3, 4; 24:15-17; 33:14-16; Luke 2:9; 9:29; Heb. 1:3).

21:24-27. The glory of God in the New Jerusalem will light the earth. Whether this is the new earth (v. 1) or the millennial earth is not clear. Perhaps the New Jerusalem will give light to the earth during the Millennium as a satellite city (cf. Is. 60). The nations, ruled by various kings and levels of earthly authority, will honor the heavenly city as the dwelling place of God. The clause of them which are saved is found neither in the oldest nor in the majority of manuscripts, but clearly expresses the sense of the passage. The open gates show that security measures are no longer necessary (cf. Is. 60:11). Day is continuous since darkness never comes. Only redeemed and glorified people will have access to or dwell in the New Jerusalem (cf. v. 8; 22:15; Is. 52:1; Ezek. 44:9; 1 Cor. 6:9, 10; 2 Pet. 3:13). No sinful thing that defileth will enter God's presence.

22:1, 2. These verses depict the abundant life and continuous blessing of the New Jerusalem. One river, containing water of life (cf. 7:17; 21:6; 22:17), comes from God's throne and waters the entire city (cf. similar millennial blessings in Ezek. 47:1-12; Joel 3:18; Zech. 14:8). The tree of life pictures eternal sustenance and immortality (cf. v. 14; Gen. 2:9; 3:22). Both the variety and abundance of fruit are emphasized. The healing of the nations may indicate physical healing during the Millennium (cf. Ezek. 47:12) or (figuratively) the blessings of God in the eternal state.

The greatest blessing of eternity is that they shall see his face (cf. Matt. 5:8; Heb. 12:14). Though this is now impossible for an unglorified human being (cf. Ex. 33:20), it will occur in the eternal state. The name of God in their foreheads shows ownership and consecration (cf. 3:12; 13:16; Ex. 28:36-38). Since in the New Jerusalem God is always present, His glory makes all other sources of light unnecessary (cf. 21:23; Is. 60:19, 20; Zech. 14:7).

22:6, 7. Verses 6-21 form a conclusion or summary to the book. They emphasize two themes: (1) the authenticity of the book as a revelation from God; and (2) the imminence of the return of Christ. These sayings refer to the entire Book of Revelation. They are authenticated as genuine by the angel whom God sent to give them through John to His servants, that is, the members of the churches (cf. 1:3, 11). Quickly (Gr. tachu) here refers to the imminence of the Rapture of the church. That is, the return of Christ for the church (cf. 3:11; 22:12, 20; 1 Thess. 4:17) can occur "at any time." The blessing is for those who obey the commands (repentance, faith, perseverance, etc.) of the book (cf. 1:3).

22:8-11. John certifies that he has actually seen and heard everything that he has written in the book. He again makes the mistake of worshiping the messenger (angel) of God rather than God Himself (cf. 19:10). Angels are simply fellowservants of God (cf. Ps. 103:20; Dan. 7:10; Heb. 1:14). In contrast with Daniel, who was told to "seal" up his book of prophecy (since the end was still in the distant future—cf. Dan.

12:4, 9, 13), John is told to leave his book open (Seal not). The Messiah has come, His return is imminent, and thus the time is at hand. Verse 11 is not a command, but rather a statement of fact and a warning. Character tends to become fixed and unchangeable, determined by a lifetime of habitual action. The arrival of the end will prevent any change of destiny. When Christ returns, the deliberate choice of each person will have fixed his eternal fate.

22:12, 13. Again Christ declares the imminence of His return. Reward is always based on work (cf. Jer. 17:10; Rom. 2:6; 1 Pet. 1:17). For believers, there is the judgment seat of Christ (2 Cor. 5:10; cf. Dan. 12:2 for Old Testament saints). For unbelievers there are various judgments, culminating in the Great White Throne judgment (20:11-15; Matt. 25:31-46). The three designations of verse 13 are virtually equivalent in meaning. By applying them to Himself, Christ claims unlimited, eternal equality with God (cf. 1:8, 17; 2:8; 21:6).

22:14, 15. They that do his commandments are believers (cf. 12:17; 14:12; Matt. 7:13-21; 1 John 3:10). The tree of life indicates immortality and divine blessing (cf. 2:7; 22:2). To be able to enter in through the gates into the city is to have heavenly citizenship in the eternal dwelling place of God and redeemed mankind. All unbelievers are without (outside) the city (i.e., in the lake of fire—cf. v. 15; 21:8, 27). The dogs are impure and malicious people (cf. Deut. 23:17, 18; Phil. 3:2). Sorcerers are those who practice witchcraft (Gr. pharmakos). Whoremongers are those who practice all kinds of sexual immorality (Gr. pornos; cf. 1 Cor. 6:9, 10). Lie: See 12:9; Proverbs 6:16-19; 12:22; John 8:44.

that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, “If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book:

19 And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, “God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book.

20 He which testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly. Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus.

21 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

22:16, 17. Jesus now authenticates His angel through whom He has given this revelation to John (cf. 1:1). You is plural, indicating that the revelation is for all the churches. As the root and the offspring of David, Jesus is the fulfillment of the messianic promise of Isaiah 11:1 (cf. 5:5; Rom. 1:3). As the bright and morning star, Jesus will shortly bring in the new age: the messianic kingdom (cf. Num. 24:17; Rom. 13:11, 12; 2 Pet. 1:19). Verse 17 contains four invitations to the unsaved to come to Christ in faith for eternal life. The Spirit is the Holy Spirit, and the bride is the church (cf. 19:7–9; 21:9). The Holy Spirit works through the church to evangelize the world. The water of life is eternal life, available freely by faith in Christ (cf. 7:17; 21:6; Is. 55:1; John 4:14; 7:37).

22:18, 19. This warning is aimed against the willful distortion of the message of the book (cf. Deut. 4:2; 12:32; Prov. 30:6; Gal. 1:6, 7). The speaker is Christ Himself (see v. 20), who thus claims a canonicity for the book (and the entire New Testament) equal to that of the Old Testament. Anyone who willfully distorts the message of the Book of Revelation shows himself not to be a genuine believer and will not participate in eternal life or the blessings of the New Jerusalem. Almost all Greek manuscripts read “tree of life” instead of book of life.

22:20, 21. The final promise of Christ in the Bible is that His return is imminent. (See also vv. 7, 12.) Amen means “truly” or “so be it.” The believer’s response is simply, Come, Lord Jesus, which is the equivalent of the Aramaic Maranatha (1 Cor. 16:22). The answer to the problems of life is to be found in the return of the sovereign Son of God. Verse 21 is a benediction of grace (cf. Rom. 16:24; 1 Cor. 16:23; Phil. 4:23; 1 Thess. 5:28; 2 Thess. 3:18; contrast Mal. 4:6d). The revelation ends with three distinct elements: (1) Invitation to come to Christ (22:17); (2) His promise to return (22:20); and (3) a final benediction of grace (22:21). The New Testament begins with the birth of Christ, the promised Messiah and ends with the promise of His return.

Topical Index to

CHRIST AND THE GOSPELS

Welcome to an index of Jesus' life in a totally different format. This is not a series of charts nor is it a concordance—instead, it is a new way of focusing on Jesus' life. The entries under each heading are divided into various sections: Teachings, Events, Miracles, Parables, Conversations, Healings, Prophecy. Thus, at the entry for "Hair," you will be directed to A Teaching about how the hairs of our head are all numbered as well as An Event where Mary wiped the feet of Jesus with her hair. The purpose is for you to locate what you need quickly and easily by using the word you will most likely be thinking of as the key word. That topic is then divided into the subheadings noted above with the references across all of the Gospels (as a Harmony would do).

Topical Index to

PAUL AND HIS LETTERS

Welcome to an index to the life of Paul in a totally different format. This is not a series of charts nor is it a concordance—instead, it is a new way of focusing on Paul’s life and letters. Written in an intuitive way, the purpose is for you to locate what you need quickly and easily by using the word you will most likely be thinking of as the key word. Topical Index to END TIMES PROPHECY

Welcome to an index of end times prophecy laid out for you in a totally different format. Focusing on the book of Revelation (with appropriate passages from other parts of Scripture that refer to the end times), this index is built intuitively, to help you look up items or events. There are seven main categories:

- Characters
- Events that Unfold
- Judgments from God
- Locations
- Promises and Rewards to Victors
- Signs of the Times
- What Believers Should Do in the Meantime

So this is not a series of charts or timelines; instead, look up the word you want to know more about in its main category. The purpose is to help you locate what you need quickly and easily by using the word you will most likely be thinking of as the key word.

MONIES, WEIGHTS, AND MEASURES

The Hebrews probably first used coins in the Persian period (500–350 B.C.). However, minting began around 700 B.C. in other nations. Prior to this, precious metals were weighed, not counted as money.

Some units appear as both measures of money and measures of weights. This comes from naming the coins after their weight. For example, the shekel was a weight long before it became the name of a coin.

It is helpful to relate biblical monies to current values. But we cannot make exact equivalents. The fluctuating value of money's purchasing power is difficult to determine in our own day. It is even harder to evaluate currencies used two- to three-thousand years ago.

Therefore, it is best to choose a value meaningful over time, such as a common laborer's daily wage. One day's wage corresponds to the ancient Jewish system (a silver shekel is four days' wages) as well as to the Greek and Roman systems (the drachma and the denarius were each coins representing a day's wage).

The monies chart below takes a current day's wage as thirty-two dollars. Though there are differences of economies and standards of living, this measure will help us apply meaningful values to the monetary units in the chart and in the biblical text.

CONCORDANCE

with Word Studies

This concordance contains aids to help you understand the words of the Bible's original languages. An English word generally translates a number of different original words. Over 200 of the heading words are followed by a discussion of one of the Greek or Hebrew words that the heading word translates. Sometimes the discussion covers a significant biblical phrase that features the word.

At the end of each verse extract is a Strong's number. This number corresponds to the original language word that lies behind the English heading word featured in the verse. Strong's numbers for Greek words begin with a G. The numbers for Hebrew and Aramaic words begin with an H. If there is a dash instead of a number, then there is no word in the original language at that place in the text; the meaning conveyed by the English translation is implied. Original language words can be studied further in resources such as The New Strong's Expanded Exhaustive Concordance, The New Strong's Expanded Dictionary of Bible Words, and Vine's Complete Expository Dictionary of Old and New Testament Words.

ABOMINATION (Heb. shiqquts)
 #8251: The Hebrew noun translated abomination is from the verb meaning “to detest” (compare Lev. 7:21; 11:11). It describes the detestable practices associated with idol worship, including child sacrifice and ritual prostitution (1
 Kin. 11:5–7; 2 Kin. 23:13; Jer. 7:30; 13:27). Hosea rightly observed that those who love abominations become like the unclean practices they love (Hos. 9:10).

ADOPTION (Gk. huiiothesia) #5206:

Huiiothesia derives from the word huios, meaning “son,” and the word thesis, meaning “placement.” It is a legal term indicating that believers have been given the full privileges of sonship in God’s family. Concurrent with this placement into sonship, God places the Spirit of His Son into our hearts so that we become, in effect, His natural-born children (Rom. 8:15-17).

ADVERSARY (Heb. tsarim) #6862:

Before Israel could serve as the channel of God's grace to the world, its existence as a nation had to be securely established. The enemies of the Hebrew people were thus regarded as God's enemies (Ps. 139:20-22). In the NT, by contrast, the enemies to be overcome are primarily spiritual in nature (Eph. 6:12).

ADVOCATE (Gk. paraklētōs) #3875:

Paraklētōs means "one who is called to our side." This could be a comforter, or a defense attorney. In

John 14:26, the Holy Spirit is called our Comforter. In 1 John 2:1, Christ is called our Advocate. While the Holy Spirit works within us to comfort and help us, Christ represents us before

God the Father. The two Paracletes work together in perfect harmony

(see Rom. 8:26, 27, 34).

AFFLICTION (Heb. 'oni) #6040: Affliction means "misery" or "poverty." The image is that of someone bowed down by a heavy burden. The Lord sees the afflictions and hears the anguished cries of His people (Gen. 16:11). God urges us to place our burdens on Him, for He is strong enough to bear them and loves us so much that He will assist us in our time of need (1 Pet. 5:7).

ALMIGHTY (Heb. shadday) #7706:

This divine name in Hebrew is 'El Shadday. 'El means God, and Shadday is probably related to the Akkadian word for "mountain," or to a Hebrew verb meaning "mighty." God is powerful, majestic, awe-inspiring, and enduring. Just like a mountain, He provides a shelter from the elements and from evil (Ps. 91:1, 2). Therefore, 'El Shadday can mean "Majestic Deity" or "the God Who Provides My Refuge."

ANGEL (Heb. mal'ak) #4397: Mal'ak

may refer to angels (Ps. 91:11),

human messengers (Gen. 32:3), ambassadors (Ezek. 17:15). A special use is the manifestation of the Godhead known as the Angel of God (Ex. 14:19). In Zechariah, angels bring God's revelations about the future (Zech. 1:14; 6:4, 5).

Jesus identified the messenger who prepared the way for the Day of the Lord as John the Baptist (Mal. 3:1; Matt. 11:10, 11).

ANGRY (Heb. charah) #2734: The Hebrew verb usually means “to burn with anger” (Gen. 39:19; Jon. 4:1). This is the type of intense anger the Lord displayed when the Israelites worshiped a worthless idol instead of their Deliverer (Ex. 32:10). It can also denote burning with zeal, as when Baruch repaired the walls of Jerusalem (Neh. 3:20). His repairs were for the glory of the living Lord.

ANOINT (v.) (Heb. mashach) #4886:

This verb means to wet or daub a person with olive oil designating a person or object as set apart for God’s special purposes. Kings, priests, and prophets were anointed at the beginning of their service (Lev. 8:12). In the NT, all who are Christ’s disciples are said to be anointed; they are God’s very own, set apart and commissioned for service (2 Cor. 1:21).

APPEAR (Gk. epiphaneia) #2015:
Epiphaneia literally means “a shining forth” and was used in Greek literature to denote a divine appearance. The NT writers use the word to refer to Jesus’ first coming, the time when He entered this world as a man (Eng., epiphany). They also use the word to speak of Jesus’ second coming, specifically to His appearance to all the world (see Matt. 24:27).

ASK (Heb. sa'al) #7592: The basic sense of this word is “to ask something of someone.” The Hebrew phrase translated “inquired of the LORD” occurs eleven times in the OT (Judg. 20:23; 2 Sam. 2:1). This Hebrew word is broad enough to encompass the idea of prayer, as in the famous verse: “Pray [ask] for the peace of Jerusalem” (Ps. 122:6).

AUTHOR (Gk. archēgos) #747:

Archēgos literally means “the first one to lead the way” from archē (“the first”) and agō (“to lead”). To express this idea of leadership, the word is translated in Acts 3:15 and 5:31 as the “Prince” and in Heb. 12:2 as “the author.” Heb. 2:10 emphasizes that Jesus endured suffering and temptation on this earth in order to become a perfect leader.

AVENGE (Heb. naqam) #5358: The verb take vengeance has negative and positive connotations. The Israelites were forbidden to take revenge because such actions were ultimately self-serving (Lev. 19:18). But, the Scriptures speak of a righteous vengeance that involves the pursuit of justice, virtue, and the defense of God's majesty. God declared that only He can seek this type of vengeance (Deut. 32:35), but He often uses people as His instrument.

BEGOTTEN (Gk. monogenēs) #3439:

The phrase for only begotten Son suggests a one and only son. Jesus Christ is the Father's one and only, His unique Son. Although God has begotten many children through the new birth (John 1:12) none of these have Sonship from eternity. As the unique Son of God, Jesus Christ has a special glory and an unrivaled place of honor.

BEHOLD (Heb. ra'ah) #7200: This is the common term used in reference to the natural function of the eyes and is thus most often translated as see (Gen. 48:10; 2 Kin. 3:14;

Mic. 7:10). Metaphorically, it has a number of meanings: acceptance (Gen. 7:1; Num. 23:21), provision (Gen. 22:8, 14; 1 Sam. 16:1), or to convey the notion of assurance and salvation (Job 42:5).

BELIEVE (Heb. 'aman) #539: From a Hebrew root meaning “establish” or “confirm.” Belief is an important idea in the Bible, because a person must believe God in order to be saved from sin. Whenever the Scriptures state that a person “believed in the Lord,” it signals that the person has made a decision to treat God’s word as certain and to do what God wants (Gen. 15:6, John 1:12).

BISHOP (Gk. episkopos) #1985:

Episkopos means "one who oversees." In the NT, elders are described as overseeing a congregation, responsible for the internal affairs of the church; there seem to have been several elders in positions of responsibility in any given congregation (Acts 14:23; Titus

1:5-7). After NT times, it became the custom to appoint one elder as the presiding elder and to give him the title of bishop.

BLASPHEMY (Gk. blasphēmia) #988:

Blasphemy is the act of cursing, slandering, reviling, showing contempt or lack of reverence for God. In the OT, blaspheming God was a violation of the third Commandment (Ex. 20:7), a serious crime punishable by death (Lev. 24:15, 16). The unbelieving Jews of Jesus' day charged Him with blasphemy because they thought of Him only as a man while He claimed to be God's Son (Matt. 9:3).

BLESSING (Heb. berakah) #1293: The word translated blessing expresses several ideas: to fill with potency, to make fruitful, or to secure victory. When people offer a blessing, they wish well or offer a prayer on behalf of themselves or someone else (Gen. 49). When God gives a blessing He gives it to those who follow Him (Deut. 11:27), providing salvation (Ps. 3:8), life (Ps. 133:3), and success (2 Sam. 7:29).

BLOOD (Heb. dam) #1818: In the Scriptures, blood may be a synonym for death, murder or even guilt, as in the phrase “his blood shall be upon him”—that is, he is responsible for his own guilt. According to the NT, “without shedding of blood there is no remission” of sin. Thus the emphasis on blood in the OT sacrifices pointed to the blood Christ would shed on our behalf.

with the soul and spirit of believers, will be "preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ" (1 Thess. 5:23).

BRANCH (Heb. tsemach) #6780:

The term translated branch means "shoot" or "twig." The coming Messiah, the "Branch" would "shoot" up from the royal stock of David (Is. 11:1). Prophecies promised that a King from David's line would reign in righteousness (Jer. 23:5, 6), and as a priest, reestablish true worship of the Lord (Zech. 6:12, 13). Jesus Christ satisfied these predictions, fulfilling both royal (John 12:13–15) and

BUILD (Heb. banah) #1129: The expression “build a house” can also refer to establishing a family (Ruth 4:11) or a dynasty (Ps.
 89:4). The word may also be used in the sense of “rebuilding” or “restoring” something that has been destroyed or is in disrepair (Neh.
 2:17). Jeremiah’s commission as God’s prophet included the task of spiritually building Judah and rebuilding Israel (Jer. 1:10; 31:4).

BURNT OFFERING (Heb. 'olah)

#5930: This Hebrew word means

“holocaust,” an offering that is completely destroyed by fire. For a sin offering, the worshiper placed his hands on the animal's head to show the transfer of sin. The animal was killed by the priest, the blood collected and presented to the Lord by sprinkling it on the altar. Pieces of the sacrifice were then completely burned on the altar.

CHOSEN (Heb. bachar) #977: In the OT, the word describes the careful action of “selecting” or “accepting.” It is often God who chooses. He chose Abraham (Neh. 9:7), the nation of Israel (Deut. 4:37), and finally David's family (2 Sam. 6:21). He chose these people so that He could accomplish His will, the salvation of the world (Is. 49:6). This choice was founded on His own love for mankind.

CHRIST (Gk. Christos) #5547: Many speak of Jesus Christ, not realizing that the title "Christ" is in essence a confession of faith. It literally means "the Anointed One." The Messiah would be anointed by God's Spirit to be the preeminent Prophet, Priest, and King (Is. 61:1; John 3:34). With his confession, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God" (Matt. 16:16), Peter plainly identified Jesus as the Messiah.

CHURCH (Gk. ekklesia) #1577: The Greek term simply means "an assembly." It was used in secular

Greek to speak of any gathering of people to a political or festive assembly, and used by the NT writers to mean a local assembly of believers, or the whole body of believers. Within the local church in each city there were probably several "assemblies" or "meetings" of believers, held in various homes.

COMPASSION (Heb. racham) #7355:

The Hebrew word translated here as compassion means “to love from the womb” and is frequently translated mercy (Is. 14:1). The noun form means “womb,” depicting the tender love of a mother for her child (1 Kin. 3:26). God used a form of this Hebrew word to reveal His character and name to Moses (see Ex. 34:6).

CONFESS (Heb. yadah) #3034: This Hebrew verb conveys two distinct meanings; first, the offering of thanksgiving or praise to God (2 Chr. 5:13; Ps. 92:1; 106:47); second, the “casting off” of sin by acknowledging our transgressions of God’s commandments (Ps. 32:5; Prov. 28:13). Confession of sin is thanksgiving because it recognizes that forgiveness of sin is accomplished only by the grace and goodness of God (2 Chr. 30:22; Dan. 9:4).

CONGREGATION (Heb. qahal)

#6951: The Hebrew term denotes a gathering of people for any occasion. It is used in a secular sense to designate civil meetings, war counsels, and other meetings, (1 Sam. 17:47; 1 Kin. 12:3) as well as the gathering of individuals for religious purposes (Deut. 5:22). “Congregation of the Lord” indicates a gathering of God’s people for religious or secular purposes (1 Chr. 28:8; Neh. 13:1).

CONTINUE (Gk. proskartereō, proskarterēsis) #4342; 4343: The NT makes it clear that faith alone saves. It is equally clear that perseverance in good works is the greatest indication that someone's faith is genuine (James 2:14–26). Christians persevere in God's work to prove their appreciation for God's grace (1 Cor. 15:57, 58); because God is intimately related to them (Rom. 8:25–27); because they have the assurance of reward (1 John 5:13). as a shadow, and c not • H5975 • Job 14:2

CORNER (Gk. gōnia, akrogōniaios)

#1137; 204: In biblical times, buildings were often made of cut stone. By uniting two intersecting walls, a cornerstone aligned the whole building. In his address before the Jewish Sanhedrin, Peter quoted Ps. 118:22, boldly proclaiming that “Jesus Christ of Nazareth,” crucified and raised from the dead, was the stone rejected by the builders “which is become the head of the corner” (Acts 4:10, 11; Eph. 2:20, 21).

CORRECTION (Heb. musar) #4148:

The Hebrew word translated correction means “discipline” that is instructive and corrective in nature. The word emphasizes the “nourishing” and “chastising” elements of bringing up a child (Prov. 1:7, 8). Instruction has to do with both the reception of knowledge through hearing and the application of that knowledge in daily life. Discipline and instruction is frequently connected to God (Prov.

COUNSEL (Heb. 'etsah) #6098: There are two primary meanings: “counsel” and “plan.” Both are used of God (Jer. 32:199) and man (Prov. 20:5). The counsel of the Lord stands forever, but He brings the counsel of the nations to nothing (Ps. 33:10, 11; Prov. 21:30). Solomon calls those who heed counsel wise (Prov. 12:15; 19:20); the psalmists proclaimed their reliance on God’s counsel (Ps. 16:7; 73:24).

COUNT (Heb. chashab) #2803: This complex verb has two ranges of meaning. The first is associated with calculations: “count” (Prov. 17:28), “esteem” (Is. 53:3). The second includes the element of planning: “think” (1 Sam. 1:13), “devise” (Esth. 8:3). Abram’s faith was “counted” to him for righteousness—computed as a credit in Abram’s favor. Paul uses this credit and debit language in his explanation of justification by faith (Rom. 4:3).

COVENANT (Heb. berith) #1285:

The term often refers to God's self-imposed obligation to reconcile fallen humanity to Himself. He made a covenant with Noah after the Flood (Gen. 9:9-17), a covenant with Abraham (Gen. 17:15, 16), and a covenant with David (2 Sam. 23:5). These covenants prefigure the supreme covenant made through Christ's sacrifice on the Cross. Jesus initiated the New Covenant which Jeremiah foresaw (Jer. 31:31-34).

CUP (Heb. kos) #3563: In the OT, "cup" is usually associated with imagery of God's wrath, such as the "wine cup of fury" or "the cup of astonishment" (Jer. 25:15; Ezek. 23:33). In both the Testaments, "cup" can symbolize fellowship because of its association with togetherness. The cup is an important image in the NT, especially in the celebration of the Lord's Supper (1 Cor. 11:25–28).

CURSE (v.) (Heb. 'arar) #779: A curse wishes or prays for ill or injury on a person or an object. The seriousness of God's covenant with His people is illustrated by the threat of a curse on any who violate it (Deut. 28:15). In the NT, Paul taught that Jesus Christ became a “curse” for us, so that we might be freed from the curses of the Law (Gal. 3:13).

DARK (Heb. chidah) #2420: The core meaning of this word, often translated riddle, is “an enigmatic saying.” When the Lord confronted Miriam and Aaron, God describes Himself as speaking in “dark speeches” to them, but to Moses face-to-face (Num. 12:6–8). Perhaps Paul had this in mind when admonishing the Corinthians that someone who could understand all mysteries would not amount to anything if that person did not possess the love of God (1 Cor. 13:2). they grope in the d • H2822 • Job 12:25

DARKNESS (Heb. choshek) #2822:

Since darkness was associated with the chaos that existed before creation, it was associated with evil, bad luck, affliction or death (Job 17:13). In Sheol there is only darkness (Job 10:21, 22). Darkness describes those who have not seen the light concerning Jesus (John 1:4, 5; 12:35) and those who deliberately turn away (John 3:19, 20). Hating the light brings condemnation (Col. 1:13; 2 Pet. 2:17).

DAY (Heb. yom) #3117: This noun has a variety of uses, referencing physical daylight (Amos 5:8), or to a specific day or time period (Gen. 7:11). Used in the significant phrase “the day of the Lord” (Is. 2:12; Zeph. 1:14), when God triumphs over His foes—it is a day of blessing for God’s people (Is. 2). For God’s enemies it will be a day of “darkness” (Amos 5:18).

DAY STAR (Gk. phōsphoros) #5459:

Phōsphoros means “light-bearer” or “light-bringer.” Christ is the morning star, the Bright and Morning Star, and the Dayspring, that is, the rising sun. Presently, Christ shines in our hearts; when He returns, He will arise in our hearts and bring us into a perfect day. His outward coming will be matched by an inward rising, “an illuminating transformation” of our spirits.

DEATH (Gk. thanatos) #2288: The Bible speaks of death in a threefold way: physical, spiritual, and eternal. Physical death causes separation from everything we hold dear in this life. Because of sin, all people are also separated from God, the Source of spiritual life. The Bible speaks of “the second death,” which is everlasting separation from God in hell. In His resurrection, Jesus conquered death—physical, spiritual, eternal for believers.

DECEIT (Heb. sheqer) #8267: This word refers to actions meant to deceive, such as fraud, betrayal, and unfaithfulness. It is sometimes translated lying, vain or deceitful (Jer. 7:4; 3:23; Prov. 31:30). Deceitful prophets were prophesying relief for Judah from suffering when God was actually handing Judah over to the Babylonians for judgment (Jer. 23:17–19). Their deceptions made them enemies to the truth, the truth of God's Word (Ps. 119:20).

DELIVER (Heb. natsal) #5337: This verb may mean either “to plunder” or “to snatch away, to deliver.”
 Sometimes it signifies deliverance of God's people from sin and guilt (Ps. 51:14). But in Ex. 18:8, the word is a statement of God's supremacy over the Egyptian deities. God repeatedly delivered the Israelites (Josh. 11:6; Judg. 3:9). The Lord was their Deliverer, and the psalmists proclaimed this fact with joy (Ps. 18:12; 144:2).

DELIVERANCE (Heb. teshu'ah) #8668:

The basic meaning of this term is "victory" or "safety." In Scripture, God's people are reminded that deliverance is not found in horses (Ps. 33:17) or in people (Ps. 108:12); salvation is found only in the Lord (Lam. 3:26). Soon, the Lord will provide everlasting salvation for His people (Is. 45:17). Placing our hope in the Lord is certain, for He will deliver His people.

DESTROY (Heb. charam) #2763:

References “setting apart” because of defilement. Israel was to destroy everyone and everything that was wicked enough to be considered defiled (Deut. 13:12–15). Disobedience cost Achan his life (Josh. 7) and Saul his throne (15:9–11). Paul reminds us that we are all defiled and deserve destruction. Yet God has chosen to save those who place their trust in Jesus (Rom. 3:10–26).

DESTRUCTION (Gk. olethros) #3639:

The word for destruction does not mean annihilation, but rather the loss of everything worthwhile. In 1 Cor. 5:5, Paul uses olethros to speak of the devastating temporal consequences of sin, and uses the same word to refer to the eternal consequences of sin in 2 Thess.

1:9. The penalty for sin is not annihilation, but eternal separation from the love of Christ.

DEVIL (Gk. diabolos) #1228: The word diabolos signifies a slanderer, one who accuses another. Hence that other name given him: “the accuser of our brethren” (Rev. 12:10). The name Satan signifies an adversary, one who lies in wait for or sets himself in opposition to another. These and other names of the same fallen spirit point to different features of his evil character and deceitful operations.

DISPENSATION (Gk. oikonomia)

#3622: The word means "household management." In ancient times, the word was often used to describe the work of one who took care of all the financial affairs of a large household or business (Luke 16:1,2). Paul was entrusted with the stewardship of God's economy, to dispense the riches of Christ to God's household and to preach the Good News (Eph. 3:2-11).

DIVINE (adj.)(Gk. theios) #2304; 1411:

Theios dunamis (divine power, 2 Pet. 1:3) designates the power God used in raising Christ from the dead. That power is available to the church, providing it with the spiritual ability to live a godly life. Theios phusis (divine nature, v. 4) is the nature that characterizes God, expressed in holiness, virtue, righteousness, love, grace. When regenerated with the divine nature, believers exhibit the same characteristics.

DIVINER (Heb. qasam) #7080: This term refers to those who attempt to foretell the future through occult practices. Diviners, along with other practitioners of the occult, were forbidden in Israel (Deut. 18:10–22). False prophets, such as Balaam, practiced divination, and the penalty was death (Josh. 13:22; Ezek. 22:28). Diviners brought judgment on themselves and on their nations as well (Deut. 18:10; 2 Kin. 17:17, 18; Mic. 3:6, 7).

DREAM (Heb. chalom) #2472: Dreams were often recognized as revelations from the Lord God in the case of the Hebrews. Many times these dreams and visions were in symbolic language that needed interpretation. Those who could interpret dreams possessed power in the ancient world (Gen. 41:37–40; Dan. 2:46–48). Joseph was able to interpret the figures and symbols of dream-events only as God enabled him (Gen. 40:8; 41:16).

EARTH (Heb. 'erets) #776: The common OT word earth possesses several nuances of meaning: earth in contrast to the heavens (Gen. 1:1); land in contrast to the sea (1:10); ground as a geographical location (4:16); a sovereign nation (13:10, 12); or even the people who live upon the earth (Ps. 98:3; 100:1). In essence, all land belongs to God as its Creator (Ps. 24:1).

EVERLASTING (Heb. 'olam) #5769:

Likely related to the word that means "to hide" and connoting "hidden, unknown time" this term is quite naturally used of God, who is eternal and hidden (Is. 40:28; Ps. 90:2). It refers to God's never-ending covenants, statutes, salvation, and love (Jer. 31:3). The Bible also describes the coming Messiah, His kingdom, and His priesthood as eternal (Is. 9:7; Ps. 45:6, 7; 110:4).

EVIL (Heb. ra') #7451: Evil (sin) opposes God and His work of righteousness in the world, bringing disease and destruction with it (Gen. 3, Rom. 7:8–19). The source of evil in the world is Satan and it lives in the hearts of the unredeemed (Mark 7:20–23). Jesus will eternally triumph over evil at the end of time, and cast Satan into a lake of fire (Rev. 20:10).

EXAMPLE (Gk. hupogrammos) #5261:

In common Greek usage, this word designated a tablet that contained the entire Greek alphabet. Students would use this to trace the alphabet, learning each letter from alpha to omega. The life of Jesus, a life of suffering, is just such a tracing tablet. We, the learners of Jesus, are to trace this life, beginning from alpha and going on to omega.

EXTOL (Heb. rum) #7311: The Hebrew word translated extol is one of many words for praise in the Psalms. The meaning is “to hold high” or “to esteem greatly.” In contrast to King

David’s praise of the Lord as the exalted One (2 Sam. 22:47), Lucifer’s downfall came in trying to exalt

FAITH (Gk. pistis) #4102: The Greek term means “trust,” “firm persuasion.” The corresponding verb means “to believe,” as illustrated by Jesus’ word to Jairus: “Be not afraid, only believe” (Mark 5:36). To have faith is to relinquish trust in oneself and to put that trust in another. In the NT, the word pistis is used to refer to what one believes, God’s revelation in the Scripture (see Gal. 1:23).

FALLING (Heb. kashal) #3782: This verb means “to totter,” “to trip and fall,” or “to stumble.” Hosea likens false prophets and their followers to those who stumble in the dark (Hos. 4:5; 5:5). Isaiah warns that those who rely on their own strength will stumble and fall (Is. 40:30), but God will provide strength to those who have stumbled in the past and now call upon Him (1 Sam. 2:4).

FAST (Heb. tsum) #6684: The Hebrew simply means “to abstain from food.” Fasting acknowledges human frailty before God and appeals to His mercy (Esth. 4). Fasting was required for the Day of Atonement (Lev. 16:31). There were also four fast days that commemorated the destruction of Jerusalem by the Babylonians (Zech. 8:19). Isaiah admonished Israel to perform acts of righteousness and social justice along with their fasting (Is. 58:3–9).

FATHER (Gk. patēr) #3962: The term abba in Mark 14:36 is the Aramaic word for father. The Greek term is added not to tell the reader what the Aramaic means, but to express Jesus’ dependence on His Father as He faced the sufferings of the crucifixion. Paul uses “Abba, Father” in Rom. 8:15 and Gal. 4:6 to express the intimate relationship the believer has with God.

FEAR (n.) (Heb. yir'ah) #3374: “Fear” signifies awe regarding what is unknown, potentially dangerous, or terror inspired by one’s enemies (Ps.
 56:4). Often, it means “reverence” for God (Prov. 19:23). The proper respect of God compels us to abandon our evil ways, teaches us wisdom (Prov.
 9:10), and leads to confidence, for if we submit to God we do not have to fear any other power. (Prov. 14:26, 27; Heb. 13:6).

FELLOWSHIP (Gk. koinōnia) #2842:

Koinōnia means “that which is shared in common.” In the NT it denotes the believers’ common participation in the Trinity—the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. The unique, eternal fellowship between the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit was manifested in time through the Incarnation, and through Jesus’ death and resurrection extended to each believer through the indwelling of the Holy Spirit (2 Cor. 13:14; Phil. 2:1).

FILL (Gk. plēthō) #4130: The word plēthō describes the filling of anything from a sponge to a boat.

Luke uses this term to describe how the Holy Spirit influences a person;

the filling of the Holy Spirit enables the person so endowed to speak or preach for God. Thus, the filling of the Spirit is directly related to the prophetic ministry.

FIRE (Heb. 'esh) #784: In the OT, fire was associated with Israel's worship. The consumption of offerings by flame indicated that God had accepted the sacrifices. God is called a "consuming fire," emphasizing His judgment on wickedness and unbelief, and fire is pictured as God's agent to purify and illuminate. The "tongues of fire" at Pentecost underscored the purging and illuminating quality of God's truth. bush burned with f • H784 • Ex. 3:2

FIRST (Gk. prōtotokos) #4416:

Prōto can indicate “first in time” (temporal priority) or “first in place” (preeminence). The Son of Man is prōtotokos, the “chiefborn” among all God’s creation, the preeminent. But the designation in no way indicates that Christ was created by God, for all things were created in, through, and for Christ. He is the Son of God, the Second Person of the Godhead, who has existed from eternity.

FLESH (Gk. sarx) #4561: In Greek literature, sarx usually meant nothing more than the human body.

But Paul often pitted the “flesh”—the entire being including soul and mind as affected by sin—against the “Spirit” as being diametrically opposed. The unbeliever lives only in the flesh; believers can live in the flesh or in the Spirit. Paul repeatedly encourages believers to overcome fleshly deeds by living in the Spirit. and they shall be one f • H1320 • Gen. 2:24

FOOLISH (Heb. 'ivvelet) #200: This Hebrew word signifies an absence of wisdom. Foolishness characterizes the speech of fools and the reactions of the impulsive person (Prov. 12:23). Indeed, foolishness is often identified with iniquity and sin (Prov. 5:22, 23). Although Proverbs does not hold out much hope for separating an adult fool from his foolishness, the rod of correction is identified as a remedy for children (Prov. 22:15; 26:11; 27:22).

FOREKNOW (Gk. prognōsis) #4268:

The term indicates “knowledge beforehand,” either of things that are seen or things that are intended or arranged. In Acts 2:23, the word denotes God’s knowledge of His Son’s death on the Cross long before it occurred. This is affirmed by Peter (1 Pet. 1:20) and is implied in Rev. 13:8. Jesus’ death for our redemption was not an afterthought, but part of God’s eternal plan.

FORGIVE (Heb. nasa') #5375: This Hebrew word means “to lift up,” “to bear,” or “to take away.” “Bearing” is often used in reference to sin; the scapegoat “bore” the sins of Israel (Lev. 16:22) and the Suffering Servant would “bear” the sins of the world (Is. 53:12). The NT describes God’s forgiveness by stating that Jesus both bore our sins and took them away (1 Pet. 2:24; 1 John 3:5).

FORSAKE (Heb. 'azab) #5800 Israel is described as “forsaking” God and His covenant by turning to idols (Jer. 22:9; Ezek. 20:8). Moses warned them about breaking God’s covenant and forsaking Him. Because of their unfaithfulness, God would in turn forsake His own people (Deut. 31:16, 17). The prophet Jeremiah indicates that this divine threat had become a reality for the nation of Judah (Jer. 12:7).

FOUNTAIN (Gk. pēgē) #4077: The word denotes a spring of running water. How different this is from a well that requires much manual labor to dig and draw out the water. The gift that Jesus gives—a fountain springing up into eternal life—suggests the availability and accessibility of divine, eternal life for all believers (John 4:14; Rev. 7:17; 21:6).

FRIEND (Heb. rea') #7453: This noun designates an associate, a person who is nearby or in contact with someone else. Frequently, it signifies simply the second person in a dialogue (Gen. 11:3; Jon. 1:7). The use of this word in the commandment to love one's neighbor (Lev. 19:18) prompted a certain lawyer to ask Jesus who his neighbor was. Jesus responded with the parable of the Good Samaritan (Luke 10:29–37).

GARDEN (Heb. gan) #1588: Gardens symbolically represent portraits of happiness and fruitfulness. The lovers in the Song of Solomon compare one another to a garden of delights (Song 4:12; 5:1; 8:13). The Garden of Eden represented God's ideal environment for man; some features, especially its rivers and the Tree of Life, are also used to portray God's final blessings for His people (Ezek. 47:12; Rev. 22:1, 2, 14).

GLORIFY (Gk. doxazō) #1392: This term means "to give glory," or "to make glorious." It was one of John's favorite expressions concerning what would happen to Jesus as the result of His crucifixion and resurrection (see John 7:39; 12:23, 24; 17:1). These events would show the world that Jesus was no ordinary man. The resurrection, especially, would show that He was the glorious Son of God worthy of all honor.

GLORY (Heb. kabod) #3519: This word, derived from a Hebrew verb, is used to describe the weight or worthiness of something. God's glory is described in the OT as taking the form of a cloud (Ex. 24:15–18) and filling the temple (1 Kin. 8:11). The appropriate response to God's glory is to reverence Him by bowing before Him, as Ezekiel did (Ezek. 3:23; 43:3).

GOD (Heb. pl. 'elohim) #430: The basic meaning is probably "the Almighty." In Hebrew, this word often occurs in a form called "the plural of majesty" in contrast to a normal plural (that is, "gods," cf. 1 Kin. 19:2). Christians point to the plural form of this word as revealing the plural nature of God. God is one, but He is also three distinct persons: the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit.

GODHEAD (Gk. theotētos) #2320:
Theotētos for Godhead designates the totality of God's nature and person. Plērōma (#4318) indicates "plenitude" and "totality." Paul used it to describe Christ, who is the fullness, the plenitude of God; for all the fullness of the Godhead dwells in Him bodily (Col. 1:19; 2:9). All the fullness of the Godhead "permanently resides" in the body of Jesus, the God-man.

GOODNESS (Heb. chesed) #2617:

When God revealed Himself to Moses on Mt. Sinai, He described

Himself as overflowing with goodness. This is one of the most significant words that describes

God's character (see Ps. 13:5) and is also translated as mercy or lovingkindness, referring to God's loyalty and faithfulness to His covenant. In the NT, this characteristic of God is described as His grace (Gk. charis, #5485; John 1:17).

GOSPEL (Gk. euangelion) #2098: This Greek word was originally used to describe the “good news” of military victory brought by a messenger to his commander. In the NT it means the Good News of salvation: Jesus came to conquer sin and evil by living a sinless life and sacrificially offering Himself on the Cross. The apostles continued to share this Good News in obedience to Christ’s command (Mark 16:15).

GRACE (Gk. charis) #5485: The Greek word for grace is probably equivalent to the Hebrew word chesed, meaning “lovingkindness,” describing God’s character (Ps. 36:7; 89:33). In the NT, the word charis usually means divine favor or goodwill; it also means “that which gives joy” and “that which is a free gift.” Paul used “grace” to describe God’s free gift of salvation, and Peter used it as well (Acts 15:11).

GRAVE (n.) (Heb. she'ol) #7585: Sheol was a common name for grave (Job 7:9) or hell (Ps. 139:8). The Israelites understood it as the invisible domain for souls of both the righteous and unrighteous—all awaiting the final resurrection. The OT makes no distinction between the state of the righteous and unrighteous dead, whereas Jesus’ parable of the rich man and Lazarus implies separate realms for the two (Luke 16:19–31).

GUIDE (Heb. 'alluph) #441: The Hebrew word translated as guide in Jer. 3:4 means “friend.” Israel’s appeal based on God’s friendship with them will avail them nothing due to their hardness of heart (Jer. 5:3). This word is also translated guide in Prov. 2:17 and Mic. 7:5, where the subjects are human. In Ps.

HAND (Heb. yad) #3027: The Bible speaks often of hands literally. But because hands do the will of the entire person, hands may symbolically represent someone's "whole being" (Ps. 24:4; Acts 2:23). The expression "hand of the LORD" refers to His great power and judgment (Deut. 2:15; Ps. 8:6; Is. 9:12; Ezek. 1:3). However, God may also extend His hand to express His mercy and forgiveness (Ps. 37:24).

HAPPY (Heb. 'eshet) #835: This

Hebrew word can also mean "blessed" or "fortunate." As in Ps. 1:1, it is often used in congratulatory exclamation. The characteristic biblical beatitude concerns a person who trusts in the Lord and lives by His revelation (Ps. 1:1, 2; 34:8; Prov. 16:20). Jesus begins the Sermon on the Mount with a list of beatitudes that conform to the OT pattern (see Matt. 5:3–12).

HATE (Heb. sane') #8130: Many types of hatred are described in the Bible.

God's people are to hate what God

Himself hates with an absolute hatred—sin. There is also a relative hatred. It is not the opposite of love but a diminished love, as when, for the cause of Christ, we “hate” our family—we are to love Christ more than them (Luke 14:26).

HEAL (Heb. apha') #7495: Heal

connotes the idea of restoration, as in 2 Chr. 7:14, where God promises to restore the land if His people pray.
 The psalms praise God for His role in healing disease (Ps. 103:3), the brokenhearted (Ps. 147:3), and the soul by providing salvation (Ps. 30:2; 107:20). Isaiah declared that the healing of God's people results from the sacrificial wounds of His Son (Is.

 53:5–12).

HEAR (Heb. shama') #8085: The Hebrew word also means to "listen" or "obey." It implies that the listener is giving his or her total attention to the one who is speaking. In some cases, the word connotes more than listening and indicates obedience to what has been said. Abraham was blessed not only for hearing, but for obeying God's voice (Gen. 22:18).

HEART (Heb. leb) #3820: To the Hebrews, one's emotions and understanding were centered in the heart (Prov. 15:13, 14), blurring the dichotomy between mind and heart, intellect and emotions. God identified the heart as the center of rebellion, producing disobedience (see Gen. 8:21; Deut. 6:5). To remedy this, God determined to replace their "stony heart" with a "heart of flesh," one which would love and obey Him (Ezek. 36:26, 27).

HEAVEN (Heb. shamayim) #8064: The Hebrew word for heavens may refer to either the physical heavens, or to the dwelling place of God (Ps. 14:2), the spiritual heaven. HEIR (Gk. sunklērōnomos) #4789:

The Greek word means “joint-heirs” or “coheirs.” The concept of inheritance is prominent both in the OT and NT (see Num. 26:56; Ps. 25:13; Is. 60:21; Matt. 5:5; Gal. 3:29). For believers, Jesus promises an eternal inheritance in His kingdom. Paul uses the same Greek word to describe Christians’ participation with Christ in glory (see Eph. 3:6).

HELL (Gk. gehenna) #1067: The word hell translates the Greek gehenna, which refers to the “Valley of the Son of Hinnom." The Israelites offered their children as burnt sacrifices to Molech in this valley; Josiah defiled it in order to prevent the repetition of such abominations (see 2 Kin. 23:10). HOLINESS (Gk. hagiasmos) #38:

Hagiasmos means to “set apart” for God’s special use, to make distinct from what is common—hence, to be made like God who is distinct from all else and therefore holy. Christ sanctified believers by His one sacrifice on the Cross, and that sanctification has the lasting result that it continues to work in us, making us holy (1 Thess. 4:3, 4; Heb.

10:14).

HOPE (v.) (Heb. yachal) #3176: The Hebrew word signifies “to wait with expectation.” Hope is expressed with confidence (Job 13:15), and sometimes is clearly in vain (Ezek. 13:6). By far the main object of “expectant waiting” is God, His word, His judgment, and His mercy (Ps. 33:18; 119:43; Mic. 7:7). That hope is not misplaced, for the One in whom we hope is completely faithful to His promises (see Heb. 10:23).

INHERIT (Heb. yarash) #3423: The Hebrew word translated inherit means to “take something from someone else and possess it for yourself.” The word is frequently used to describe the Israelite conquest of Canaan (see Deut. 5:33; Josh. 12:1; 19:47). Sometimes the word can be translated dispossess

(see Num. 33:53) and may even mean “impoverish” (see 1 Sam.

INSPIRATION (Gk. theopneustos)

#2315: Theopneustos means “God-

breathed,” from theos (God) and pneō (to breathe). The primary meaning could be that all Scripture was breathed out from God; it could also mean that the Word was “inbreathed,” or inspired, by God.

The first definition affirms the Bible’s divine origin; the second speaks of God’s presence and inspiration through the Word to those who read it in faith (2 Tim. 3:16).

INTERCESSION (Gk. enteuxis, entugchanō) #1783; 1793:
Intercession is the act of petitioning God, praying on behalf of another. Christ is the greatest intercessor. He prayed on behalf of His disciples (John 17); He petitioned God, selflessly, for those who crucified Him (Luke 23:34); He intercedes for His church (Heb. 7:25). Because of their intimate relationship with God through Christ, Christians are urged to intercede for all people (1 Tim. 2:1).

JEALOUS (Heb. qanno') #7072: This Hebrew term is related to a root word that can mean “to be eager, zealous for” (1 Kin. 19:10, 14), or even “to be furious” (Zech. 8:2). One of God’s names is Jealous (Ex. 34:14). God’s jealousy for His people is a claim for exclusive allegiance rooted in His holiness (Josh. 24:19) and His role as their Creator and Redeemer (Ps. 95:6, 7; 96:2–5).

JESUS (Gk. Iēsous) #2424: The Greek Iēsous is the equivalent of the Hebrew Yeshua, meaning “The Lord Shall Save.” A common name among the Jews (Luke 3:29; Col. 4:11), the name expresses Jesus’ work on earth—to save and to deliver. This is affirmed by the explanation the angel gives Joseph, after telling him to name the virgin-born child Jesus: “for he shall save his people from their sins” (Matt. 1:21).

JOY (Heb. simchah) #8057: This Hebrew word is one of several frequently occurring words that express exceeding gladness or rejoicing. Joy in the Bible is usually associated with the people of God, who celebrate God’s blessing (Num. 10:10; 1 Kin. 1:40; 2 Chr. 20:27; Neh. 12:27). In fact, Moses exhorts the Israelites to serve God with joy, so that they would not lose their blessing (Deut. 28:47).

JUDGE (n.) (Heb. shaphat)

#8199: Judges of Israel decided controversies, handed down verdicts (Ex. 18:16) executed their judgment in vindicating the righteous (Ps. 26:1) and destroying the wicked (Ex. 7:3). Judges, empowered by God, fought Israel's oppressors and delivered the people. The king functioned as the national judge (1 Sam. 8:5). The perfect Judge is God. He alone is capable of perfectly judging the wicked and delivering the righteous (Is. 11:4).

JUDGMENT (Heb. mishpat) #4941:

Judgment (also translated "justice") specifies what is right, not only as measured by a code of law, but also by what makes for right relationships as well as harmony and peace. As Judge, God brings justice to nations (Ps. 67:4) and "sets things right" on behalf of the victims of injustice (Ps. 103:6). For the wicked, God as supreme Judge of the earth is a dreaded force.

JUSTIFICATION (Gk. dikaiōsis) #1347:

The Greek noun for justification derives from the verb dikaioō, meaning “to acquit,” “to declare righteous.” The word depicts a courtroom, with God presiding as righteous Judge, determining the faithfulness of each person to the Law. He then imputes His righteousness to us through the Blood of Jesus, demonstrating that

He is both Judge and the One who declares us righteous, our Justifier (Rom. 3:26; 5:1).

KING (Heb. melek) #4428: The term king describes a ruler of a small city (Josh. 10:3) or a monarch of an empire (Esth. 1:1–5). David is an example of a righteous king who set his heart to faithfully serve God (Acts 13:22). God’s promise to give David an everlasting kingdom (2 Sam. 7:16) was fulfilled in Jesus Christ, whose human ancestry is through the family of David (Luke 2:4).

KINGDOM (Heb. mamlakah) #4467: Kingdom denotes a region and people ruled over by a king. David was God’s choice to be king of Israel (1 Sam. 16:7, 12, 13). Jesus Christ is called “the Root of David” (Rev. 5:5). With the birth of Jesus, covenant with David becomes clear: “I will establish the throne of his kingdom for ever” (2 Sam. 7:13; also Ps. 2; 110; Is. 11:1–4).

KNOW (Gk. ginōskō) #1097; (Gk. oida)

#1492: In the statement “know the Lord: for all shall know me” (Heb. 8:11), there are two different Greek words for know. Ginōskō means “to come to know” or “to know personally,” designating ongoing, personal knowledge, implying a growing relationship between the knower and the person who is known. Oida derives from the verb “to see,” meaning “to perceive” or “to know absolutely,” suggesting complete knowledge.

KNOWLEDGE (Gk. gnōsis) #1108:

Gnōsis usually connotes progressive, experiential, and personal knowledge; it is knowledge that can grow. We need to grow in our actual, personal knowledge of Jesus Christ; such knowledge is the greatest protection against false teachings. One of the prominent themes in 2 Peter is Peter's exhortation to the believers to attain a fuller, more thorough knowledge of Jesus Christ (2 Pet. 1:8; 2:20; 3:18).

LABOUR (n.) (Heb. 'amal) #5999:
 "Labour" means work for gain (Ps. 127:1; Prov. 16:26), but it can also mean "trouble" or "sorrow" (Job 3:10). The effort required for work and human achievement produces "sorrow" and "troubles" in the sense that it can never satisfy the deeper needs of the human soul (Eccl. 6:7). However, when believers recognize that their work is a gift from God, work becomes joy (Eccl. 5:18-20).

LAW (Heb. torah) #8451: Although usually translated law, the noun torah is derived from the verb yarah, meaning “to teach,” and carrying the idea of “instruction.” The writer of Ps. 119 expressed great love for God’s law, because it led him to righteousness (119:97–176). In the NT, Paul praised God’s law because it pointed out his sin and made him realize his desperate need for a Savior (Rom. 7:7).

LIBERTY (Gk. exousia) #1849: The Greek term usually denotes “right,” “authority,” or even “privilege.” In certain contexts, it connotes the freedom to exercise one's right. For example, believers had the liberty—or right—to eat any food sold in the marketplace, even that offered to idols, in good conscience. But if they would be destroying a weaker believer by doing so, they should abstain (1 Cor. 8).

LIFE (Gk. zōē) #2222: This word in classical Greek was used for life in general, but in most instances in the NT the word is used to designate divine, eternal life, the life of God (Eph. 4:18). Humans are born with natural life, called psuchē in Greek, translated “soul,” “personality,” or “life.” Eternal life can be received only by believing in the One who is Himself life, Jesus Christ.

LIGHT (Heb. ’or) #216: This word refers to literal or symbolic light. In Scripture, light is associated with true knowledge and understanding (Eccl. 42:6; Job 12:25), gladness, good fortune, and goodness (Job 30:26; Ps. 97:11). Scripture describes light as the clothing of God—a vivid picture of His honor, majesty, splendor, and glory (Hab. 3:3, 4). A proper lifestyle is characterized by walking in God's light (Ps. 119:105; Prov. 4:18).

LORD (Heb. 'adonay) #113: The title
 Lord speaks of God's unlimited power and authority. On the other hand, God's personal name Yahweh (YHWH, #3068) invokes His merciful and righteous character. Its precise meaning and pronunciation is unknown. Most probably the name Yahweh is derived from the Hebrew verb for "to be," and means "I AM WHO I AM" (Ex. 3:14).

LOVE (n.) (Gk. agapē) #26: This Greek word was rarely used in Greek literature prior to the NT. When it was used, it denoted showing kindness to strangers, giving hospitality, and being charitable. the word agapē was used by the NT writers to designate a volitional love as opposed to the purely emotional kind. It is a self-sacrificial love, a kind naturally expressed by God.

MEEK (Heb. 'anav) #6035: This word may be translated humble (Ps. 34:2) or mEEK (Ps. 37:11; Matt. 5:5), deriving from a verb meaning “to be afflicted” or “to be bowed down” (Ps. 116:10). It often refers to the poor or oppressed (Amos 2:7), and signifies strength in enduring suffering without resentment. Such character is rooted in strong faith in God and His goodness and steadfast submission to His will.

MERCIFUL

 (Gk. hilaskomai) #2433:

The Greek word means “to be propitious” or “to be favorably inclined.” The term is used as a verb in Heb. 2:17, where it describes how Christ made reconciliation possible between God and humanity by His sacrifice on the Cross. In both 1 John 2:2 and 4:10, Jesus is called “the propitiation for our sins.” As our sacrifice, He appeased God. See also Luke 18:13.

MERCY (Heb. chanan) #2603: Mercy signifies an act of graciousness to someone in need, from a person of superior rank or circumstance. Most of the references to mercy in the Bible point to God as the direct agent of mercy, showing His graciousness in many ways, including the prevention of harm, the bestowal of family and possessions, and the communication of divine law (Ps. 119:29; Gen. 33:5; 2 Kin. 13:23).

God" includes Isaiah's messianic prophecy of Jesus' birth (Is. 9:6). The Scriptures state that the mighty man is not victorious because of his strength (Ps. 33:16) but because of his understanding and knowledge of the Lord (Jer. 9:23, 24).

MIND (n.)(Gk. dianoia, nous) #1271; 3563: Four Greek words account for most instances of "mind" in the NT. They are almost synonymous: understanding, thought, mind, reason. In the NT the mind was thought of as either evil or good. It may be "blinded" (2 Cor. 3:14; 4:4), "corrupt" (2 Tim. 3:8), and "reprobate" (Rom. 1:28). Humans may also have minds that are renewed (Rom. 12:2) and pure (2 Pet. 3:1).

MINISTER (n.) (Heb. sharat) #8334:

This Hebrew word means “to serve,”
 both in secular and sacred functions.
 Most of the time the ministering is described as to or before the Lord, but the Levites are also said to minister to the priests (Num. 18:2), to the people (Num. 16:9; Ezek.
 44:11), and to the tabernacle (Num.
 1:50). Ministering before the Lord occasionally involved music and song (1 Chr. 6:31, 32; 16:4, 5).

MIRACLE (Gk. sēmeion) #4592: The word John uses for signs means “a distinguishing mark” or “an indication” of the authenticity of a person or an object (John 20:30). In the Gospel of John, sēmeion means “a portent,” a miracle that points to the divine Creator. John speaks of Jesus’ miracles as signs pointing people to the truth that Jesus is the divine Son of God who came down from heaven.

MYSTERY (Gk. mustērion) #3466:

The word mystery, so often used by Paul, does not mean something incomprehensible, but something that had been kept secret and now has been disclosed. In Paul's cultural and religious milieu, the term was often used with reference to the mystery religions. In contrast, Paul uses the word to speak of a secret that has been openly revealed to all (Rom. 16:25-27).

NAME (Heb. shem) #8034: Names served as identification, often describing someone's character, position, or destiny (1 Sam. 25:25). Jacob was renamed, reflecting a change in his character (Gen. 35:10). Each name of God reveals an aspect of His nature; for this reason, His name is to be honored and revered (Ex. 20:7). By revealing His name, God indicated the intimacy of His covenantal relationship with Israel (Ex. 3:13–15).

NATION (Heb. goy) #1471: The Hebrew word goy basically means a body or group of people and is usually translated nation. The term generally refers to pagan nations (Deut. 4:38; Judg. 2:21, 22). These nations, characterized by wickedness (Deut. 9:4, 5), were considered enemies of God (Ps. 2:1; 10:16), but the OT also speaks of the grace of God extending to all people through the promised Messiah (Is. 2:2; 11:10; 42:6).

NATURAL (Gk. psuchikos) #5591: Psuchikos means “of the soul” or “natural,” as opposed to “spiritual,” or “having the Spirit.” According to Scripture, a person’s being, both soul and body, should be ruled by “the spirit,” that part of a person which is influenced by the Holy Spirit. In the “natural” person, the spirit is subservient to the natural soul, which is worldly in its motives and aims.

NEW (Gk. kainos) #2537: The Greek word for new means something having a different quality or nature. Thus the new man is the new humanity created in Christ, of which all believers partake, both individually and corporately. Paul spoke of the new man created in Christ in terms of a new unified corporate humanity (Eph. 2:14, 15), and exhort each believer to put on his new human nature.

NUMBER (v.) (Heb. manah) #4487:
 This Hebrew verb basically means “to count” or “to assign.” In Jonah, translated prepared, it signifies “to appoint” or “to ordain,” describing God’s intervention in natural events to bring about His will. By preparing the fish, the plant, and the worm, God exercised sovereignty over the plant and animal world, and over Jonah’s life, using all to teach Jonah about His great mercy (4:6–8).

OFFEND (Gk. skandalizō) #4624: The word is the verb form of a Greek noun that means “stumbling block” or “snare.” In the NT it means anything that hinders someone from doing what is right or causes one to sin or fall away from the faith. Jesus warns that stumbling blocks are sure to come our way, and condemned those who put stumbling blocks in the way of believers (Luke 17:1, 2).

PARDON (Heb. kaphar) #3722: This word means to “cover,” “appease,” or “ransom.” In Scripture it more commonly speaks of payment or sacrifice for sin. The sacrifice of an animal atoned for the offender’s sin and substituted for his life, turning aside God’s wrath. Like the lambs sacrificed to atone for the Israelites’ sins, Jesus’ life was offered as a substitute for ours, turning away God’s wrath (Rom. 3:25).

PEACE (Heb. shalom) #7965: Shalom conveys the idea of completeness and well-being. Jeremiah and Ezekiel spoke against the false prophets who promised peace (Jer. 6:14; 8:11; Ezek.
 13:10, 16). After God's judgment fell, Jeremiah proclaimed that God's thoughts toward Israel were for peace, not evil (Jer. 29:11). In two important messianic prophecies the Messiah is called the Prince of Peace and the One who would assure our peace (Is. 9:6; 53:5).

PERFECT (Gk. teleios) #5046: This word is derived from the word telos, meaning “end,” “limit,” or “fulfillment.” Paul uses telos to speak of Jesus Christ as the complete fulfillment of God’s law (Rom. 10:4). Paul uses teleios to speak of the perfection or completion of Christians (Col.1:28; 4:12). By loving others, we are made complete in and through Christ and we see God’s love “perfected” in us (1 John 4:12).

PERSECUTION (Gk. diōgmos) #1375:

Persecution is the hatred and affliction that follows the witness of God's people in a hostile world. The idea of the coming Messiah held that the suffering of God's people was part of the coming of the kingdom—evidence that a person is truly one of God's own. Jesus taught that God's prophets faced persecution (Matt. 5:10-12); His disciples should expect the same (Matt. 10:23).

PRAISE (v.) (Heb. halal) #1984: The verb halal is a common Hebrew word for praise. Most frequently halal is used to praise God. It often occurs in the imperative, expressing an exhortation or command: “Praise!” (Ps. 135:1) or “Praise Him” (Ps. 150:2). The most familiar example of the imperative is halleluyah (meaning “Praise the Lord!”; see Ps. 146:1; 150:6), a combination of halal and the divine name Yah.

PRAY (Heb. palal) #6419: The Hebrew verb translated pray can mean “to intervene,” “to interpose,” “to arbitrate,” or even “to judge.” During the dedication of the temple, Solomon modeled intercessory prayer (1 Kin. 8). According to the Lord, this type of prayer would be the catalyst for revival and restoration in the future (see Dan. 9:3–19). Jesus modeled such prayer in John 14:16.

PREDESTINATE (Gk. proorizō)

#4309: To predestine means “to mark out beforehand,” “to establish one’s boundary, or one’s limits, beforehand.” The Christian’s destiny, to be made like His Son, has been fixed by God from all eternity. From God’s perspective, we have been glorified, regenerated by the work of Jesus on the Cross. However, in this life we continue to undergo transformation to be conformed to His image (Rom. 5:29).

PRIDE (Heb. zadon) #2087: The Hebrew noun is related to a verb that means “to boil up.” In the OT, the noun has the meaning of “acting proudly or presumptuously” (Deut. 18:22; 1 Sam. 17:28). Pride incites insolence, arrogance and rebellion toward God, a “presumptuous godlessness” and brings shame (Prov. 11:2) and destruction (Ezek. 7:10–12; see Prov. 11:2; 13:10; Jer. 49:16).

PRIEST (Heb. kohen) #3548: At Mt. Sinai, God consecrated Aaron and his descendants as priests. They represented the people before God, offering sacrifices, prayers and instructing the people about their religious duties and the character of God. Jesus Christ is called our High Priest. Through His death on the Cross, all believers become priests—not to offer sacrifices but to pray, worship God, and witness to His grace and mercy.

PROPHET (Heb. nabi') #5030: The probable root word for nabi' means “to announce” or “to proclaim”
 (Jer. 19:14; Ezek. 37:4). In OT times, prophets were heralds or spokesmen who delivered a message for someone else (2 Kin. 17:13; Ezek.
 37:7). The Hebrew prophets spoke for God Himself. This is the reason the prophets introduced their messages with “thus saith the Lord of hosts” on countless occasions (Jer. 9:17).

PROPITIATION (Gk. hilastērion)

#2435: This term derives from the Greek verb hilaskomai, a word which has three meanings: “to placate” or “to appease”; “to be propitious and merciful”; “to make propitiation for someone.” As Luke 18:13 and 1 John 2:2 make clear, the NT describes God as making propitiation for us, through merciful expiation, or atonement, of the sins of believers through the death of Christ (Rom. 3:23-25).

PURE (Heb. bar) #1249: Possibly it derives from a verb that can mean to purify, to choose or select, or to make shine or polish. In Ps. 19:8, the word is associated with the eyes, suggesting radiance (compare Prov. 4:18). The term appears with other words denoting cleanness and purity (Ps. 19:7–9), especially purity of the heart (Ps. 24:4; 73:1).

PURPOSE (Gk. prothesis) #4286: The word prothesis denotes an intention or a plan; it literally means “a laying out beforehand” like a blueprint. This plan was created in God’s counsel, a translation of the Greek word boulē, which means the result of deliberate determination. But behind the plan and the counsel was not just a mastermind but a heart of love.

REDEEM (Heb. ga'al) #1350: The word refers to the responsibility of a close relative to buy back family land that had been sold because of debt (Lev. 25:25). Boaz's kindness is a picture of the kindness of God (Ruth 3:13). The Lord was Israel's Redeemer as Isaiah proclaimed (Is. 43:14) And we have a Redeemer. Jesus paid the price—His death on the Cross—to redeem us from our sins (Gal. 4:5).

REDEEMER (Heb. ga'al) #1350: The word refers to a guarantor of the family rights. He was to: buy back family property; provide an heir for a deceased brother; buy back a family member who had been sold into slavery; avenge a relative who had been murdered. God is the Redeemer or the "close relative" of Israel (Is. 60:16), and Jesus the Redeemer of all believers (1 Pet. 1:18, 19).

REDEMPTION (Gk. apolutrōsis) #629:

Lutrōsis and apolutrōsis are both translated redemption. The first word indicates the act of freeing or releasing by paying a ransom; the second, the act of buying back by paying a ransom. Christ paid the ransom with His own blood (1 Pet. 1:18, 19) freeing us from the demands of the law and its curse on sin to become children of God (Gal. 3:13; 4:5).

REGENERATION (Gk. palingenesias)

#3824: Titus 3:5 says that regeneration is characterized by or accompanied by the action of washing. Palingenesias literally means “being born again”—indicating new birth effected by the Holy Spirit (John 3:6). God saved us through one process with two aspects: the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Spirit.

REJECT (Heb. ma'as) #3988: This Hebrew verb means “to despise” or “to refuse, reject” (Job 30:1; 1 Sam. 16:10), and has reciprocal connotations when used in covenant contexts. When Judah rejected God’s law, He rejected that generation (Jer. 6:19; 7:29). As part of the New Covenant, God promised that He would never again reject His people, but would forgive their sin, remembering it no more (Jer. 31:34).

REMEMBER (Heb. zakar) #2142: The meaning is to “contemplate” or “call to mind.” When recalling the past it is translated remember (Gen. 42:9; Num. 11:5); when pertaining to the future, mention (Jer. 20:9). The psalmists ask God to remember His people and mercy (Ps. 106:4, 25:6, 7). God has not forgotten; it is a request that God would act according to His promises.

RENEW (Heb. chadash) #2318: As a verb, the term can mean “to renew” (Ps. 51:10) or “to repair” (Is. 61:4). The Bible teaches that God alone is the One who makes things new, whether a new song in the heart of the faithful (Ps. 40:3), a new phase in His plan of redemption (Is. 42:9; 43:19), a new name (Is. 62:2), or a new heavens and earth (Is. 65:17).

REPENTANCE (Gk. metanoia) #3341:

The Greek is a compound word derived from meta, meaning “after,” suggesting some type of change, and nous, meaning “mind.” The word strictly denotes “a change of mind,” and connotes remorse for sin, accompanied by a desire to turn away from sin to God, for salvation. John the Baptist and Jesus began their ministries with a call to repentance (Matt. 3:2; 4:17).

REST (n.)(Heb. shaqat) #8252: This Hebrew word implies freedom from anxiety, conflict, “to be at peace.”
 God promised His people a peaceful place to settle. Obtaining this rest depended on Israel’s complete obedience to God’s command to drive out the Canaanites (Josh.
 11:23). The NT writers also speak of the concept of rest. Christians are told that heaven will bring them rest from all earthly struggles (Heb. 4:1; Rev. 21:4).

RETURN (Heb. shub) #7725: The Hebrew word translated repent means “to turn back” or “turn around,” indicating a reversal of direction, as of the receding floodwaters (Gen. 8:3). The prophets used this word to call the Israelites to a radical, conscious rejection of their sin. Repentance implies not only sorrow but a complete turnaround: to change one’s mind about sin, receive God’s provision of salvation, and return wholeheartedly to Him.

RIGHT (Heb. yashar) #3477: Derived from a Hebrew word meaning “to be level” or “to be upright,” it connotes being just or righteous. The word is used to speak of the perfect righteousness of God (Ps. 111:7, 8), of the integrity of one’s speech (Eccl. 12:10), or the righteous quality of a person’s lifestyle (Prov. 11:3, 6). The word implies pure and faithful motives (1 Kin. 9:4).

RIGHTEOUSNESS (Heb. tsedeq)

#6664: This term denotes conformity to an ethical or moral standard. It is used most often in relation to one's standing with legal authorities, either human or divine. Righteousness, judgment, and justice are declared to be the foundation of God's throne (Ps. 89:14; 97:2). God's righteousness, associated with deliverance, is revealed in one of the divine names of God: "The Lord Our Righteousness" (Jer. 23:6; 33:16).

RIGHTLY; RIGHTLY DIVIDING (Gk. orthotomeō) #3718: This word means “to cut straight,” as to cut a straight road or keep a straight course. In the Greek OT, it depicts God’s provision of a straight path for the righteous (Prov. 3:6). Paul encouraged Timothy to handle the word of truth in a straight way, like a road that goes straight to its goal, without turning aside for useless debates (2 Tim. 2:15).

RISE (Gk. anastasis) #386: The Scriptures often speak of Christ’s resurrection with the phrase that literally means “resurrection out from among dead ones” (1 Cor. 15:12a; see Acts 17:31; 1 Pet. 1:3). When Scripture speaks of the resurrection in general, commonly the phrase is “a resurrection of dead ones” (1 Cor. 15:12b; 15:13, 42). When Christ arose, many arose with Him, united with Him in His resurrection (Rom. 6:4, 5).

RULE (v.)(Gk. brabeuō) #1018: In Col.
3:15, Paul encourages the believers to let “the peace of God rule” in their hearts. The Greek word for rule means “to act as umpire” or “to arbitrate.” The peace of God should act as our umpire when anger, envy, and other such passions arise in our hearts.

SABBATH (Heb. shabbath) #7676:
Sabbath derives from the verb meaning “to cease” or “to rest” (Gen.
2:3; Ex. 31:17). God established the Sabbath as a time to rest—He created all things in six days and rested on the seventh (Ex. 20:11).
The Sabbath not only mirrored His own actions at creation, but was also designed as a day to remember God, specifically His covenant with Israel (Ex. 31:12–18).

SACKCLOTH (Heb. saq) #8242:

Sackcloth is a rough, coarse cloth or a baglike garment made of this cloth.

In the Bible, wearing sackcloth was often used to symbolize mourning or grief over sin (Gen. 37:34; Esth. 4:1– 4; 1 Kin. 21:27). Sackcloth was often worn by prophets, perhaps to show their own brokenness in the face of their terrible message of judgment and doom (Is. 20:2; Rev. 11:3).

SACRIFICE (n.) (Heb. zebach) #2077:

Sacrifice means “to slaughter for an offering.” Sacrifices burned on the altar could be grain or animal, and animal sacrifices served one function: atonement for an individual’s or the nation’s sin (Heb.

9:22). The sin was symbolically transferred to the animal, providing a substitutionary atonement.

Ultimately, all sacrifices in the OT point forward to the final, all-sufficient sacrifice made by Christ (Is. 53; Heb. 9:10).

SALVATION (Heb. yeshu'ah) #3444:

This word describes deliverance from distress and the resultant well-being. In Psalms and Isaiah it is frequently used along with the word righteousness, indicating a connection between God's righteousness and His saving acts (Is. 45:8; 51:6; Ps. 98:2). The word expresses God's deliverance of His people (Ex. 15:2). "The God of my salvation" is more private, referring to the deliverance of an individual (Is. 12:2).

SANCTIFY (Heb. qadash) #6942: This is a verb meaning “to make holy,” “to set apart.” At Mt. Sinai, the Lord made it clear that the Israelites were being set apart as His people (19:10). Christians also have been delivered from slavery to sin. This deliverance has set us apart: we have been dedicated to our Savior and His purposes. We have been called to be His holy people (1 Pet. 1:15, 16; 2:9). ye shall therefore s yourselves • H6942 • Lev. 11:44

SAVIOUR (Gk. sōtēr) #4990: In addition to the obvious meaning, “one who provides salvation,” the word Saviour often includes the related meanings of “Deliverer,” “Protector,” or “Preserver.” In Luke 2:11, the angel announces the birth of “a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord”. Luke’s emphasis on Jesus as Saviour can be seen in the summary of Jesus’ mission in Luke 19:10: “to seek and to save that which was lost.”

SEEK (Heb. darash) #1875: This

Hebrew verb can be translated “to inquire of,” “to ask,” and “to seek,” conveying the idea of “going to see,” personally verifying something said, or “searching for.” The psalmist found help by seeking the Lord (Ps. 34:4; 77:2). On several occasions, the Israelites were encouraged to seek God by preparing their hearts for God through humble repentance (see 1 Chr. 16:11; 2 Chr. 30:19).

SERVANT (Gk. doulos) #1401: Doulos means “a bonds slave,” one who is subject to the will of his master. The Roman Empire’s economy depended on slavery, and many Christians were slaves. Paul encouraged slaves to get their freedom if they could do so within the confines of the law (1 Cor. 7:21). To express his complete submission to God’s will, Paul described himself as slave to God (Rom. 1:1; Gal. 1:10).

SHEPHERD (Heb. ra'ah) #7462: The Hebrew noun for shepherd refers to someone who feeds and tends domestic animals. David spoke of God as His shepherd because God provided, sustained, and guided him (Ps. 23). David was a true shepherd-king, responsibly leading and protecting his people (2 Sam. 5:1, 2). Jeremiah rebuked the leaders of Israel who failed in their care for the spiritual well-being of God's people (Jer. 23:1-4).

SHIELD (Heb. magen) #4043: The Hebrew noun for shield is derived from the verb ganan, which means "to defend" and signifies the protective guardianship of God. Kings are described as "shields" protecting their people (Ps. 47:9); God is depicted as a shield protecting those who trust in Him (Ps. 18:30). This imagery has its roots in the Abrahamic covenant, where God describes Himself as Abraham's shield (Gen. 15:1).

SHINE (Heb. 'or) #215: This Hebrew word means "to give light." Proverbs' author likens the life of the just to the light of the sun (Prov. 4:18). For one's eyes to be lit means that one has been revived or received wisdom (Ps. 13:3; 19:8). One day, the light of the sun and moon will be completely replaced by the light of God's glory (Is. 60:19, 20; Rev. 21:23; 22:5).

SIN (n.) (Gk. hamartia) #266: The word literally means “to miss the mark,” “to err.” In 1 John, he suggests that there is one kind of sin from which one can recover and another kind from which one can’t recover; those who abandoned the Christian community in pursuit of heretical, “antichrist” teachings were irrecoverable. Their denial of Jesus’ true person leads to unrepentant sin, which finally produces spiritual death.

SLOW; SLOW TO ANGER (Heb. 'arek; 'aph) #750; 639: The Hebrew idiom for “patient” or “slow to anger” is literally “long of nose” (Ps. 86:15; 103:8). The nose is symbolic of anger because an angry person breathes heavily or noisily. The Hebrew idiom for slow to anger is frequently applied to God to describe His great mercy and kindness (Ps. 145:8; Joel 2:13; Jon. 4:2).

SON (Heb. ben) #1121: Ben can refer to a literal son (1 Kin. 2:1), or to one's descendants. The word may also pertain to an attribute of an individual, as in Benjamin, meaning "Son of the Right Hand" (Gen. 35:18). Perhaps the most significant use of the Hebrew word is for Israel's relationship to the Lord. God Himself declared: "Israel is my son, even my firstborn" (Ex. 4:22).

SOUL (Heb. nephesh) #5315: The meaning can be reduced to the following categories: the life force, especially in connection with blood (Lev. 17:11, 14); one's immaterial being, the seat of intellect and emotion (Ps. 42:1, 2; 1 Sam. 1:10); or a person (Ps. 84:2; Ezek. 18:4). SPIRIT (Heb. ruach) #7307: The noun spirit relates to a verb meaning “to breathe” or “to blow.” The spirit of life is God’s gift to all creatures (Job 12:10; Eccl. 12:7). The endowment of God’s Holy Spirit is a gift to believers, bringing spiritual life (Ps. 143:10), power (Judg. 6:34), wisdom, understanding (Is. 11:2), and divine revelation, leading to an understanding of God’s Word and His perfect ways (Joel 2:28).

SPIRITUAL (Gk. pneumatikos)

#4152: Paul used the term charisma synonymously with the Greek term ta pneumatika—literally “the spiritual things”—because the things graciously given are spiritual gifts. These gifts were given by the Lord to various individuals in the church so as to enliven the meetings and to edify the believers in the church

STONE (Heb. 'eben) #68: Stones were used in numerous ways: for houses and fortifications; for altars (Deut. 27:5); for memorials marking the site of divine revelation (Gen. 28:18, 22); as foundation for structures. God was called the “Stone of Israel” (Gen. 49:24). Isaiah also described the Lord as “a stone of stumbling” for those who rejected Him (Is. 8:14). These images apply to Jesus Christ (Is. 28:16; 1 Pet. 2:4–8).

SUN (Heb. shemesh) #8121: The sun is a biblical symbol for righteousness (Mal. 4:2) and a title for God (Ps. 84:11). Many ancients worshiped the sun (see 2 Kin. 21:3; Ezek. 8:16), but the psalmist understood that the heavenly bodies worshiped God because He created them (Ps. 148:3). In the new creation, there will be no need of the sun because God Himself will be the everlasting light (Is. 60:19).

SUPPLICATION (Heb. techinnah)

#8467: A petition for favor or mercy, supplication is almost always directed to God. It is a petition for God to be merciful in impending distress; enemies are cited several times (Ps. 55:1-3; 119:70; Jer. 36:7). The Bible records that God heard the supplications of David (Ps. 6:9), Solomon (1 Kin. 9:3), and of wicked King Manasseh, who humbled himself before God (2 Chr. 33:12, 13).

TABERNACLE (Heb. mishkan)

#4908: Tabernacle signifies “a dwelling place.” In the OT, God’s tent functioned as an object lesson in God’s holiness and His desire to establish an intimate relationship with His people. That desire was the reason that Jesus Christ, who was Himself God, became a man. As the Son of God, Jesus revealed God the Father to us. Jesus is called Immanuel, meaning "God with us".

TEMPLE (Gk. naos) #3485: Naos refers to the building itself. Each believer's body is a naos, a sanctuary for God, and the church, Christ's body, is a spiritual temple for God (1 Cor. 3:16, 17; Eph. 2:21). It is a special privilege to be God's spiritual dwelling place, individually and corporately. The glory of God, through the Holy Spirit, dwells within every believer (John 14:16, 17) and indwells the entire church.

TEMPT (Gk. peirazō) #3985: The word means "to try" or "to make proof of;" when ascribed to God it means no more than this (Gen. 22:1). Most usage in Scripture is negative, and means to provoke to sin. The Spirit conducted Jesus into the wilderness to try His faith; but the tempter's object was to seduce Jesus away from His allegiance to God. (Matt. 4:3; 2 Cor. 5:21; Heb. 7:26).

TERRIBLE (Heb. yare') #3372: The word translated terrible comes from the Hebrew verb meaning "to fear."
 In some Bible passages, "fearing" and godly living are so closely related that they are almost synonymous (Lev. 25:17; Deut. 17:19). Thus while ordinary fear paralyzes a person, godly fear leads to submission and obedience to God. The person who properly fears God avoids evil (Job 1:1) and walks in God's ways (Ps.
 128:1).

TESTIMONY (Gk. martureō) #3140:

This word means "to bear witness."
 According to Jewish law, a testimony to oneself is no testimony at all. Truth or validity had to be established by two or three witnesses (Deut. 17:7; 19:15). Therefore, Jesus' witness to Himself would not validate His claims; He needed the witness of another. That other witness was Jesus' Father (Mark 1:11; John 5:36, 37).

references "chair," but usually to a seat of honor (Esth. 5:1). God promised in His Covenant that David's throne would be "established for ever" (2 Sam. 7:16). Although Solomon and succeeding kings of Judah sat on David's throne (1 Kin.

2:12; Jer. 22:2, 4), it is Jesus, the Son of David, who fulfills this prophecy, reigning “upon the throne of David”

forever (Is. 9:7).

TONGUE (Gk. glōssa) #1100: Glōssa means “tongue” or “language.” The believers, empowered by the Holy Spirit on the Day of Pentecost, were given the ability to speak in many languages, so that foreigners in Jerusalem could hear of the glories of God in their native tongue (Acts

2:4–11). Some members of the early church spoke in different languages as a way of praying to God (1 Cor.

TRANSFORMED (Gk. metamorphoō)

#3339: Metamorphoō means “to change form,” as does the English metamorphosis. In the NT, this word describes an inward renewal of our mind through which our inner spirit is changed into the likeness of Christ. Our regeneration is instantaneous, but our transformation is continuous. We are conformed to Christ’s image gradually as we spend time in intimate fellowship with Him (Rom. 12:1, 2; 2 Cor. 3:18).

TRANSGRESS (Heb. ma’al) #4603:

Principally, this word means “to break a trust,” often willfully but sometimes unintentionally (Lev. 5:15). Transgression is almost always against the Lord and may be committed by individuals or communities (Num. 31:16; Neh. 1:6, 7; Ezek. 14:13). In the exilic and postexilic books death, military defeat and exile are all viewed as divine judgments on Israel’s transgressions (1 Chr. 10:13; Ezek. 39:23; Dan. 9:7).

TRANSGRESSION (Heb. pesha’)

#6588: This Hebrew word can mean to “revolt,” “offend,” or “transgress” in the sense of crossing a boundary. It refers to violations of God’s law—crossing the limits that God has established. On the Day of Atonement, the priests made sacrifices for Israel’s sin, and the nation was reconciled to God. We are in rebellion against God; it is “our transgressions” that made Jesus’ sacrifice necessary.

TRANSGRESSOR (Gk. anomos) #459:

The Greek word anomos literally means “without law.” Thus it depicts the “man of rebellion” (2 Thess. 2:8). As Christ embodies righteousness, so the “man of lawlessness” embodies rebellion against God’s righteous law. With his open defiance of the sovereign Ruler of the universe, this man is the embodiment of evil and the great opponent of Christ and His kingdom (see 1 John 4:2, 3; Rev. 13:1).

TRIUMPH (Heb. ranan) #7442: This word means “to utter loudly” (Ps. 35:27; 59:16; 71:23), and is associated with many terms for joy in the OT (Ps. 32:11; Is. 49:13; Zech. 2:10).

It summons the people of God to rejoice in His blessings (Deut. 32:43; Is. 44:23). Our loud rejoicing in the Lord is based on His greatness and His goodness to us (Ps. 5:11; Lev. 9:24; Is. 12:6).

TRUTH (Heb. 'emet) #571: This term signifies truth that conforms to a standard—either to created reality or God's standards. Truth is often associated with mercy, especially God's mercy (Ps. 117:2). Truth is precious, and its absence was lamented by the prophets (Is. 59:14; Jer. 9:5; Hos. 4:1). God desires truth in the inward parts of His people (Ps. 15:2); it is the basis of a lifestyle that pleases Him (25:5).

TRY (Heb. bachan) #974: This verb means “to put to the test” (Job 23:10). God’s “trying” means the proving of individuals so their faith becomes established (Ps. 66:10–12).

Malachi challenged the Israelites to try God, a rare instance where people are encouraged to test the faithfulness of the Lord (Mal. 3:10). According to James, God tests people in order to grant them the crown of life (James 1:12–14).

UNDEFILED

 (Heb. tamim) #8549:

This word means “unblemished,” “blameless,” or “perfect.” The Lord required that offerings dedicated to Him be unblemished (Num. 6:14). The term can be used to describe a people (2 Sam. 22:24) or a course of action (Prov. 28:18) that is blameless. The Lord commanded Abraham to be blameless (Gen. 17:1). In his farewell discourse, Moses charged the children of Israel to be blameless (Deut. 18:13).

UNDERSTANDING

 (Heb. tebunah)

#8394: The root of this noun means “to distinguish” or “to discern.” The word is directly connected to the idea of wisdom in 22 passages, including Prov. 8 where understanding and wisdom are both personified. Solomon exhorted his son to apply his heart to understanding (Prov. 2:2). Ultimately all discernment is from the Lord (Prov. 2:6), whose wisdom is infinite (Ps. 147:5; Is. 40:28).

UNGODLY (Heb. beliya'ul) #1100:

This word has the basic sense of “unworthy” and “wicked.” It occurs in phrases like “a naughty person” (Prov. 6:12) and “children of belial” (2 Chr. 13:7). Worthless people are said to dig up evil (Prov. 16:27) and to plot wickedness (Nah. 1:11). This word became a proper name for Satan during the intertestamental period; thus Paul asked, “What concord hast Christ with Belial?” (2 Cor. 6:15).

UPRIGHT (Heb. meshar) #4339:

The root means “to be smooth, straight, level.” Frequently, the word for upright appears in legal contexts with “righteousness” and “judgment,” indicating a fair or impartial hearing (Ps. 9:8; 96:10; Is. 45:19). Proverbs often associates right things with wisdom (Prov. 8:6; 23:15, 16). God takes pleasure in equity; thus it is one of the bases of a righteous lifestyle (2:9; 1 Chr. 29:17; Is. 26:7).

V

VAIN (Gk. mataios) #3152: Mataios means “pointless” and “purposeless.”
 The NT writers used it to depict the meaninglessness that pervades the thought life of fallen mankind.
 The “thoughts of the wise” are characterized as futile (1 Cor.
 3:20) because they lack divine insight; they produce a life of purposelessness and ineffectiveness.
 Salvation from such futility comes from the indwelling Spirit of Christ in believers (see Rom. 8:10, 11, 26, 27).

VANITY (Heb. hebel) #1892: This word basically means “vapor” or “breath.”
 such as the rapidly vanishing vapor of one’s warm breath in cool, crisp air. The Preacher described worldly pursuits—such as wealth, honor, fame, and various pleasures—as similar to desperately grasping at air (Eccl. 2:17). According to him, all of life is vanity unless one recognizes that everything is from the hand of God (Eccl. 2:24–26).

VIRTUE (Gk. aretē) #703: A rare

word in the NT, it denotes moral excellence (Phil. 4:8). Peter uses the word to describe the excellent nature or “excellencies” of God (1 Pet. 2:9 where the word is translated praises). Virtue is a quality that comes from God. Only those who are given divine power can be morally excellent on this earth (2 Pet. 1:3).

VISION (Heb. chazon) #2377: The Hebrew word for a dream or vision derives from a verb meaning “to see.” Dreams and visions were recognized by the ancients as revelations from the gods, or from God Himself (Is. 1:1). The author of Proverbs insists that revelation from God is essential to the well-being of a society. Without God’s revelation, the foundation of society crumbles (Prov. 29:18).

WAIT (Heb. chakah) #2442: In

expectation by God's people that He will intervene on their behalf. They waited for answers to prayer (Ps. 25:5), for the Holy Spirit's coming (Acts 1:4), for salvation (Gen. 49:18), and the Messiah's coming to bring salvation and to establish His kingdom on earth (Ps. 37:34; Luke 12:36; Rom. 8:23; 1 Thess. 1:10).

WALK (Heb. halak) #1980: Walk can mean, literally, to move at a pace slower than a run or, figuratively, one's conduct of life. One either conducts his life as a Christian or as a non-Christian (Rom. 8:4). The believer can walk "in darkness" or "in the light," and is urged to choose the latter; only such a path is "worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called" (Eph. 4:1).

WASH (Heb. rachats) #7364: The Law demanded ritual washing. The Israelites washed their hands often and immersed their bodies before entering the temple courts. Foot washing was provided to visitors by a household servant. By washing the disciples' feet, Jesus exemplified a servant attitude (John 13:3–17). His

spiritual purification of believers that the ritual washing was unable to achieve (Eph. 5:25–27; Titus 3:5).

WATCH (v.) (Heb. tsaphah) #6822:

This noun is derived from the verb meaning “to watch in anticipation,” which is used to describe the actions of individuals waiting in ambush as they watch for their prey (Ps. 37:32). Watchmen were stationed on the towers of a city and were responsible for spotting approaching armies and sounding the alarm to warn the city (1 Sam. 14:16).

WISDOM (Heb. chokmah) #2451: The most common use of chokmah is in reference to wisdom in daily living. This is the sense of the word as it is used throughout Proverbs, which teaches that true wisdom involves not only intelligence but also moral integrity (Prov. 8:7–9). The source of wisdom is God, who alone can provide men and women with the wisdom to live righteously (Prov. 2:6; Job 11:6).

WORD (Heb. dabar) #1697: This

Hebrew word is derived from the verb “to speak,” and it signifies the word or thing spoken. “Word of the Lord” is used by the prophets at the beginning of a divine message (see Jer. 1:13). In Scripture, the word of revelation is associated with prophets (26:5), just as wisdom is associated with wise men and the law with priests (Jer. 18:18).

WORKMANSHIP (Gk. poiēma)

#4161: The word literally means “a thing made”; it comes into English as poem. The word indicates a handiwork, a masterpiece. God’s church is His “poem,” His masterpiece, His workmanship, just as all creation is (Ps. 19:1; Rom. 1:20). As He is the Author of His handiwork, He should get all the credit (see Ps. 19:1–6).

WORSHIP (Heb. shachah) #7812: The most common Hebrew word for worship means “to cause oneself to lie prostrate.” In ancient times, people would bow before a person of higher status or a king to express complete submission to his rule. Following the example of the ancient people of faith, true Christian worship must express more than love for God, it must also express submission to His will.

WRATH (Gk. orgē) #3709: God’s wrath is His holy indignation—His anger against sin. The Bible declares that all people are “by nature the children of wrath” (Eph. 2:3) and that “the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men” (Rom.

1:18). The magnitude of God’s love is manifested in the Cross, where God’s only Son experienced His Father’s wrath on our behalf.
